EUROPE SIGNS DAWES PACT

SIMPLE, KINDLY HOME COMING FOR COOLIDGES

Father Kisses Son as Hollyhocks Nod.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Plymouth, Vt., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Calvin Coolidge came home today. A few minutes before 8 o'clock this morning a big, shining automobile that had sped in a few minutes up the steep Notch road, stopped in front of one of the three houses in Plymouth.

No sidewalk or curbing. Just a carpet of grass. Hollyhocks bending to the breeze in the wake of the powerful car, gave the first salutation.

No band. No flags. At the general store of Miss Florence Crilly, which is postoffice and center of knowledge, a few neighbors peeked around the edge of the porch.

Strokes in Bucolic Picture.

A farmer came down the road driving his cows to pasture—ten or twelve sleek, black and white animals. A dog and a boy aided in interfering with the traffic.

A skittish colt was driven to the white house across the street, causing more trouble for the first traffic officer Plymouth ever had. He succeeded in frightening the colt worse than the presidential car did.

A lovely morning, very quiet here, with the mist just lifting from the rain-washed meadows of green that reached on all sides into higher, sunlit pastures, groves of pine and maple, the scowling forests of the Green mountains.

[illegible] Davis had his homecoming a week ago.

"So-Cal has a little advantage in altitude," observed the Coolidge historian, Michael Hennessy.

Father Greets His Son.

Col. John C. Coolidge was on the front steps waiting to welcome his son and Mrs. Coolidge. For days he had been "puttering around," straightening up things, adding a touch of paint here and there, mending the front porch step which the son is said to have cautioned him about when he left home for the White House a year ago.

It was all as neat as a pin. Miss Aurora Pierce, the colonel's housekeeper, was watering geraniums in the front window, which was curtainless. With the utmost simplicity and naturalness, the President alighted from his automobile, grasped his father's hand, kissed him.

Praises Her Baby's Grave.

"Hello father," came from Mrs. Coolidge. Her voice was cheerful, but her face was that of one in pain, for she had just passed the tiny cemetery by the roadside where the body of Calvin Jr. lies.

Next, Grandfather Coolidge kissed his grandson, John, a tall handsome boy who had been the first of the presidential party to leave the train at London some time in the damp dawn.

Dick Jervis, chief of the White House secret service, was the only other occupant of the car. A second car closely following spilled a half dozen more operatives who have the responsibility for the President's safety.

Headline to Guard Family.

In a few minutes, with the aid of the county deputy sheriffs, they had established a "deadline."

The Coolidge home, birthplace of four generations, lies on a side road about two city blocks from the main brick road where the tourists ride, and it is the intention of the secret service to keep every one off the side road.

But the house, a low, white, gabled structure, rambling into woodshed, where Calvin received the parental whaling as a boy, and the barn where the season's hay is all stowed away, is easy vision from the general store. Mr. Coolidge must keep inside the house or he will have no more privacy than his neighbors can maintain quiet upon.

A little group stood and chatted on the lawn for a few minutes. The President moved down to the big maple and stood deeply till bedroom windows and examined the cement filling which had been putting in a rotted part of the trunk when he was called in haste to take the oath of office.

The room is a sort of shrine already. The chair in which the President sat is roped with a cross, as there is another just like it in the room, and Col. Coolidge believes in truth, even to [illegible].

The Bible and the old glass oil lamp are still on the table, and the horse hair and walnut furniture is in the same position.

ACTRESS FOUND DEAD IN BATH BY HER MAID

New York, Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Mary Warnock, 26 years old, of Independence, Mo., known on the stage as Mary Julian, a chorus girl in the Ziegfeld Follies, was found dead in the bath tub of her apartment in the Pomander Walk, late today.

The young woman was undressed and was lying in six inches of water with her face above the water. Dr. Blake, who was called, told the police he found bruises on her body.

Detectives questioned the maid who told them that Miss Julian was preparing to take a bath when she entered the apartment at five minutes to four. At that hour the young woman should have been on the stage ready to go on in the matinee performance.

The maid told detectives that she heard a noise and went in to the bath room. The tub was filling and Miss Julian was in the tub. The maid shut off the water and when she could not rouse Miss Julian called a policeman.

TRACE ROMANCE OF LOST GIRL

Relatives Renew Search for Miss Napieralski.

With a book under her arm Miss Mary S. Napieralski, 24 year old daughter of a wealthy ore and iron operator, stepped out into the harrying streams of humans which make the Northwestern station a hectic crossroads where east meets west and the suburbanite does his daily impassioned sprint.

MISS MARY S. NAPIERALSKI. [Russell Photo.]

That was on Wednesday morning, when the young woman alighted from a train which bore her and her father, Stephen J. Napieralski, from their home in Des Plaines to the big gray city on the lake.

"Good-by, dad," she called cheerily as she plunged into one of the eddying streams, and since then Mary Napieralski has dropped completely out of her relatives' lives.

Search in Vain.

Frantic inquiries have availed nothing. A search of all the hospitals in the city, on the supposition that she may have been picked up injured, revealed no trace of the missing girl. The police and the deputies of Sheriff Hoffman, to whom Mr. Napieralski appealed, have found no one that even resembles the bobbed haired girl with the dreamy blue eyes and the quiet taste for Victorian novels of love and romance.

"That explains it—the novels," was the theory advanced last night. "Miss Napieralski is disappointed in love, and, like the heroines of those nineteenth century books, has gone away to brood over her sorrow among strangers."

Wore Platinum Ring.

On the young woman's engagement finger when she vanished was a platinum ring set with diamonds and sapphires and engraved with this legend: "From E. R. to M. N." It had been given to her by Edward Rupinski, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania who is now a student architect with the firm of Rapp & Rapp.

They had been engaged for two years and the wedding was to take place some time this fall. But of recent weeks, it was reported, Rupinski had not been calling on his fiancée with his former regularity. There were growing infernals between his visits, it is said. But Miss Napieralski spoke nothing about this. Victorian heroines were not like that.

Today the kindly, gray haired woman in charge of the Des Plaines public library is going through the records to find the title of the book which Miss Napieralski took out last Monday.

Real estate sales will be found on Page 24, Part 3.

ARMORED CARS TO GUARD MAIL FROM ROBBERS

New York, Aug. 16.—In an effort to prevent railway mail robberies, the United States postoffice department, it was learned today, has contracted for the building of 2,000 specially designed cars, armored so heavily and equipped with such protective devices as to defeat attacks by armed desperadoes.

A department official said one of the cars has been delivered to the railroad yards at Melrose, N. Y., and if it meets the tests to which it will be subjected the others will be rushed to completion.

CHARGES CROWE HAD NO RIGHT TO QUIZ YOUTHS

Darrow Claims State Ignored Rights.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

Clarence Darrow insisted aggressively. And Dr. Harold Douglas Singer refused to yield; refused tenaciously.

Both of them, the defense attorney and the alienist for the state, used the same weapon—the black bound volume entitled "Insanity and Law," written by Dr. Singer and Dr. William O. Krohn. Darrow used it as a lance. Singer employed it as a shield with which to protect himself from the attack.

It was a great battle.

The greatest since Chief Justice John R. Caverly, some twenty-two days ago, began to hear the case of Nathan F. Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb, who have plead guilty to the murder of Robert Franks.

Darrow Is Aggressive.

Mr. Darrow, on cross-examination of the Chicago psychiatrist, who, day before yesterday, testified to the mental health of the two youths, was mighty aggressive yesterday as he sent out these four shafts:

1. Dr. Singer's examination of Leopold and Loeb, made in State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe's office, Monday, June 2, after they had been taken out of the state's attorney's custody and placed in the hands of the sheriff, was in direct violation of their constitutional rights.

2. In addition to being unconstitu-

"You might just as well have done it over the telephone," the attorney hazarded.

3. The court, over the objection of Mr. Crowe, permitted Mr. Darrow to cross-examine on a book of psychiatry written by Dr. Bernard Hart of Cambridge university, England.

4. The lawyer got to the doctor to admit that a split personality [schizophrenic personality] develops most easily into psychosis [mental disease] during the period of adolescence and with persons of a high grade of intelligence.

Puts Poison on Dart.

The poison on this last dart was put on the tip by Mr. Darrow, when he read, substantially that opinion from page 56 of Dr. Singer's own book.

On the other hand, the doctor, insisting through the tumult of yelled questions and answers back and forth that "it is much more important for you to understand me than for me to understand you," clung to his previously announced position. It, too, had four points.

1. Nothing in the facts given in the testimony of the defense alienists—Dr. William A. White, Dr. William Healy, Dr. Bernard Glueck, Dr. Harold S. Hulbert—give any indication of mental disease.

2. While unable to define precisely a "normal" mind, Dr. Singer insisted that the minds of Nate and Dick fell well within the range of normal variation.

3. The alienist doggedly maintained that a split personality is a common enough common denominator among normal mankind.

4. Dr. Singer admitted, when questioned on page 63 of his book, that schizophrenic personalities who develop psychosis often commit acts of violence "apparently without motive," and later are "devoid of remorse." But he declared this had no reference to the Franks murder, which had been planned six months, and he insisted that this "plan went with a motive" and was largely the motive.

Motive Strongest Point.

It was Dr. Singer's strongest point of the morning, and he was explaining it just as court adjourned yesterday noon. He is slated to keep on explaining it when court convenes tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. The defense's biggest point, it would seem, was made just as court opened yesterday morning, when Mr. Darrow attacked the state examination of Leopold and Loeb June 2 as "a violation of constitutional rights."

Dramatically, it wasn't nearly as good "theater" as some of the more spectacular moments yesterday. But it may, very conceivably, enter the final argument with considerable force.

Early in yesterday's session, then Mr. Darrow brought out that a writ for habeas corpus had issued and that the two youths had been taken out of the custody of the state's attorney and had been remanded to the custody of the sheriff. And he brought out that, in such a situation, no defense lawyer wants his client to talk to a state psychiatrist.

Dr. Singer declared that he had ex-

One Killed; 20 Hurt in Crash of Street Cars

One man was killed and some twenty other persons injured shortly after 6 o'clock last night when a north bound Western avenue car rammed an east bound 25th street car at the intersection of those two thoroughfares.

E. STRASSER

Faulty air brakes which failed to function were blamed for the accident by the motorman of the Western avenue car, the entire front platform of which was demolished. The east bound trolley, struck in the middle, almost turned over, while battered passengers scrambled for the exits amid showers of glass and splintered wood.

Mechanic Is Killed.

E. Strasser, 828 West 34th street, a mechanic employed in the Wabash roundhouse at 79th street and Western avenue, was the man killed. He was standing on the front platform of the Western avenue car beside Motorman Joseph Konetski when he was pinned in the wreckage and crushed to death.

Konetski and Theodore Detrow, 2111 Park avenue, who was also on the platform, narrowly escaped a similar fate. Both were imprisoned in the debris and dragged out by rescuers.

Others among the more seriously injured were:

MRS. JULIA WAAGE, 1013 South Saint Louis avenue.

ARTHUR WAAGE, her husband.

VICTOR GOUIN, 2644 South Homan avenue.

JOSEPH LABENSKY, 2720 W. 37th street.

EDWARD CAHN, 4347 Fremont street.

CONLEY, Jackson, 4S at 3744 South Honore street.

FRANK ZABLOSKI, 3039 West 38th place.

ALEX SUTTERKO, 3748 Lake Park avenue.

MAEL HANLEY, 3563 Wallace street.

DUNCAN McFADYEN, 3722 Lowe avenue.

HENRY YOUNG, retired, 621 East 37th street.

Give First Aid.

While police ambulances were taking the more seriously injured to St. Anthony's hospital, the others were given first aid in the office of Dr. O. L. Turner, 3501 Western boulevard, which was converted into an emergency hospital. Dr. W. J. Davidson, a dentist, and his wife assisted the surgeon in binding the wounds of the injured.

"I refused to drive cars out of the barn yesterday because the brakes were no good," Konetski, who lives at 4843 South Racine avenue, told the doctor. "I just took that car at Archer avenue and I knew the brakes were bad but I thought they'd hold a little bit. The car never slackened speed at all. I kept clanging the bell as a warning to the other motorman but he didn't pay any attention."

Crews Are Held.

The crews of both cars were taken into custody by the Brighton park police and questioned by Acting Lieut. H. J. Otten, who ordered them held pending an inquest. W. J. Fahey, 5714 South Morgan street, was the conductor on the Western avenue car. The crew of the other trolley were John B. McNulty, 2320 Lock street, motorman, and Jacob H. Harms, 4832 South Richmond street, conductor.

New York, Aug. 16.—[United Press.]—"I'm thoroughly domesticated," said Irene Castle McLaughlin, former dance and movie star, as she stepped from the French liner Paris today on her return from a two months' visit in Europe.

"I'm through with the stage and screen forever," she added, turning to greet her husband, Frederick McLaughlin of Chicago. She will soon become a mother.

GERMANS AND ALLIES AGREE TO 'REAL PEACE'

French Quit Ruhr Aug. 15, 1925.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The pact of London was signed tonight at 8:45 o'clock by all the delegates except the Serbian, who at the last moment could not be found. His signature will be appended later.

All the delegates signed the protocol, Prime Minister MacDonald signing first, with Premier Herriot, Premier Theunis, Chancellor Marx, and the smaller powers following. The United States representatives did not sign, as they were not full delegates.

Sign Annexes Aug. 30.

Four annexes were only initialled, but it is agreed in the protocol that all powers will assemble in London on Aug. 30 to sign the annexes as now drawn without change. This is merely a formality to comply with the wishes of Premier Herriot and Chancellor Marx, so they can get the formal consent of their parliaments.

[illegible] of the allied delegates [illegible] began at 6 p. m. and merged into a plenary session on the arrival of the Germans at 6:30. A few minor details were disposed of and the documents were carefully checked word by word by all the delegates, after which an hour was spent speechmaking.

Mr. MacDonald paid high tribute to the industry and earnestness of the delegates and congratulated them on the successful accomplishment of the work they had come to London to do, and which now all must unite in working to make fruitful for good.

"First Real Peace Treaty."

"Maybe we have not been able to eliminate as thoroughly as we wished the fears and suspicions which flourished like weeds in Europe and the world, but those that remain are only the end of the crop, which will soon wither and die," he said.

"I believe we have given Europe something better than a formal agreement drafted by lawyers and printed on paper. We are now offering the first really negotiated agreement since the war. Every party here represented is morally bound to carry out the agreement because it is not the result of an ultimatum.

"We have tried to meet each other as far as public opinion in our various countries allowed. This may be regarded as the first peace treaty, because at last we have turned our backs on the terrible years of war and war mentality. I cannot refrain from mentioning the position of the German ministers. I am only too well aware of the difficulties they face. The burdens imposed on them are heavy, and their people may not be too happy with the result, but I should like to impress on the German people that we have created organs of arbitration through which they are assured fair play.

National Isolation Ended.

"The time of national isolation is ended and the time of exchange of views and reasonable dealing with experience has begun. This is a great gain not only for Germany, but for all of us. There still is the question of interallied debts, which I propose be dealt with according to the decisions made in Paris on the questions of disarmament and national security, the question of composition and authority of the league of nations, and the question of doing justice by arbitration. None are simple problems and all require international discussion and agreement on terms of absolute equality."

Premier Herriot of France, Ambassador Frank B. Kellogg, Premier Theunis of Belgium, Sig. di Stefani, finance minister of Italy, and Ambassador Hayashi of Japan all thanked Mr. MacDonald and congratulated their colleagues. Ambassador Kellogg told The Tribune as he came out that he was perfectly satisfied with the result and was sure it would be fruitful and good. Premier Herriot declared:

"What can I say but that I am very contented?"

Earlier in the day the Germans in-sued a statement that they were signing under force majeure, but thought it would be possible to secure the consent of the reichstag for the necessary legislation.

The matter is now up to the bankers, who have to provide a $200,000,000 loan on which the Dawes plan depends. The reparations commission has agreed to release ample German assets to provide security, and the French have agreed to abstain from further adventures which might imperil the security of the loan and to get out of the Ruhr by Aug. 15, 1925.

Allies to Aid Loan.

The following resolution was passed at the interallied plenary session of the conference:

"It is agreed that the putting into execution of the Dawes scheme and the arrangements for that purpose embodied in the present agreement depend on the issue of a loan of 800,000,000 gold marks for the purpose of the plan and are conditional on said issue. The allied governments are desirous that this loan should successfully be raised, and contemplating that the loan shall be a first lien on security pledged thereto will write the central banks in their respective countries requesting them to use their good offices to facilitate placing the loan."

Gives Germans Free Market.

The resolution was agreed to and then the American delegates made the following statement:

"We understand that the resolution does not restrain the German government of its own selection."

The conference agreed to this statement. This means that the conference wishes to make it clear that no effort will be made to restrict the German government in its choice of markets for placing the loan, but that the Germans will have perfect liberty to place the loan wherever they feel that they can secure the most favorable terms.

A cable was received from Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes congratulating the conference on the successful issue, and the conference cabled its thanks to Gen. Dawes.

Col. James A. Logan Jr., America's observer with the reparations commission, tonight stated that in his opinion the London pact is the first real peace treaty since the war and that he was especially impressed with and conciliation developed during the discussions.

Month of Negotiations.

It has taken a month of hard negotiations to achieve today's result, nearly three weeks of which was occupied by the allies in arriving at an agreement among themselves, and the last period in coming to an agreement with the Germans.

The lion's share of credit for achieving such successful results is due to the untiring efforts of the two American delegates, Ambassador Kellogg and Col. Logan, and the British prime minister, Mr. MacDonald, who labored unceasingly in the cause of peace and conciliation. Much credit is due to the Germans, who found themselves confronted with a resurgeance of French chauvinism, when they had been led to expect a disposition toward conciliation.

Were Down Frenchy.

The first weeks of the conference, in fact, were a struggle of the allies to wear the French down to something like a reasonable frame of mind, and the last phase of the struggle was to keep them in that frame of mind. Premier Herriot himself, it is believed, wished to meet the Germans on equal terms of give and take, but he was under pressure all the time by the nationalist opinion at home, which he dared not offend.

The last day has been one of the hardest work of all. When the German delegates left the French headquarters in the Hyde Park hotel last night after coming to an agreement on the Ruhr evacuation they returned to the Ritz hotel and began to work and continued all night on an interchange of notes.

The last one was sent at 4 o'clock this morning, and Premier Herriot was awakened from his sleep to read it. In this they put on paper the theory of agreement to accept the French terms.

Plenary Session Called.

Eleven o'clock this morning saw the French, Belgians, and Germans in conference at 10 Downing street, which lasted until 3 o'clock, when a meeting of the "big fourteen" was assembled to learn that an agreement on the Ruhr had been reached and they were free to put the finishing touches on the work of the conference itself. This was done in a couple of hours, and at 6 o'clock a general meeting of the allied delegates in the foreign office was called, which merged into a plenary session, at which the Germans were present, after which the various protocols were signed.

There were five of these documents. One was an agreement between the reparations commission and the Germans, which already had been signed by the Germans and the allies but was reinitialed by the delegates. Then the protocol of the Dawes plan, with three annexes, setting forth the various steps necessary to bring it into force. The contents of these annexes have been already given in THE TRIBUNE in the shape of committee reports.

In all these documents the dates have been calculated on the basis of Aug. 15 as the date when the reichstag passed the necessary legislation. This date, of course, will have to be put back and still others to follow. It is expected the basic date now will be Aug. 30.

French Quit Ruhr in Year.

The matter of the evacuation of the Ruhr is handled in several other documents. The first was a letter from the French and Polish governments to the German government stating their legal view of the occupation of the Ruhr and promising evacuation in one year from Aug. 15.

The second was a letter from the German chancellor to the French and Belgians taking note of the French declaration stating the German point of view of the legality of the occupation was unaltered in any respect and stating that Germany still considers the occupation illegal and expects it to be finished at an earlier date.

Then there was a letter from the French and Belgians stating that as an example of their good will they are prepared to withdraw the troops one day after the ratification of the Dawes report by the French and German parliaments not only from the towns of Dortmund but also from the whole district, including the towns of Lissain, Hoerde, and all those towns and ports mentioned previously (all outside of the Ruhr and not in the original occupied territory). There is also a short reply from Chancellor Marx acknowledging these concessions.

British Urge Early Evacuation.

The British government also issued a statement expressing hope for a speedy evacuation of the Ruhr, and the French and Belgian premiers' statement declaring it was obvious that the whole sanctions territory also would be evacuated as soon as the French troops leave the Ruhr. This includes Duesseldorff, Duisberg, and Ruhrort. The English premier also signifies his assent to this course.

Kellogg Sees Dawn of Era of Amity in Dawes Pact

LONDON, Aug. 16.—[By the Associated Press.]—American Ambassador Kellogg, speaking at the international conference this evening just before the German and allied delegates initialed the agreements for the execution of the Dawes plan, said, addressing Prime Minister MacDonald:

FRANK B. KELLOGG

"Mr. President, I cannot too highly compliment the delegates of all nations represented at this great international conference upon their firmness, ability, and broadminded statesmanship which has brought the conference to a successful consummation. It was evident from the beginning that you came here with the firm determination to settle most of the difficult problems which in times of peace have confronted the leading nations of Europe—I might say of the world.

Only Guarantee of Peace.

"I believe it was evident to statesmen of all the world that a settlement of the reparations, adjustment of national finances and the rehabilitation of Germany lay at the foundation of the future prosperity of Europe. A permanent settlement on the basis of fairness and justice to all nations engaged in the war was the only sure guarantee of peace. It was with this view that the reparations commission, representing the allied countries, appointed the Dawes committee to suggest a plan for such settlement.

"As I have said before, they were all able, highminded and patriotic men with wide public experience and knowledge of financial and economic conditions. I believe more than four weeks of careful study and intercourse between the delegates has demonstrated that the Dawes report was the greatest piece of constructive work of modern times, and I wish, on behalf of my country, to extend to Gen. Dawes and his associates my sincere congratulations.

Has Support of College.

"From the very beginning when an expert committee was proposed, to the consummation of your work, this plan has had the hearty and loyal support of the President of the United States and the American people. Complicated and difficult as the problems were, that report has stood the test of the most careful scrutiny and has been the basis of this settlement, for it was founded on sound ecocomic, social and, I might add, political principles which have been evolved by the experience of the ages.

"I do not for a moment minimize the difficulties which have confronted this conference, and, but for your ability, your patience and your faith in the people of your various countries, it could not have succeeded. Disagreements there have been, growing out of difficult conditions, political and economic, in different countries. But with the determination to succeed, a confidence which never waivered, and the sincere desire of accommodation of differences, you have brought this conference to a successful issue.

Dawning of New Day.

"I may be too much of an optimist, but I believe this settlement is the dawning of a new day, the hope of millions of people, the revival of industry and prosperity so necessary to the happiness and progress of mankind. Animosities engendered by the war cannot continue. Nations, as individuals, must live in amity, and this conference is the beginning of the harmony which presages the brighter future."

FRANCE SATISFIED

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Aug. 16. — The turn of events in London satisfies every shade of French opinion except the extreme nationalists today. The ministerial press and Premier Herriot's friends here believe he has made every concession possible within the limits of France's ability without sacrificing anything essential.

The nationalist press—notably the Poincarist Liberte and the royalist Action Francaise—attack the premier violently, call him "Germany's man," and assert his campaign fund was filled by English and American pro-German financiers.

It appears that this section of the political world is negligible, however, and a vote of confidence on M. Herriot's record at London is certain to be given according to an experienced politician of the Herriot party who spoke to THE TRIBUNE correspondent today.

The cabinet decided tonight to call parliament into session Thursday for action on the Dawes conference.

GERMANS WORRIED

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—Wilhelmstrasse feels that the future fulfillment of the Dawes plan by Germany hinges on the slightest technicality. A two-thirds vote of the reichstag is necessary to legalize the laws provided for in the Dawes plan and the London agreements, which were signed tonight.

This may prove a stumbling block to the government's best intentions, since the government can reckon on a plain majority, but needs the support of the big groups of nationalists for a two-thirds vote. This vote is necessary, according to the German republican constitution, because in the fulfillment of the Dawes plan the German government will have to change the constitution, and the constitution cannot be changed without a two-thirds vote of the reichstag.

Nationalists Threaten Opposition.

The Dawes law on railroads is the main cause of difficulty. The government still is endeavoring to find ways and means of altering the railroad law so that no change in the German constitution will be necessary, but Wilhelmstrasse tonight said it "feared their hopes were in vain."

The German nationalists are convinced that they will be able to exploit the two-thirds majority clause as a stumbling block to the government's plans to fulfill the Dawes proposals.

At a meeting in Weimar today the supernationalists announced plans for their onslaught on the Marx-Stresemann government, which dared sign the compromise in London. Gen. von Ludendorff's fiery words were surpassed by Count Reventlow's oratory. His threats included an attack on the "foreign commissaries who will come to Germany to exploit the country under the Dawes plan. We shall consider them violators of the German independence and refuse to guarantee their bodily safety."

Almost 2,000,000 Germans voted for the Ludendorff-Reventlow party.

Liberals Approve Agreement.

The democratic papers, as well as those of the Center and German People's party express the opinion that if the government has "full fledged guarantees from Premier Herriot, as well as America, Great Britain, and Italy, that the Ruhr will be evacuated next year the government had the right to accept the compromise. We consider a protracted occupation of the Ruhr an injustice, but we are the weakest nation in the world."

E. A. BANCROFT, CHICAGO, CHOSEN ENVOY TO JAPAN

Lawyer and Author—A Native of Illinois.

[Copyright: 1924: Foreign Affairs News and Chicago Tribune.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Edgar Addison Bancroft, prominent lawyer of Chicago, has been selected for the post of American ambassador to Japan.

EDGAR A. BANCROFT.

Mr. Bancroft, who is a brother of Frederick Bancroft, the historian; is a member of the law firm of Scott, Bancroft, Martin & MacLeish of Chicago. He is a native of Galesburg, Ill., and a graduate of Knox college and the Columbia law school.

Born in Galesburg in 1857, after completing his studies he practiced law in that city, later going to Chicago, where he became solicitor of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railway and later served in the same capacity with the Chicago & Western Indiana. From 1907 until 1920 he was general counsel of the International Harvester company.

Author of Several Books.

Mr. Bancroft is the author of "The Chicago Strike of 1894-'95," "The Moral Sentiment of the People," "The Foundation of National Greatness" and "The Destruction or Regulation of Trusts."

In accepting the Tokio post Mr. Bancroft will fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Cyrus Woods, who withdrew from the post shortly after the passage of the new immigration law, containing exclusion clauses directed against Japanese immigrants.

Mr. Woods gave as his reasons for resigning illness in his family and personal affairs, although it was commonly reported he resigned because of the passage of the exclusion law.

Following the resignation of Woods, the United States government is understood to have made informal inquiries of the Japanese government as to the acceptability for the Tokio post of Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, now American minister to China.

Not Well Liked By Japan.

It is stated, however, that Dr. Schurman was found to be persona non grata with the Japanese government, and that in view of this attitude the suggestion of the American government was withdrawn.

Japanese opposition to Dr. Schurman was said to be based on the activities of the minister at Peking, particularly in connection with the so-called Mitsui wireless deal which involved a conflict between the interests of that Japanese company and the Federal Telegraph company of the United States over a concession to erect wireless stations in China.

JURY FINDS BOYS LOCKED SELVES IN DEATH TRUNK

A coroner's jury yesterday dismissed the tentative theory that Rose Dumele, 3, might have accidentally locked her brother, Peter, 5, and cousin, Frank Hoellich, 13, in a trunk in which they were later found suffocated. The jury, after Deputy Coroner A. Herman had demonstrated that merely slamming the lid of the trunk caused the hasps to lock it, found that the lads had accidentally signed their death warrant while playfully allowing the lid to close on them. Walter Dumele, 1920 Burling street, the father, brought the trunk, which he had purchased in Hungary years ago, to the jury room and the test followed.

DAWES PLEASED BUT SILENT AS EUROPE ADOPTS HIS PLAN

News from London of the signing of the allied German agreement to carry out the Dawes plan was received with evident pleasure, but without public comment, by Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes, Republican vice presidential nominee, who as head of the American experts drew the plan for reparations settlement.

Not since his return from Europe after the plan was completed and submitted to the participating governments has Gen. Dawes deviated from his policy of silence on his work.

After his nomination for Vice President he lapsed into a silence on all public questions and does not intend to break it until after his acceptance speech next Tuesday.

Dawes Cables Marx.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—[By the Associated Press.]—The German chancellor tonight received a cablegram from Brig. Gen. Dawes, who also sent messages to the conference and many of the leading delegates. His message to Dr. Marx said:

"May I offer my congratulations on the outcome of the conference."

Chancellor Marx replied:

"Many thanks for your congratulations. I hope that the future developments may justify the successful outcome of the conference."

MEXICAN BANDITS KILL 20 IN TRAIL RAID; OTHERS DIE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, Aug. 16.—The German legation today ordered an inquiry into a raid on a train near Jalapa, yesterday in which a number of Germans were reported killed. Seven of the alleged bandits were arrested today and executed.

A band of 100 men, supposedly under Gen. Guadalupe Sanches, wrecked the engine of the train, which was en route from Mexico City to Vera Cruz, by putting obstacles on the track. Then they fired point blank into a Pullman car, in which were a number of foreigners, mostly Germans, killing about twenty and wounding a score more. The bandits robbed everyone on the train.

TESTS SHOW FORD CAN RUN 60 MILES ON GALLON OF GAS.

The amazing fact that a Ford can run 60 miles on one gallon of gasoline was recently brought to light through tests conducted by America's foremost engineers. Great strides have already been made in this direction by the recent invention of a simple attachment which can be installed in a few minutes without any alterations to motor. A. C. Winterburn made 41.4 miles on one gallon of gasoline after this device was attached. B. O. Weeks, famous aviator and inventor, wants agents and will send sample for trial. MAIN ST. FINDS N. Y. DANCING IS FAST BUT MORAL Masters Make a Tour of the Village.

New York, Aug. 16.—Dancing masters from Main street, here for the annual convention of the international association, after a tour of the cabarets of Greenwich Village, have found the habitues "terpsichorsally speaking, not so bad as they're painted."

The tour, made last night, was in the nature of an investigation by a committee of the International Association of Masters of Dancing.

Wide Range of Observation.

It included a study of dance styles, music, ballrooms, and, generally, a search for "suggestive" types of dancing reported to be rampant in the metropolis. The verdict reported today was:

"Objectionable dancing hereabouts is falling by the wayside. In a few of the cabarets, especially in hotels, the dancing space is too small and the music too fast. But nothing definitely objectionable was found.

"New York's dancing conduct is better than we expected to find. It is much better than New York usually gets credit for."

Says Slow Up the Music.

Edward S. Hurst, of Atlantic, Ga., a member of the investigating committee, had one special criticism to make of the Greenwich Village dance resorts. The orchestras were too jazzy, he said —ill-balanced, inclined to feature soloists, who, unconsciously, speeded the tempo and caused the dancers to lapse from graceful figure steps into less pleasing shufflings and body movements.

"If all orchestras reduced the tempo of their jazz and featured more waltzes and tangoes," he said, "all the suggestive features would be automatically eliminated. Slower music and more dancing space would help elevate dancing to the higher plane we seek to establish."

CIVIL WAR VET SEES HIS FIRST MOVIE; 'IT WON'T BE LAST ONE'

Madison, Wis., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—"Yes, sir, they're quite an invention."

That was the way William W. Taylor, 81, Civil war veteran, felt after he saw his first movie here last week.

"And would you believe it," he chuckled, "I thought movies were mostly for kids."

Mr. Taylor has lived within a block of several motion picture theaters ever since the cinema invaded Madison. He never cared to go, he said, until now. But from now on he's going to be a "darned, energetic fan," he avowed.

George Moran Arrested for Checker Taxi Shooting

George "Reggie" Moran, sought in connection with the shooting last Tuesday of Harry J. Morley, superintendent of the Checker Taxi company, and William Baker, a chauffeur for the same concern, was arrested yesterday and charged with assault to commit murder.

WIFE TIES MATE TO BEDPOST AND MUTILATES HIM

Seeks Protection at Jail and Is Locked Up.

Brookings, S. D., Aug. 16.—Mrs. E. A. Baker, 23, is in jail here, held without charge, pending the outcome of her husband's condition, on whom she is alleged to have performed a mutilation operation.

A physician was called from Brookings to the farm where Baker resides. Baker told the physician that he was tied to his bed last night and mutilated. He said he broke loose from his bonds and made his way to a farm house two miles distant to summon aid.

Before the appeal for help came from Baker, his wife had fled to the home of neighbors, whom she told that her husband was trying to kill her. She persuaded the neighbors to take her to Brookings, where she went to the sheriff's office, asking protection, and was locked up.

After the physicians called by Baker arrived, his wounds were dressed. The sheriff and county coroner brought the wounded man to a hospital here. He is in a critical condition, but it is thought he will recover.

Mrs. Baker is believed to be insane as the result of family troubles. The Bakers have two children, a boy, aged 13, and a girl of 11.

CHARLES BRYAN: SAVIOR, MENACE, PATRIOT, QUACK?

A Prophet of 'the People' and His Creed.

BOTH SIDES OF GOVERNOR BRYAN

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

I.—THE BEANSPILLER OF THE PLAINS.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—"Here to write some pieces about Charley, are you? Well, you've come to the right place, brother. They cuss him out in this town, but any time he runs for office he knocks the spots off 'em. He's very human. Quits sporty—box, wrestle, play ball, and don't keep away from a prize fight for fear what folks will say. Horse race fan, too, and been known to bet a dollar or two. Strong with the women.

"When money is saved on coal and ice and gas they know it, and what they don't know how it happened he takes pains to tell 'em how he fixed it. And strong with the church people because he's a dry. Sometimes he's hard to get along with and then again he's easy. But you can't ever bull him. He's the big fly in the ointment in this state because he's always going right to the people with his stuff. The interview is his weapon and when the newspapers won't print his interviews, jiminy, gosh-blootie! he'll talk in a church or in a schoolhouse or on the street corners. When he gets his neck bowed there's no end to the drive till he gets where he started for.

"That's the way he got the gas company over a barrel. It took ten years, but they know it now. So do the housekeepers. Well, so long! You'll get an earful from both sides and when they're finished with you, you won't know whether it's clear and fair or threatening."

That is an exact transcript of the estimate of Charles Wayland Bryan which was given me within four minutes after I had arrived here and got washed up. After four days of pretty steady interviewing it remains the most nearly neutral estimate of the governor of Nebraska and Democratic candidate for Vice President—and William Jennings Bryan's younger brother—which I have obtained. A friendly Lincolnian who heard the telegraph operator reading off a query I was filing gave it me. Its stroke may be broad and o'er free, for Americans tend that way when they talk of their public men, but you cannot deny its vividness and succinctness, and there is a certain smack of truth in it.

No Enemies, but Opponents.

If this little series of articles—I believe only four have been ordered—should be confined to what Gov. Bryan's enemies said about him—no, opponents, for he has no enemies in the virulent sense—then the writing of the series would be a light task; and if it could be confined to what he and his supporters said about him it would be still simpler. In the first case you would simply write him down a quack and pass on to the next attraction; in the second you would proclaim him a seer—and then all the weighty men of property from the Missouri river to Sioux county would wonder how you got that way.

Hence in this series I suppose we have to discriminate—always a wearing business when the theme is the militant type of public man.

So, is slouch-hatted, fluent, gesticulatory, persuasive, pervasive, bouncing Charley Bryan pure patriot or sheer demagogue?

Mind Nimble as His Tongue.

Well, I cipher it out that he has just so much of the strain of demagogue in him as is needed to make his purity function—the purity of an American politician who, meaning well by the people—including himself—still has to get out and dicker and palaver with the people in order to move them to any activity in their own behalf, and.

But in a good many respects anybody who tries to make up his mind about Charley Bryan will do more than he himself has done about himself. For his mind is as fluent as his tongue; here today and there tomorrow, and back again next day.

Now the property holding class—I mean builders and holders of big properties, organized properties—consider him a dangerous empiric, a menace to the solid interests of the land, an expert and devious politician who loves and uses the phrases "the people's will" and "the people's rule," and, about officeholders, "You are servants of the people"—loves and uses all those unguents as so much butter for his parsnips.

"The Beans"—His Specialty.

And he is always spilling the beans. When a plan is formed to unload on a community for four millions a street car system that the automobile is causing to wane and wither, you and I, as residents in that community, probably would say that the plan was pretty thick, and we would helplessly wonder what the country was coming to.

But Charley Bryan does not helplessly wonder. He begins giving out interviews, the clamor of which is that four millions is a million and a half more than the property is worth at physical valuation. When the newspapers get fed up with his interviews and badgered almost to tears by his numerous and lengthy telephone conversations, and when they cease to print his stuff, then he gets the local preachers to lend him their churches and he holds forth there, and the school board to lend him the schools and he holds forth there, and when he has run out of churches and schools he takes to the street corners and holds forth there. The upshot is so unholy a clamor, such an acerbation of issues and such a bedeviling of "the interests" that the proposed deal does not come off.

Competition a Weapon.

And when talk won't do the trick his favorite device is the threat—and sometimes the actuality—of municipal or of state competition.

In the matter of the building of state roads he maintained that there was collusion among the bidders on gravel. He protested, and much good that did not do him. Then he furbished up some long disused gravel pits owned by the state of Nebraska, equipping them with shovels and tractors which he obtained from the war discards of the federal government. Coupled with these preparations was an announcement that the state gravel pits would be opened in connection with the building of state roads. To make a long story short—which, be assured, is less than Gov. Bryan ever made any story—there was a prompt decrease of one-third in the price of gravel furnished the state by private pit owners. The result, as the governor tells it, is that where formerly we could build ten miles of road for a given sum, we now can build from thirteen to fourteen."

Economy? Well, Maybe—

Another thing, precisely like him, he did a few days ago: He had the specifications for $500,000 worth of road building recast from technical terms into what he called "farmer English," so that "the folks whose taxes were to pay for the work would understand exactly what work, what kind, and where, was to be done."

But every time he emits a declamation on what he has saved, is saving or is going to save the state his opponents counter with the argument of nothing spent, nothing done. Will Owen Jones, the sage, quiet-speaking editor of the Nebraska State Journal, was my most desolating informant about Gov. Bryan because he was so quiet—so damning of the man or foul epithets about him, but dry analysis. And Mr. Owen Jones said: "Charley shouts, 'I saved the people a million dollars on road work!' Yes, by not doing any road work."

"Privately Honest, Politically Not."

The most engaging processionals of my daily routine in this beautifully built, well kept and opulent city of Lincoln have been my backs and forths from confabs with the governor and his followers to confabs with Mr. Owen Jones and Mayor Zehrung and the governor's former colleagues on the commission of five which governs Lincoln. Such unanimity as to personal likings and such unanimity as to political dislike and distrust you could hardly duplicate in Budapest, where the statesmen brawl all day in the houses of parliament by the Danube's bank and amicably sip coffee and cordials together in the cafés half the night. Mr. Owen Jones would say, "Personally there can be no question about Charles W. Bryan. His life in the community is honorable and his family life very fine. He is scrupulously honest in dollars and cents. Personally honest; personally a good sport. Politically not honest; politically not a good sport; a mean fighter. But I will say this for Charley: He can make himself honestly believe in a cause that will have the most votes."

Then I toddled up to the capitol and, without any prompting from me, for I was not fetching and carrying, the governor took up Jones, saying:

"Jones don't know how prejudiced he is. I'll say that for him, and I'm sure he is perfectly honest in his prejudice against me."

Mr. Jones on the Governor.

The heart of a man, thought I, as I listened to Charley on his neighbors and his neighbors on Charley, knoweth its own aspirations, its own failings, its own bitterness, and its own solace, and it alone doth know. And who are we, thought I, to judge and impute and presuppose?

Another time Mr. Owen Jones said: "Charley's is a very remarkable mind for details, but he was never a student of national or international politics."

And the same day the governor, in the course of giving THE TRIBUNE his life story, said: "I have put in twenty-eight years studying legislative remedies to meet governmental and business abuses. I heard governmental questions discussed from the cradle up."

Mr. Owen Jones is one of those "however-it-remains-to-be-seen" writers, and apropos of his judicial strain the governor said to him, "Jones, you put all the stingers about me into one editorial and all the praise into another and you'll please somebody some of the time. As it now is, you succeed in keeping both sides mad at the Journal all of the time."

In telling the story of what he said to the editor, the governor added, "But Jones and I don't bear any malice. I give him the high sign whenever I see him."

The Governor on Mr. Jones.

Then I went back to Mr. Owen Jones and said, "Now what is the spell? This Democrat when he ran for governor was elected by a majority of 50,300, and Hitchcock, the other Democratic notable in that campaign, lost by 75,000. And the governor's friend, Mrs. Farris, says that in all the eleven-or was it nine?—political fights in Lincoln which the governor either has led or been directly a candidate in, he has won by majorities ranging from three to one to eleven to one. And yet I find that almost any business man in Lincoln will take an hour off to tell me what a menace the man is. What is the spell?" (Mr. Owen Jones has for thirty years occupied a position of responsibility in the life of the community. Such a man does not talk wantonly or at loose ends.)

This was his reply:

"The spell enabling Charley to hang on is the lack of leadership in both the old parties. He is decidedly a professional politician. Politics—that's his business, and he can stand the losses. He has a curious faculty for seizing on an issue long before anybody else senses it. He is always sponsoring something. He has an amazing skill in impressing his personality on people, especially the women, who regard him as a savior. He's a wonderful hand shaker, with a wonderful smile, and a personality. The working people adore him. He's got a world of people to believe in him. And his rebound is miraculous. No malice in him ever. Let him lose and he'll come right back—still smiling. You can lick him, but you can't knock him out. Like Benny Leonard, you just can't muss his hair."

Then I went back to the gray old capitol and asked the man sitting with his slouch hat on before a big paper-strewn desk for his political confession of faith. He gave it with quiet emphasis and dignity—not flamboyant at all, as you shall see.

WOOD'S SON WINS $200,000 MORE, REPORT IN PARIS

Uses Gambling Gains as Stake.

[Special cable to the New York Sun. Copyright, 1924. All rights reserved.]

PARIS, Aug. 16.—Lieut. Osborne C. Wood, son of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, has made another coup in Wall street, according to reports here, adding an amount variously estimated at from $200,000 to $300,000 to the $800,000 fortune made in Wall street last year by stock speculation via cable from the Philippines.

The second fortune of the 27 year old former army officer has been made, it is understood, in the same manner as was the first, namely, by purchase of shares of the United States Cast Iron Pipe company at the proper time made through his brokers by cable orders from Paris.

Winnings Total Million.

Accepting the minimum estimate of the size of the latest coup, Lieut. Wood's total winning are now in excess of $1,000,000 for the first time. In making the last $200,000, or thereabouts, he employed his winnings at Monte Carlo, which were estimated at 500,000 francs (roughly, $25,000).

Lieut. Wood is now at Biarritz. Interviewed by the Sun there, he refused all comment on reports of his latest "killing." He went to Biarritz last month and is seen strolling around the gaming tables, but does not appear to play himself. He seems thoroughly contented, and his appearance does not belie the latest stories of winnings.

New York Doubts Winnings.

New York, Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Wise men of Wall Street today greeted with skepticism the cabled report from Paris that Osborne C. Wood, son of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, had made another long distance "killing" on the New York stock exchange. Men prominent in the financial district said his supposed profits would have necessitated Wood's buying up 10,000 shares of the Pipe company stock on which he is supposed to have made his winnings and declared such transactions would have created a sensation in Wall Street at the time.

POWDERS HER NOSE IN COURT AND WOMAN JUDGE LOCKS HER UP

New York, Aug. 14.—New York's only woman magistrate, Jean Norris, today ordered Mrs. Marion B. Shaw, 24, an actress, taken from the court room to the dentention pen because she was powdering her nose.

Mrs. Shaw, awaiting call to answer a charge of suspicion of grand larceny in passing a bad check, opened her vanity case and proceeded to erase the marks of a night in a cell.

"Don't let that woman make a boudoir of this courtroom," Magistrate Norris shouted, and the offender was removed.

Mrs. Shaw, who recently reported the loss of a $50,000 necklace, was arrested last night with Frederick Engel, who said he is a theatrical supervisor. The woman was held in $1,000 bail by Magistrate Norris for examination Monday.

Secretary Mellon Visits Paris; Sees No Leaders

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Aug. 16.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon slipped into Paris yesterday on a quiet holiday with his family. He said today that he intended to make it purely a personal visit and he had not seen any French political or financial leaders.

G. O. P. TO SET UP SPECIAL BUREAU OF AGRICULTURE

Marked Attention to the Farmer, Campaign Plan

President Coolidge and his campaign manager, William M. Butler, chairman of the Republican national committee, have faith in the farmers. And in turn Mr. Butler believes that most of this great substantial part of America's citizenry has confidence in Coolidge. The G. O. P. chairman believes that Mr. Coolidge's views on agriculture set well with the soil tillers of grain belts.

Chairman Butler's first move yesterday on returning to national headquarters was to give the farmer a prominent part in running the Coolidge-Dawes campaign. He created an agricultural bureau as a major division of the national organization. A real dirt farmer, yet to be named, will be placed in charge of this bureau, and men who know agricultural problems clear to the roots will be brought into close party councils.

Chairman Butler and his personal staff returned to Chicago prepared for a long stay at headquarters. The chairman, who will preside at the Dawes notification Tuesday night, was accompanied by Frank W. Stearns of Boston, intimate friend of President Coolidge.

Coolidge's Speech Makes Hit.

Letters and telegrams commenting on President Coolidge's acceptance speech continue to pour into headquarters from observers of sentiment in all parts of the country. Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover wired from California that the speech had a deep and satisfactory effect on the coast.

Gen. Dawes' speech at Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 29 generally is regarded by Republican chiefs as the opening gun of the actual campaign. Dawes' appearance at Augusta, Me., next Saturday is more in the nature of throwing some of the heavy national artillery into the Maine state campaign. Gen. Dawes plans to spend his fifty-ninth birthday, Aug. 27, quietly at his Evanston home. On his trip to Maine he will be the guest Aug. 21 and 22 of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wilson at Quotonsett beach, Westbrook, Conn. Today his long time friend, Gen. John J. Pershing, will be his guest at Evanston. Gen. Pershing will be unable to stay for the notification.

Shaver and Brennan Confer.

Clem L. Shaver, Democratic national chairman, talked over the Illinois situation yesterday at a luncheon with George E. Brennan, the Illinois boss, and Mayor Dever. Mr. Shaver leaves today for Lincoln, Neb., to attend the Bryan notification ceremonies. Western headquarters will be opened in the Auditorium hotel Tuesday by ex-Congressman Lincoln Dixon of Indiana, western manager selected by Mr. Shaver Thursday.

Philip La Follette, son of Insurgent Bob, was one of the speakers on the program of the United Irish societies at their annual picnic at Riverview park yesterday.

Judicial Convention Called.

The Democratic county committee issued its call for a special judicial convention Sept. 20 to name candidates to fill vacancies in the Circuit and Superior courts. Frank D. Comerford and John J. Kelly, who are appealing to the courts to uphold their election last June, will be nominated again, it is understood.

CHARGES CROWE HAD NO RIGHT TO QUIZ YOUTHS

Darrow Declares State Ignored Rights.

amined many prisoners under like conditions and their attorneys had made no objection. Asked to give a specific case, he mentioned that of Carl Wanderer.

MR. DARROW—He talked, did he?

DR. SINGER—He did talk. Yes.

MR. DARROW—And he got hanged.

A pause and then the attorney shouted out that the alienist must have known that was against the boys' constitutional rights. You knew you had no more right to bring them to the state's attorney's office than for me to take them to Joliet or to Milwaukee.

Accuses Mr. Crowe.

"The state's attorney said he wanted them to come into his office and examine their valises and then he tried to get those boys to talk."

With a scowl at the state's attorney, "It's not enforcement of the law to capture people and compel them to talk."

Mr. Crowe bit into this charge by saying:

"You cannot compel a man to talk, but there is not any constitutional provision providing you cannot ask him to talk."

And as a personal postscript:

"Once they started to talk, you couldn't stop them."

A few more statements from the witness recalling how the youths, to all questions that day had replied: "I respectfully decline to answer, on advice of counsel" and Leopold's remark to the sheriff, "I am in your custody and I object to this proceeding."

Then Mr. Darrow sent forth his second lance, the one about the meagerness of the examination.

MR. DARROW—Did you ever ask them a question in your life?

DR. SINGER—No, sir.

No Question, No Answer.

MR. DARROW—And did they ever make an answer to you in your life?

DR. SINGER—No, sir, how could they, if I never asked a question?

"Might just as well have examined them over the telephone," snorted out the defense attorney.

The witness thought differently and explained that he had observed their actions and appearance during that interview. And from their appearance, it was brought out after considerable battle, he was unable to find any indications of a mental disease.

It was the alienist's turn now. Where the defense lawyer had been aggressive, the witness for the state made his progress by being defensive. The point at issue was his consideration of all the facts, exclusive of opinion, presented in the evidence of the four psychiatrists, one apiece from Washington, Boston, New York, and Chicago, who had testified for the defense. And from all these facts Dr. Singer was positive that he could not see the slightest indication of a mental disease in either defendant.

Had No Cause for Suspicion.

Q.—Did you find anything that might put you on your guard for further investigation?

A.—Nothing, except the crime itself.

Three times, with variation, this same question was presented, and three times the same answer came. Once, with the additional reply that the fact that the boys had lived in society for nineteen years without being under suspicion was a pretty good indication that there had been no evidence which would put a psychiatrist on guard.

A tall man up on the witness stand followed through with his next point, a persistent point that he has been hammering away at for two days. Simply this—that a split personality, for all its scientific tag—schizophrenic personality—is often no more than forgetting the word "cook-stove" just as you are about to use it. Asked if a split always indicated to the psychiatrist that the person would be put on inquiry, the alienist replied:

"Unless every person in the world would be put on inquiry. It might be a matter of interest, yes. But as a matter of practical necessity, no."

And the chronic "forgetters" if there were any present, must have been reassured.

Darrow Is Persistent.

But Mr. Darrow, likewise, was persistent. And he compelled Dr. Singer to admit that a split, if it were of a larger region of experience, "might indicate a diseased mind;" then that tantalizing qualification, "or it might not be an evidence."

When the split is great, then the effect on conduct, it seems, is great, and the result, frequently, is that the split personality comes, or is brought to the psychiatrist's laboratory.

"Oh, so a split does affect conduct?" queried the lawyer in the expensive gray.

"Yes," replied the physician in the precise brown.

"Umph. That's all I wanted to know." And Clarence Darrow went on to his next consideration.

He picked up a thin, red volume and identified it as Frof. Hart's book on psychiatry. Mr. Crowe jumped up to object to cross-examination on a book not in evidence, and mentioned, with emphasis, that—

"It's just as if we had Dr. White write up all the stuff he testified to about Teddy bears and babes, and then asked this witness to comment on it. It's improper."

Then Mr. Darrow took up a black volume, written by Dr. Singer and Dr. Krohn, and turned to page 53 where begins the section on "schizophrenic personality."

As he read various passages from the book, he glanced, or seemed to glance, toward Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold, as if recalling the identical characteristics that had been told from the stand by the defense alienists.

Asks for Types.

Eight, nine or ten times Mr. Darrow asked what sort of persons were most easily a victim of "it."

Demanding to know just what "it" was, the doctor learned that it was this schizophrenic personality. Insisting that this was a type of person, not a disease in itself, Dr. Singer kept answering:

"Why, schizophrenic persons are schizophrenic persons."

It was the defense attorney's fourth point and he kept to— into the testimony—that answer of the state alienist that such a twist into psychosis is most likely to occur during the period of adolescence. And, going further, Mr. Darrow had the doctor define adolescence as that period between 14 and 21 years.

Looks for Motive.

The two were nearly through for the day, but Mr. Darrow kept on reading, quickly, from page 62 of the book—observations about a schizophrenic personality, possessed of delusions:

"The outbreak is sudden, unexpected, unplanned, though he may provide himself with weapons, and apparently without motive."

And the discussion will continue tomorrow morning.

Crowe and Darrow Stage Wordy Battles While Alienist Sits Tight Under Fire

BY JOHN HERRICK.

Clarence Darrow stretched himself; Dr. Harold Douglas Singer sat tight; State's Attorney Crowe and his assistant, Milton D. Smith, interrupted when Mr. Darrow stretched too far, and Judge Caverly poured judicial oil on the waters, which were tossed yesterday into the most energetic waves yet stirred up in the murder hearing of Nathan F. Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb.

The scene was Dr. Singer, long of limb and genially precise, on the stand, and Attorney Darrow, gray and menacing, leaning against the bar of the bench. It was the defense's turn to cross-examine the alienist for the state, who found no evidence of mental disease in either Nathan or Richard.

Fur Begins to Fly.

Words began to fly with the first minute of question and answer.

MR. DARROW—You have been sitting here in the front seat ever since this case began, haven't you?

DR. SINGER — Except when you moved me over to the other side."

Q.—You very soon got back, didn't you? A.—It was after three or four days.

Q.—You have taken considerable interest in this case? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You have written a book on insanity and the law, haven't you? A.—Yes, sir, I collaborated with Dr. Krohn in the writing of a book.

Q.—And you have collaborated with him in this case, haven't you? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And other cases? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—When was your attention first called to this case by anybody connected with the state's attorney's office? A.—Monday, June 2.

Q.—So you were not there on the general roundup Sunday afternoon? A.—I was not.

Q.—And you heard that on Monday morning we had applied for a writ of habeas corpus to take these defendants from the state's attorney's office, hadn't you? A.—I think I saw that in the newspapers.

Q.—And you knew they were then lodged in jail in the keeping of the sheriff? A.—I presume so.

Why They Closed Up.

Q.—You presumed, didn't you, that the reason the writ of habeas corpus was applied for was so the state's attorney could no longer control them? A.—Yes.

Q.—And so the lawyers would instruct them not to talk any more? A.—Some lawyers do; some don't.

Q.—Do you know any who do not? A.—I have examined quite a number of cases for the state in which the lawyers have not advised them not to talk.

Q.—What ones? A.—Well, I would say one would be Carl Wanderer, for instance.

Q.—He talked, did he? A.—Yes.

Q.—And he got hanged? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You knew that nobody had any right to compel these boys to talk, didn't you? A.—I believe that is a constitutional right, yes.

Q.—And you knew that was in violation of their constitutional rights when you went there?

Objection by Crowe.

MR. CROWE—I object. You cannot compel a man to talk, but there is not any constitutional provision that you cannot ask him to talk. It is too bad Mr. Darrow didn't get them before I got them and they would not have talked at all, and this murder would have been unavenged.

THE COURT—Strike it out.

MR. DARROW—It is not the enforcement of law to capture people and compel them to talk.

MR. CROWE—We didn't compel them to talk. When they were talking we couldn't stop them. They wanted to show how really smart they were in their perfect crime.

MR. DARROW—I know all about that.

THE COURT—Strike out all this talk.

How He Examined Them.

Q.—Did you examine them? A.—I examined certain things about them.

Q.—You could have done that by telephone, couldn't you? A.—No, I think not.

Q.—Could you tell by looking at them whether they had any mental disorder? A.—Tell whether their appearance suggested any mental disorder.

Q.—Could you tell whether they had any mental disorder, sir? A.—If you will allow me to answer, I will try to tell you.

Q.—I will allow you to answer and I want you to answer. Could you tell whether they had any mental disorder by looking at them? A.—I could tell whether their appearance indicated any mental disorder.

MR. DARROW—Your honor, I would like to have this witness answer the question.

MR. CROWE—I submit he has answered.

THE COURT—Can you answer any better than you have?

THE WITNESS—No, sir. I can't answer by yes or no.

Q.—Can't you answer, yes or no, whether you could tell by looking at them whether they had any mental disorder? A. No.

Clash of Counsel.

MR. CROWE—I object, after a question has been answered four or five times, to Mr. Darrow trying to compel this witness to say something. That is almost as bad as the state's attorney trying to get a criminal to tell something.

MR. DARROW—Well, that is what I am doing.

MR. CROWE—Now, if your honor please——

MR. DARROW—You have no more right to call these boys that than I have.

MR. CROWE — What, criminals? They pleaded guilty, didn't they?

MR. DARROW—Yes, but—

MR. CROWE—Aren't they guilty?

MR. DARROW — Their condition makes a great difference, as you know, and you haven't any right to throw that word around.

MR. CROWE—You don't claim they are insane, do you?

MR. DARROW—I claim you can't tell the difference.

MR. CROWE—If they are, we will call a jury.

MR. DARROW—I am not calling a jury.

THE COURT—Strike it all out. It is a waste of time.

Q.—A border line case is one that needs considerable examination, isn't it? A.—I would say yes.

MR. CROWE—If these men are border line cases why didn't you tell them to let our doctors examine them? Why did you tell them to keep their mouths shut?

MR. DARROW—Why didn't you tell them to get a lawyer instead of trying to violate their constitutional rights and succeeding?

THE COURT—Go ahead, gentlemen.

Asked No Questions.

Q.—Were you able to make up your mind from your visit that day whether they had any mental disorder? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you ever see them again until you came into this courtroom? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you ever ask them a question in your life? A.—No, sir.

Q.—And they never made any answer to a question by you in their lives? A.—I didn't ask them one.

Q.—Do you mean to say that there was no evidence presented by the defense alienists that indicated a diseased mind? A.—Not to me.

Q.—Was there any statement of fact made by any one of these psychiatrists that would put one on their guard for further investigation? A.—The statements of fact with regard to the crime itself would, yes.

Q.—Was there any other statement of fact purporting to come from the defendants or any one else that would put a psychiatrist upon inquiry as to their mental condition? A.—I would say no. These defendants had been living in society and it had never aroused any suspicion or question as to mental disease prior to the commission of the crime.

Again, Split Personality.

Q.—Now, doctor, you said a split personality was no evidence of mental disorder? A.—Yes, sir. Not of itself.

Q.—What is a split personality? A.—A splitting in the personality is the separation of certain emotional experiences, which for some reason are repressed out of consciousness and are difficult to recall. In some of the disease conditions it seems that one cannot recall them. In nondisease conditions it is possible to recall them.

Q.—That is, the normal mind generally flows along a regular channel altogether, does it not? A.—I could not answer that. I don't know what a normal mind is, even. It is a hypothesis.

Q.—Yes. Well, then, of course you do not know whether these boys have a normal mind or an abnormal mind. Is that right? A.—I say they have a mind that is within the range of the normal.

As to Forgetting Names.

Q.—Now let me ask you if I fail to remember a name which I often do more and more as I go along, . . A.—So do I.

Q.—If I fail to remember a name, is that an indication of split personality? A.—Yes, sir, of a splitting off of a certain probably small experience in your life.

Q.—Is it not just an indication that it did not impress itself strongly enough on me so I can recall it? A.—It may be an evidence of senility and that the nerve pathways are undergoing degeneration.

Q.—It might in me, but how with you? A.—It might even in me.

Cases in Asylums.

Q.—You have known of cases in the institutions like a woman confined there as a scrub woman who thinks she is the Queen of Sheba, haven't you? A.—I don't recall that particular instance, but something similar to that.

Q.—Yes. Is that a question of split personality? A.—In one sense, perhaps, and in another sense, no, but a good many of them are.

Q.—If I say I am feeling like John L. Sullivan this morning, that does not mean I think I am John L. Sullivan. A.—That would be just the distinction between whether it was an evidence of mental disease or not.

Q.—But if I said I was John L. Sullivan, and John L. Sullivan come back to life and wanting to challenge Dempsey, that would be different? A.—I would probably be able to sign a certificate on that ground.

Q.—Now if a woman who is a scrub woman in an institution says she is the Queen of Sheba, that is a different thing, isn't it? A.—I don't see that that is much different from the assumption about yourself.

Q.—Maybe I have got it. A.—Maybe you have, but I have not seen any evidence of it yet.

Youth a Factor.

The byplay about this "schizophrenia," which Mr. Darrow had so much trouble in pronouncing, being over, the defense attorney began to get down to work, in an effort to link up the disease as described in Dr. Singer's book with the defendants.

Q.—When is it most likely to be developed or changed—when they are young or old? A.—In the training process. Especially in early life, probably the earliest years before he goes to school are some of the most important. Before 6 years of age, then, let us say.

Q.—Well, at what age does it go over to a psychosis? A.—What do you mean by "it"

Q.—I am talking about this "skizzyphratic" business and running into a psychosis. Now, what age? A.—During the years of adolescence those psychoses most often develop.

Trying Times of Youth.

Q.—Those are very trying times in youth, are they not? A.—Without question those times every young person has to meet for the first time a number of specially difficult problems in the world outside of himself.

MR. DARROW — Has the question of sex anything to do with it? A.—That is one of the new problems he has to meet.

Reads from Text.

This was an effort to fit Leopold especially into the picture, and Mr. Darrow proceeded to make his points by quoting liberally from the book written by Drs. Singer and Krohn.

Q.—[Reading] "In school he often does extremely well so far as scholastic acquisitions are concerned. He is liable to be absorbed in books and especially in topics that are philosophic and abstract rather than those that would bring him into contact with the real and the concrete. Often the school successes give rise to hopes of a brilliant future, incapable of realization because of the impossibility of effectively meeting reality."

Q.—"As the stronger passions and feelings develop the difficulties in expressing them become proportionately greater and there is an increasing tendency for the youth to shut himself up within himself (autism) and to dream rather than to react openly." That is true, isn't it? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—These are fantasies, I suppose? A.—I think that fantasy covers that as well as anything. Yes, sir.

Moody and Fretful.

Q.—"On the other hand, the mood may be of depressive color and is then evidenced by fretful worrying, with irritability, and is ineffective in producing any change in the situation. Sometimes it is rather a moody brooding, with occasional outbursts of violence."

Then Mr. Darrow read further about delusions.

"The outbreak is sudden, unexpected, unplanned [though he may provide himself with weapons] and apparently without motive; a truly impulsive and unconsidered act. The man's attitude toward the dead after man's attitude toward the deed after morse. It is almost as though he fails to accept authorship, he is not a free agent, and he apparently often experiences considerable relief after the act is performed. Yet he may retain full memory for the whole event. Sometimes, however, there is some clouding of consciousness with the extreme excitement, and the memories then will be proportionately vague and incomplete."

Rules Question Out.

MR. CROWE—It has no application to the case on trial at all.

MR. DARROW—Well, it is not your turn.

THE COURT—It may go out.

MR. DARROW—Q.—Is it any indication of this condition when a crime is without motive? A.—I think that would be true, Mr. Darrow. It would be much more important that it is an impulsive, unplanned act. I say no motive means no planning as a rule.

Q.—Can you plan without a motive for doing an act? A.—The mere fact of the planning means motive.

Q.—Are not all kinds of plans made for things without motive? A.—I would say no.

Q.—The motive is the moving force? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Have you tried to find it out in this case? A.—I have, yes.

MR. DARROW—Do you want to adjourn at this time, your honor? I won't take long Monday.

THE COURT—All right.

MR. DARROW—I will find out about that Monday.

Hold Gunman, Who Shot Police Sergeant, for Trial

Because of his twice wounding Police Sergeant Bernacchi about midnight Aug. 12, Leo Ward, 844 South State street, was ordered held in $50,000 bonds yesterday morning in Judge Eberhardt's court. Together with Joseph Konesi of the same address Ward was loitering near 1726 South State street when Sergt. Bernacchi questioned them. Ward is said to have shot three times.

RELY ON YOUTH, CUSTOM TO SAVE LOEB, LEOPOLD

"No Minors Hanged on Plea of Guilty"—Darrow

Attorneys for the defense of Nathan F. Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb are attempting to save the murderers of Bobby Franks from the gallows on three points of mitigation. The first is the mental condition which they hope to convince Chief Justice John R. Caverly made the boys irresponsible; the second is the fact they pleaded guilty to the charge.

By far the most important point, however, on which Attorneys Clarence S. Darrow, Benjamin and Walter Bachrach are basing their hopes is the age of the two boys.

Hope Youth Will Save Them.

"Dickie" Loeb was 18 years old when he slugged young Franks to death. He is now two months past his nineteenth birthday. "Babe" Leopold is just past 19 years of age. Although they have had the experiences of men years older and Leopold has been pointed out by alienists as having the mentality of a man of 40, the killers still are in the period of adolescence.

It was with these facts in view that Mr. Darrow presented to Judge Caverly yesterday a list of names of the sixty-seven men who have paid the supreme penalty for murder in Cook county since capital punishmeat was put into effect.

Four Pleaded Guilty; Hanged.

The list shows that four men have been executed on pleas of guilty to murder. Three of them, men around 30 years of age, were hanged during the latter part of the last century. Thomas Fitzgerald, detective, slayer of little Jeanette Wilkerson, was hanged after he was sentenced by Judge Robert E. Crowe, then a judge, on a plea of guilty. Fitzgerald was 39 years old.

Outside of those four there never has been a man sentenced to death on a plea of guilty in Cook county, and at no time has a minor been sent to the gallows, according to the figures of Mr. Darrow.

The records for the entire United States are being compiled by Mr. Darrow's assistants to show there is no case where a minor was sent to his death on a plea of guilty.

These facts probably will be considered by Judge Caverly when he makes his decision in the Franks murder case.

BURNS OIL IN ANY STOVE OR FURNACE.

Cheaper Than Coal or Wood—Gives Twice the Heat in Half the Time.

A wonderful new burner which works in any coal or wood stove or furnace is the proud achievement of the International Heating company, 119 South 14th st., Dept. 5043, St. Louis, Mo. This remarkably simple and inexpensive invention heats stove and oven in half the time and does away with all the dirt, ashes and drudgery of using coal or wood. It gives one of the hottest and quickest fires known, controlled by a simple valve. It can be put into any stove in a few minutes. The present low price of oil makes it a great money saver. The manufacturers offer to send this remarkable invention on 30 days' trial to any reader of this paper. They are making a special low price offer to one user in each locality to whom they can refer new customers. They also want agents. Write them today—Adv.

YOU no doubt think of us as merely sellers of furniture. We're more than that, and we'd like to tell you about it; we believe you'll be interested.

We're home makers. Furniture helps make your home what it is. We know all about furniture—how it's made and what it's made of. If you'll tell us in a general way what you want; or, better, if we could see your home, we could advise you as to the right thing.

We are interested in seeing that you get what is just right; that you are perfectly satisfied with what you buy from us. If we didn't continue as sellers of furniture, we could not continue to be of service to you, and our period of usefulness to you would be at an end; but selling is merely incidental; necessary, to be sure, but not of primary importance. Service to you, and your complete and continued satisfaction come first; always.

It is because we are interested in you and your furniture needs that we have semi-annual sales. Our sales are not clearances of old stock; we haven't any. Our stock is all fresh; new; "Scholle-quality." We are able to buy furniture from the manufacturers at greatly reduced prices during their dull seasons. We buy especially for our sales at these times, and then give you the full benefit of the low prices.

Every piece of merchandise in our store is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction. If it doesn't, you can have your money back.

The list below shows a few of our very attractive bargains. Some of them are single pieces; no duplicates.

LONG DELAYED CORN CROP AT CRITICAL STAGE

Higher Prices Help in Farm Financing.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Illinois's corn crop is swinging in the balance. A jump of from 3 to 5 cents a bushel in the price of corn yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade reflected the uneasiness of grain merchants, farmers, and business interests over the possibility of large portions of the corn crop not reaching maturity. Corn has gone up about 10 cents in two days.

While corn still has a chance of pulling through and producing a fair yield, many fear too early frosts and there have been some light frosts reported even in Illinois. Corn is growing, but much of it may be prevented from maturing.

In summing up their reports from various parts of the corn belt, officials of the International Harvester company say if farmers have favorable weather in September and heavy frost does not come too early, there will be a fair crop of corn.

They point out, however, that corn planting was two or three weeks behind the regular schedule, and the whole season has not been normal. Farmers, they say, will find it a good year for silos and a poor one for storing corn in the crib.

Rail Officials View Crop.

Marvin Hughitt Jr. and A. C. Johnson, officials of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, have just returned from a trip through the northwest. There they found conditions favorable for a fair corn crop.

"In Iowa, South Dakota, Minnesota, Illinois, and Wyoming, the stand of corn is good, the color is good, and the ears are forming," they say. "All the farmers need is seasonable weather to mature the crop. If they have plenty of warm, sunshiny weather and killing frost does not come before the average date, the corn in those states will mature in good shape. The corn crop depends on the weather during the next forty days."

It is Mr. Hughitt's and Mr. Johnson's opinion that farmers are now thrashing the biggest small grain crop ever produced in the northwest. This includes wheat, barley, oats, and rye. South Dakota has double its normal yield of wheat.

Expects Farm Prosperity.

"This big crop of small grain and higher prices will put these agricultural states in good condition financially, restore credit to farmers, and start buying and prosperity in the northwest," added Mr. Hughitt.

A couple of ears of yellow dent corn sent in from Huron, S. D., by T. I. Gunderson shows that the crop is fairly well along. The ears are in the dent stage. In a letter Mr. Gunderson says that he has 400 acres of corn like that and is not worried about it maturing. He thinks that corn generally in his state will mature if it is not hit by frost before the usual time.

Reports of correspondents from the northwest indicate, however, that the unseasonably cold weather of the week just passed has seriously delayed the advancement of corn toward maturity. The nights have been cool in Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota, and parts of Minnesota. In some cases the temperature was near the point where frost forms on the corn.

Grain experts say that the most favorable weather will be needed to get a 2,600,000,000 bushel crop of corn. They believe that if frost is late that would add from 50,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels to the crop.

Iowa Prospects Fair.

Iowa's chances for a corn crop are good, according to G. M. Dyer, Spencer, Ia., a farmer and president of the National Farmers' Elevator Commission company. "I have just finished a tour of northern Iowa and the farmers there will have a fair crop of corn if they get plenty of sunshine from now on," he said.

"We do not usually have a killing frost before Sept. 20. Thirty more days of the proper kind of weather will put corn far enough along to be safe.

"Tassels and ears are coming out on most of the corn in my state. The stand is good in the northern part, but not so good in southern counties. We were about fifteen or twenty days late in planting our corn, and some of our farmers had to replant, making their crop later than ever. In the low bottoms many acres have been flooded, particularly in the southern part of Iowa."

Wheat and oats are now being thrashed. The oats are running from 50 to 75 bushels to the acre, while the normal average is around 40 bushels to the acre, Mr. Dyer said. In extreme cases oats are running as high as 90 bushels to the acre in Iowa. Around Des Moines wheat is yielding from 20 to 25 bushels to the acre.

Trotzky Admits World Has Had 3 Great Men; 2 Dead

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—Leon Trotzky in a new book, "The Life Works of Lenin," admits that the world has produced three truly great men—the other two are dead. Marx, founder of the theories of communism; Nicolai Lenin, who carried out the Marxian theories, and M. Trotzky, the present head, are the world's greatest halo wearers.

The book was printed by the government press in Moscow, but the soviet's central committee decided not to allow its distribution on account of M. Trotzky's attempt to turn the biography into a self admiration essay.

POLICE SEEKING 3 TON MONUMENT; IT WAS STOLEN

Message No. 25271, which went over the telautype to all police stations yesterday signed by Acting Capt. Conroy of the Twenty-first district, reads as follows:

"Stolen, Kolin avenue and Roosevelt road, a gray Quincy granite monument, 4½ feet high, 12 inches thick, 3½ feet wide, with small blemish in middle, light colored like a worm, about 2½ or 3 inches long. No. 491 marked on same. Weight 3 tons. Valued at $500. Make a search of cemeteries and monument places. Stolen Aug. 13 from L. C. Ash, 3915 West Monroe street."

Mr. Ash, inquiry revealed, is vacationing with his family at Lake Petoskey. Inquiry also disclosed that the reason the monument was so far from the Ash home when it disappeared was that it was on its way to Oak Ridge cemetery to decorate the family plot.

Asks Divorce, Charging Husband Deserted Her

Superior Judge John J. Sullivan, yesterday, indicated he would grant Mrs. Violet Hagaman, dancer and movie actress, a divorce from her wealthy husband, R. S. Hagaman, head of the Los Angeles Edison company. Mrs. Hagaman charges that her husband deserted her while she was seriously sick. The bill filed by Attorney Robert E. Cantwell Jr., charges that on May 30, 1921, Hagaman moved the furniture out of their house and even took all the food from the refrigerator. They were married June 26, 1918, in Cheyenne, Wyo.

PROWLING DOG FINDS BODY OF SIG. MATTEOTTI

Remains of Fascisti Foe Buried Near Rome.

BY JOHN STORER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, Aug. 16. — A hunting dog prowling through a wood about eighteen miles from Rome with his master today discovered the body of Sig. Giacomo Matteotti, millionaire socialist member of the chamber of deputies, whose sensational kidnaping last June for a time threatened to cause the overthrow of Premier Mussolini.

The skeleton, practically all that was left of the decomposed body, was found in a shallow grave. The excited dog, barking and pawing the ground, attracted his master, a policeman on a holiday. The master investigated and on making his gruesome discovery reported to the authorities. Identification was established by Deputies Mastracchi and Tonello, socialists, through gold teeth and the high cheek bones of the victim.

When the discovery was reported a host of officials, detectives and police set up a guard in the wood, which is about sixty yards from the roadside between the villages of Scrofano and Castel Nuovo. A thorough search was made for clues, especially for a gold ring known to have been worn by Sig. Matteotti. A stained handkerchief was found a few paces from the grave.

File Stuck in Skeleton.

A file was found stuck between the ribs of the skeleton, and it is believed that this was used in digging the grave. Also, there were indications of wounds. Apparently the body had been partly devoured by animals. A shin bone was discovered some distance from the rest of the body. At the side of the shallow grave, the bark had been removed from a tree, evidently as a marker. No signs of clothing were found.

The police believe that following the murder, Sig. Matteotti's body was taken to the Lake Vico region, when, finding they could not dispose of it easily there, the assassins brought it back nearer Rome.

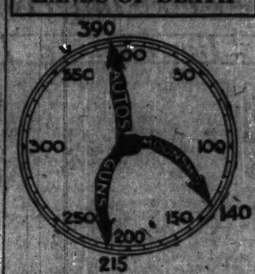
Sig. Matteotti was kidnaped by a number of armed men in broad daylight in front of his house just as he was leaving for the chamber to make an expose of graft on the part of the Fascisti. The crime caused an immediate sensation throughout Italy, while a fine tooth search for the deputy was instituted by Premier Mussolini, but without result. There were a number of reports that his body had been found, but all these later proved to be false.

All Italy Aroused.

The opposition seized on the crime to make a bitter attack on Fascisti methods. The whole nation joined in the outcry for the punishment of the kidnapers. Then Sig. Filipelli, editor of the Corriere Italiano, was arrested in connection with the affair, and shortly after Algo Finzi, under secretary of the interior in the Mussolini cabinet, and Ceasare Rossi, chief of the press bureau in the same ministry, were apprehended. Later a number of others were arrested, and it was stated that there had been a confession, although no one ever told where the body was buried.

Because of the popular outcry Premier Mussolini was obliged to clean out his cabinet and institute reforms checking the power of the Fascisti directorate. Sig. Mussolini himself has been able to keep his own skirts clean in the matter.

HANDS OF DEATH



The hands of the clock indicate the number of deaths by autos, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1.

FATHER TURNS ON WAYWARD SON WHO SLEW GIRL

St. Joseph, Mich., Aug. 16.—[United Press.]—An aged farmer stood outside a cell at the Berrien county jail here today and faced his son, Emil "Ace" Zupke, confined as the confessed slayer of Cora Raber, his former sweetheart.

In the next cell Florence McKinney, Zupke's fiancé and co-defendant for the murder of the woman who was to become the mother of Zupke's child, had been talking calmly with her attorney, Fremont Evans, retained by her father.

Facing his father, "Ace" trembled. He asked for 15 cents for a package of cigarets. The father's face flushed.

"No," he said. "Get you a lawyer? No. When your mother and I begged you to quit your bad ways you laughed at us. Now we are through with you. We hope you never get out of jail."

Boy, 14, Shoots Youth Because He "Butted In"

Using a toy pistol which he had altered so it would fire a .22 caliber bullet, 14 year old Boleslaus Wojnisk of 2835 Manistee avenue yesterday shot a boy of his own age because he "butted in"—as he told police—in a private quarrel. The wounded boy was Frank Popko, 3634 Manistee avenue.

SPURNS WIFE'S 'SLOW DOWN' TIP, NOW IN HOSPITAL

An unidentified man, struck by a Yellow taxicab on Friday night, died yesterday at the county hospital. The total number of deaths in Cook county since Jan. 1 is now 390.

The unidentified man is described as being about 35 years old, weighing 120 pounds, and about 5 feet 2 inches tall. He was struck by a taxicab at Madison and Halsted streets.

Felix Yakaits, who operates a soft drink parlor in Harvey, Ill., disregarded his wife's advice to slow down and told her to "get out and take the street car if you don't like it." Taking their 2 year old baby she got out. A block further on he failed to make the turn at South Halsted and 159th streets and his car turned turtle. He was taken to the Ingalls Memorial hospital, where it is said he will probably die.

Miss Josephine Klingele, Burlington, Wis., one of the party of four women found unconscious beside two wrecked automobiles near Techny, Ill., late Friday night, died yesterday at the Highland Park hospital.

MAYOR'S DEFENSE DAY COMMITTEE TO MEET MONDAY

Angus Hibbard has been chosen temporary chairman of the mayor's Defense day committee of forty members, which will hold its first meeting Monday night on the eleventh floor of the county building.

The forty committeemen appointed by Mayor Dever, representing leading organizations of the city, will elect other representative Chicago people to perfect the plans for a city-wide observance of the day, Sept. 12.

Requests will be sent out Monday night by the committee to every business man and householder in Chicago to decorate his home or his shop with the country's colors. Other suggestions, that may be city-wide, will be discussed. A permanent chairman will be elected Monday night.

TREASURY MOVES TO MAKE 'IRON' DOLLAR POPULAR COIN AGAIN

Washington, D. C., Aug. 16.—The treasury embarked today on a campaign to restore the silver dollar, so widely used twenty years ago, to general circulation.

The initial step was taken when one of the coins was placed in the pay envelope of each of 5,000 treasury employes. Similar action will be suggested to other government bureaus.

During the past twenty years a steady stream of silver dollars has flowed to the treasury, as the use of paper money supplanted them on the receding frontiers of trade. It has been estimated, however, that the upkeep of paper money costs the government around 2 per cent of its face value, while maintenance of silver dollars costs practically nothing. Arrangements have been made whereby various reserve banks will bear hereafter the expense of shipment of silver dollars.

There are about $509,000,000 cart wheels available, of which some $439,000,000 now are required by law to be held in the treasury against silver certificates and silver treasury notes outstanding.

"IMMUNE EDDIE" SUFFERS SLIGHT CHANGE OF LUCK

Days of immunity for "Eddie the Immune" Jackson, so it would seem, are over. The luck of the pickpocket de luxe began to run the other way on Friday when he failed to appear in the Des Plaines court to answer to a charge of larceny. Judge Edgar A. Jonas ordered his $1,000 bond forfeited and instructed the police to get him again. Luck went awry again yesterday when he fell into the clutches of Sergt. O. S. Parr of the West Chicago avenue station. This time the judge ordered his bond raised to $4,000.

PEARL GUNTHER RAGES IN CELL AT COUNTY JAIL

Forgets to Weep for Dead Husband.

That cell in the county jail which has housed so many pretty women while they waited their trials on charges of killing men, opened yesterday, not to a drooping beauty but to a little fury.

PEARL PRIESKOP GUNTHER.

It was in no softened mood that Pearl Prieskop Gunther, dancing teacher, entered the jail, yesterday noon. Since her arrest Thursday, a few hours after her husband's body had been discovered in Cicero, near the place where he worked, the girl had been in the custody of the police.

For forty-eight hours the girl's family did not engage a lawyer for her, during which time her first story,—that she knew nothing of her husband's death—was broken down and she admitted to Chief of Police Svoboda of Cicero, that she had been with her husband at his death. No attorney was with her at the inquest Friday when she told a long story to the coroner's jury about her husband killing himself, while he kissed her, for no reason that she knew.

Loses Her Wistful Tears.

Then yesterday noon two attorneys, Charles E. Erbstein and Frank Tyrrell, both demanded that the courts force Chief Svoboda to send the girl to the county jail. Gone was the sweet, wistful tearfulness of the inquest when Pearl entered her cell.

In a rage she snapped at the matron who took her in charge, glared at the jailers who watched her down the corridors. Then she went into the far corner of her cell and turned her back on the world when the key was turned upon her.

Her first words, when she did speak, was to declare that she had been starved since Thursday morning. To two surprised policemen from Cicero who reminded her of a big dinner they had ordered for her Thursday and again Friday she replied with a glare and turned upon her heel.

Refuses to Talk.

Jailers tried to get the girl to reaffirm her innocence and asked her if she still wanted to kill herself, as she had declared at the inquest. It was no soft glance that they got from her blazing brown eyes, that can be soft beneath their long, fringing lashes. There was pink in her cheeks as she paced her cell or flounced into a far corner and narrowed her eyes at her jailers that no rouge pot ever achieved.

And she proved that some women can keep from talking, for not a word would she say to any one, and when Attorney Tyrrell, who will represent her, visited her she told him only of her hunger and her weariness. Business will come later, he said.

"Alienist" Wants But Little.

Mr. Erbstein said he would not represent the girl, but had endeavored to get her into the county jail at the request of J. Austen Newman. Newman is the man who Friday created a disturbance at the coroner's inquest, and was taken out at the order of Deputy Coroner A. Hermann.

Newman, declaring that he is a psychiatrist, told Mr. Tyrrell that he usually charged $500 a day for entering into criminal cases but that his interest in Mrs. Gunther was so great that in consideration for his taxi bills, hotel bills at the Drake, dinners at the best hotels and theater tickets, he would handle the case for nothing. He believed that expert medical testimony, he said, would save the pretty little dancing teacher.

Unveil Monument on Ticonderoga Battlefield

Ticonderoga, N. Y., Aug. 16.—A bronze monument commemorating the battles fought when Ticonderoga was the "war path of the nations," was unveiled here today. The memorial, the gift of Horace A. Moses, Massachusetts paper manufacturer, and a native of Ticonderoga, represents an allegorical figure typifying the birth of the nation. The monument was designed by Charles Krek, New York sculptor.

SLICING WALK ON MICHIGAN AVE. AID TO TRAFFIC

Speeding up motor traffic on Michigan avenue as well as adding to the convenience of persons who board motor busses in front of the public library were reasons for taking eight feet from the sidewalk, given by Edward J. Kelly, president of the south park board, yesterday.

"Thousands of south siders wait for the busses on Michigan avenue between Washington and Randolph streets daily," Mr. Kelly said. "Busses picking up loads naturally accumulate and line up and traffic lanes are cut down by one.

"By taking eight feet from the curb at this point, other vehicular traffic that is now being delayed can be speeded up. The schedule of the busses is not improved."

Five Lieutenants Shifted for "Good of the Service"

Five lieutenants were transferred "for the good of the service" in an order issued late yesterday by Chief of Police Morgan A. Collins. They are Thomas Kilroy, from Burnside to Stockyards; George A. Teeling, from Stockyards to Burnside; Peter Tomchek, from Sheffield to Rogers Park; Edward Murphy, from Burnside to Sheffield, and John J. O'Brien, from Sheffield to Irving Park. Six sergeants and fifteen patrolmen also were shifted by the same order.

BULLETIN TELLS HOW TO HANDLE THAT HAY FEVER

If you have hay fever—

For relief, wear amber glasses, keep your bedroom windows closed, avoid dust and flowers, ride in closed automobiles, avoid vigorous exercise in the open and wash your hair frequently, advises Health Commissioner Herman Bundesen in a bulletin issued yesterday.

Hay fever is the result, the commissioner says, of the pollination of a variety of grasses and plants and is prevalent usually between July 1 and July 30 and from Aug. 16 until the first frost. Sufferers from the so-called "spring" hay fever rarely, if ever, contract the "fall" or August hay fever, he asserts.

Mrs. Beal was with her husband in the woods of Maine. The husband shot a mother bear, and a cub, no larger than a large kitten, was found clasped in the paws. Mrs. Beal took the cub home and it joined a nursing baby at her breast and lived.

YEGGMEN BLOW FOUR SAFES IN ONE BUILDING

Burglars and Bandits Have a Busy Day.

Safeblowers, burglars, stickup men, and automobile thieves had a busy day yesterday. They relieved the community of approximately $1,200 in cash, several cases of real whisky and many expensive automobiles.

The cracksmen invaded a three story building at 5707 West Lake street and took possession of the structure for several hours. On the first floor they blew a safe and got $400. On the next floor visited were the offices of the C. H. Childs company, publishers. Their safe yielded only $50.

Knock Combination Off.

On the same floor the "yeggs" knocked the combination off the safe of the Hope Publishing company. They could not make further headway. The safe of the Nickerson-Collins company, advertising publishers, on the top floor, collapsed under a heavy charge of "soup," and the "soupsters" were awarded $300.

The same gang are believed to be responsible for the invasion of the Wahlgren drug store at 5501 South Halsted street, where yeggs blew the safe and escaped with several pints of whisky and $200.

The L. C. Smith Bearing company, 2126 South Michigan avenue, lost $300 to the safeblowers. Entrance to both places was effected by "nipping" the iron bars from the rear windows.

Women Fires at Burglars.

Burglars attempted to enter the grocery store owned by Mrs. John Summers, 1107 West 80th street. They were frightened away when the woman fired several shots at them. The same men gained entrance to the home of Samuel Kaskey at the same address. They got $15 from Kaskey and took $4 from Harry Unterberg, a roomer.

William Zimmerman, taxi driver, was held up at 51st street and Union avenue. The robber got $13. Charles Gordon, 5857 Leland avenue, was stopped by a lone bandit at Marmora avenue and Giddings street, who took $22 from him.

DRY REGIME IN NEWFOUNDLAND NEARING FINISH

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Aug. 16.—[By the Associated Press.]—Newfoundland's new bill governing the sale of alcoholic beverages is ready for the governor's signature. If signed, it will replace the prohibition act which has been in effect since 1915. The legislative council gave the bill final passage last night.

The act allows the purchase of a bottle of spirits a day by any one person and gives to hotels the right to supply guests with beer and wines. The restrictive measures are drastic.

Kin Demand Philippines Aid Culion Leper Colony

MANILA, Aug. 16.—More than 100 women relatives of lepers in Culion colony staged a demonstration in the house of representatives during this morning's session, petitioning the house to free the lepers from the colony, or at least improve their lot. The house suspended and Speaker Roxas was forced to appease the demands of the women by promising needed legislation. The women then paraded through the streets.

1,000 FIGHT FIRES IN FORESTS OF COAST STATES

San Francisco, Aug. 16.—Four major forest fires were burning unchecked in California today, with more than 1,000 fire fighters attempting to control the blazes.

In Oregon 2,000 acres of timber in the Wasco lake section, near Bend, had burned over and more than 200 fire fighters were working today.

In Washington early rains have drenched most of the timber fires but reports from Nevada showed that a fire on the slopes of Granite Peak, near the California line, was still out of control.

A fire described as "serious" was burning today at Sugar Pine Flats in the San Bernardino meetings. The fire yesterday destroyed the Rowell sanitarium and eight cabins. At Coulterville, Calif., in the Stanislaus National forest near Yosemite Valley, 450 men were fighting a fire which to date has burned over 56,000 acres of timber and brush lands.

MINNESOTAN KILLED MOTORING.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 16.—Edward Newman was killed, his father, C. L. Newman, was injured and John F. McCarthy, all of Superior, seriously hurt today when their automobile skidded into the ditch near Twig.

"C'EST FINI."

Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany says it is. At this writing it seems to be. The world will hope so. The treaty of Versailles did not end the war. It changed its form, but it continued even without much bloodshed to keep Europe prostrate and its peoples miserable and full of hatred.

Now there may be peace, at least such as followed the congress of Vienna after the Napoleonic wars, when there was forty years without a serious clash of armed nations.

If Germany and France accept the Dawes plan they will have found a way of living. It may be only an arrangement which will put them both on their feet, permit the recovery of their finances and their powers of sustenance. The consequences of their recovery cannot be controlled by this way of living. But they will have another chance to find stability in peaceable relations. It is not an illusioned arrangement.

France does not yield what Germany wanted and thought reasonable in the evacuation of the Ruhr, but an agreement to get out within a year sets a time limit upon this situation and, whether it is a month, six months, or a year it promises a return of national boundaries to their place and the elimination of the contact of a foreign soldiery with an irritated populace. Herriot could not make what his opposition at home could denounce as a surrender and hope to have his government survive.

It is important for Americans to consider how this promised restoration of peace was approached and brought within reach. With Europe ostensibly organized for the solution of its difficulties in the league of nations, conference after conference failed to bring any results. The situation was just about as bad as actual war. Efforts to relieve it only made it worse.

The British had tried it. Everybody in Europe had taken a hand at it. No member of the league of nations could do anything with it, and Europe was coming to the conclusion that any war might be better than this peace.

America was pressed to intervene and it did so, unofficially. Gen. Dawes and his associates made the examination of German resources and submitted the plan by which that nation could regain solvency and pay its obligations. Americans were able to do that because the disinterested and unprejudiced position taken by the American government gave the confidence of Europe to an American effort.

What is indicted as shameful isolation was the strength of the American position. It was not entangled. Therefore it could be the umpire in a dispute. No umpire from the league of nations would be accepted. None would have had the confidence of the antagonists. If the United States had been entangled officially in the affairs no Americans would have been available for the services Gen. Dawes and his associates were able to perform.

It is to us a striking example of the success of the American position maintained since the defeat of the leaguists in this country. The most hopeful sign which has appeared in Europe since the armistice comes from the American policy of avoiding entanglements and being ready with impartial aid. That policy has protected America. It has helped Europe. There may now be peace.

DO YOUR CHRISTMAS COALING NOW.

Chicago coal dealers describe as "bunk" all rumors that coal prices are going down this autumn. That will not surprise many householders. They are accustomed to seeing coal prices go up rather than down.

The experience is no more pleasant because it is commonplace. We do not enjoy a toothache any more the twentieth time it hits us than we did the first. But some of us are more likely to go to the dentist to take preventive measures after a series of such discomforts.

The wise householder will do the same with reference to coal. He who buys now must pay present prices, but he will be safe against the winter's cold. He who delays in the hope of saving a few cents a ton, which the dealers insist is impossible, may not only have to pay more for what he gets but may not get what he would be glad to pay any price for in a January blizzard.

MEDICINE AND LAW.

Two Chicago physicians, Drs. George F. Dick and Gladys H. Dick, are reported to have isolated the scarlet fever bacillus and perfected an antitoxin to combat the disease successfully. The achievement is the result of twelve years of research. It promises health, life, and happiness to thousands, or, in the course of years, perhaps to millions.

We hear frequently of such developments in the medical profession. Good doctors are always laboring as much to prevent disease as to cure it. And they have gone far toward preventing it. We know of no such plagues nowadays as those which devastated whole cities and countries in the past. The truly scientific and progressive physician has no thought of extending the need for doctors and increasing their income by allowing disease to spread. There is hardly one among them who will not remove a man's tonsils at a reasonable fee rather than keep that man an intermittent and paying patient for years because of infected tonsils. And that is illustrative.

What other profession has an equally humanitarian view of life and of its responsibilities? What of the law? Lawyers may be, and often are, also lawmakers. Is it too much to ask that they take a leaf from the ethics of the medical profession? What have they done as a class to advance law, lawmaking, and law application as an applied science for the good of mankind since the Emperor Justinian reformed and codified the Roman law? Many things, perhaps, but not enough.

There is a field for public service, private honor, and ultimate profit, far wider than the preparation of briefs and the pleading of cases in court.

APOSTLES OF DISCONTENT.

Country banks in Kansas report an increase of $20,000,000 in their deposits, although the movement of new wheat is only starting. In Iowa borrowers have paid off $33,000,000 owed to banks and trust companies in recent weeks. The Wall Street Journal reports that country bankers of the middle west are now seeking an outlet for their accumulating funds. The New York Times financial expert indirectly confirms this with the statement that the most important movement of the day on Wall street "was the downward trend of money rates to still lower levels."

In the meantime La Follette, Shipstead, Magnus Johnson, Ladd, Norris, Brookhart, and others of their ilk in national politics continue their policy of stirring up discontent in order to win the votes of the discontented through promises to improve conditions. These self-acclaimed friends of the downtrodden are finding that those farmers who are now paying off the mortgage and putting money in the bank are weakening the solidity of the opposition to the existing order.

It is quite logical to their minds, therefore, and perfectly good tactics, to tell the few fortunate farmers who are causing dissension in the ranks that the improved prices for their products are brought about by the machinations of Wall street to deceive and destroy them. It is a conspiracy, they hold.

The fact that the federal reserve board report for the last month reveals recession in almost every line of industry and business except some lines of agriculture is overlooked in such arguments. It is no strain on the logic of the apostles of discontent to assert that "big business" is conspiring to deceive the farmer by putting up wheat prices while at the same time reducing sales and cutting prices of its own industrial products.

That reveals one thing clearly. It is the purpose of such politicians to convince their constituents, real and prospective, that whatever is is wrong. High prices of wheat, corn, and hogs are wrong because they are the result of a base conspiracy to deceive and exploit. Lower prices of various industrial products are wrong for the same reason. Under the present social, economic, and political conditions there is no such thing as legitimate prosperity or honesty except on the part of those who fulminate about dishonesty, trickery, and exploitation.

Such circumstances make it more and more evident that those men who have attained office through the votes of the discontented do not want that discontent relieved. If it is relieved, as it is being relieved in Kansas, for instance, through natural and economic law, they will be out of jobs.

NATIONALISM IN ART.

Among the minor insanities of the great war was the boycott of Beethoven and of Goethe. Wagner was thrown from the opera programs, and the schools inveighed solemnly against the German language. War projected itself with a terrible kind of humor into fields where no war is possible. From the kaiser we traveled easily to equally satanic Kants and Hegels. We abolished with a word the kindergarten innocence of Froebel and the virtue of the German hausfraus. In Germany they did the same to ours.

The war is over now and the kaiser is only the broken relic of a vanity. His armies are wasted. His people are shuddering from one starvation crisis to another and America feeds—until recently—a million of his children every day. The Germany that we saw ten years ago rise like a sudden storm out of the east has trailed away in a listless monotony of women's tears. The Germany that we fought is broken and gone.

But another Germany that only fools could fight is marching back unconquered. It is not now adventurous to hear Fritz Kreisler or Beethoven's "Eroica." Wagner can be mentioned without curses. "Holy Night" can be sung on Christmas eve without a reservation. German opera in German has recently returned to England after ten years.

These are German heart and soul, but only fools would hurt them. This is a German nation that we could never fight. Beauty may have neither race nor province in its doctrine, but it has human values. The German speaks in Goethe, though Goethe was a citizen of the world. German softness and bluster, his earnestness and naïve mysticism, his dumb perversity of manner, fills the texture of his music with a humane richness that no abstraction as to form can answer. It is German music, German poetry, art, life. As such we welcome it.

"Racial and national enthusiasts," says a peaceful contemporary, "have never been able to get the fine arts on a proper patriotic plane. Wagner may become an imperialist in war time, but somehow his music remains classic. The Russians may be rabid revolutionists, but the work of the revolutionist, Maxim Gorki, finds its way into libraries worthy of the name. Anatole France and Romaine Rolland may be traitors to France, but their prose remains exquisite to the appreciative reader of whatever patriotism."

But the pacifist herein defeats the artist. No art is international in its context, unless it be a polyglot of imitations. Art cannot be generalized unless it be abstracted from its human source and national nativity. Iowa will be Iowa, not Carolina or Peru, and its art will say as much. Chicago will be itself in art. The deep Germanic idiom among other things makes Wagner what he is.

The English will hear opera in German less for "classical" abstractions than for the Germany that they love. America will delight in Japan's art less for their theories of form than for the Japan that we find charming. "Form," after all, is a deeper thing than mere design. It is a fusion of all inner values.

The difference in the arts and in works of art which gives them quality and a warm idiom and interest of their own follows the lines of human cleavage. The values of our society have been built up largely by racial differentiations. The Germanism of the Germans, the Orientalism of China, the Americanism of America is the basis of their respective social systems and of their arts.

There is profound reality in the nationalism of Beethoven. The thunder of Germany is gone, but her song, thank God, continues.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

The August moon is past its full and the year has its definite trend towards fall. In the matured experiences of many people who have gone well across the meridian of life the decline of the year gives no regrets. It measures better with their expectancies than the flood of the year which is youth and for youth, for the quickened pulse and the dancing steps. In the decline from the divide leisurely feet will rustle the fallen leaves. In August a poise is reached and then the graceful surrender of things which have had their month in the sun, their blossoms and their fruit.

The way down is full of color. Pan's hair will turn white. The dryad who was young with the first ample bud will have wrinkles with the fallen maple leaf. The song will end in on a humming nor the quaver of an owl. There will be early cu[illegible]ar. The ax again will lie by the wood pile. [illegible]es the meridian and beyond the divide within the closer walls of a narrowed expectance the ru[illegible] philosophy of the year contains itself serenely. To have had is to have. The year is full of [illegible]gs which have gone.

A CHINESE WARNING TO AMERICA.

A cable dispatch from China asserts that 3,500 villages in the northern provinces have been swept away by floods, 13,000 persons have been drowned, and nearly 14,000,000 have been made destitute. It is one phase of the constantly alternating stories of flood and drought in China. It is hardly news any more.

We know that in the next dry season we shall have stories of the burning up of crops and the starvation of whole villages in some parts of China, and that a year hence, or sooner, we will have other tales of flood and famine. Such situations have been recurring for years, and will continue to recur. But for all that, the sad stories ought not to leave us thoughtless.

The recurring floods and droughts, with their consequent famine and misery, are due in large part to the fact that large areas of China have been completely denuded of their trees. Meteorological science proves that this has a tremendous influence upon the rainfall. Ordinary observation shows that rains run off in floods from such denuded areas, with consequent damage to the soil and to everything in the path of the flood.

This is a condition toward which the United States is heading when it cuts five times as much timber as it reproduces yearly. The issue is approaching the importance of a national emergency here. Americans must see it, and our state and national authorities must act upon it if we are not to become physically as China is.

MRS. PETTUS TAKES UP MRS. EVANS' RANCH AND RIFLE.

In the speech of acceptance President Coolidge says that the aid the United States has given Mexico has undoubtedly helped to save the Mexicans from the terrors of another revolution. A large part of that aid was the sale of munitions to the existing government. The rebels were denied supplies and the revolution broke down. The President also says:

"We also indicated the adoption of a policy of making it worth while for a government so to conduct itself as to merit our recognition. We have secured a written agreement with Mexico to negotiate a treaty of amity and commerce to replace the one which was canceled as long ago as 1911, and joint commissions will shortly meet to adjust all American claims against that country."

Mrs. W. J. Pettus of San Francisco has gone from Mexico City to Puebla with her husband, Dr. Pettus of the United States Marine hospital. Mrs. Pettus is the sister of Mrs. Rosalia Evans. She will take charge of the ranch of her sister, who was assassinated, after many months of fighting to defend her property. Mrs. Pettus is one of the heirs, all of whom are Americans. Mrs. Evans was an American, but the widow of a British subject.

Mrs. Pettus, considering the fate of her sister, who was not protected by the Mexican government against looting agrarians, is doing a game thing to take up the defense. Neither the British nor the American government could save Mrs. Evans' life. The responsibility now is on the United States.

There will be many claims when the joint commission meets, and they will all reproach the United States. Its citizens have gone into Mexico under the laws of Mexico, have acquired rights legally, have devoted their energies to making civilization, wealth, and progress in Mexico.

Mr. Coolidge announces a policy. If it is made to work Mexico may come out of the sixteenth century.

Editorial of the Day

THE AIR MAIL.

[New York Evening World.]

After a month's operation, Postmaster General New announces that the New York-San Francisco air mail experiment has been physically successful, but financially a failure. The cost has been considerably more than the revenue. His statement carries the implication that unless the heavy monetary loss can be overcome by a heavier revenue the service may have to be discontinued.

It would have been remarkable, indeed, if the first month of operation had shown different results. The public has not as yet been educated up to the possibilities. The fact that the operation was clearly an experiment was enough to impel people to await a demonstrated success before making use of the air route.

This success has been demonstrated. The plan to continue the route for three or four months and wage a campaign of traffic solicitation in the meanwhile may put the service on a paying basis or bring the revenue up to the cost—which would be sufficient to justify the permanent adoption of the air route.

It should be remembered that the postal service has never been brilliantly successful as a revenue producer.

HER NUMBER!

On his tour of the district an inspector of city high schools came before a class of girls. He wrote upon the blackboard, "LXXXX." Then, peering over the rims of his spectacles at a good looking girl in the first row, he asked:

"Young lady, I'd like to have you tell me what that means."

"Love and kisses," the girl replied.—Everybody's.

MANY PUBLIC HOMES BETTER THAN PRIVATE ONES.

One of the last papers written by Dr. Holt told of a study of children in an orphans' home. His astounding conclusion was that children in institutions are better off than children in private homes. Dr. Holt did not refer to the kind of children's homes written about by Charles Dickens. The work of the great English novelist and his fellow laborers has borne fruit. Children's homes are not as bad as they were in Dickens' day; in fact, they have improved faster than private homes have. There are still children's homes where low grade raw milk is supplied, where the food is poor, the sanitation is bad, and personal hygiene is neglected, but they are the exception rather than the rule.

The home studied by Holt was a Catholic institution where things were simple and inexpensive, but the surroundings were wholesome and common sense. Drs. Katz and Grey support Holt with a report of a study made in a Jewish children's home in Boston. The children came from the poorest classes. They were given simple, wholesome food, and kept in sanitary but far from luxurious surroundings. They attended the public schools. On entrance each child was physically examined, and, if found in need of medical or surgical attention, the need was supplied. Most of the children were undernourished. The fact that a child was undernourished was one of the most compelling reasons for getting him into the home.

Breakfast consisted of cereal, fruit, cocoa, bread, and butter; dinner of soup, meat, and vegetables, and a simple dessert, such as a pudding; supper consisted of milk, soup, jelly, bread and butter, and fruit. Fish and eggs frequently replaced meat in the bill of fare.

Regularity was given more of a factor in the welfare of the children. They got up at a regular hour, washed well, dressed cleanly, and then entered on the day's routine of work and play. Supper was served at 5:30. At 7 the younger children went to bed and to sleep. Nine o'clock was the invariable bed hour for the older children. Discipline was a factor of importance.

For years there has been no contagion in this home, in spite of the fact that the children are in contact with other children in the public schools. Some of them have got up to 17 years of age without having the childhood disorders that so many hold to be inescapable.

Many of these children are below size because of their racial peculiarities, but before they have been long in the home they are up to par on the accepted scale of weight. Only 3 per cent of them are more than 11 per cent below the normal weight. Those who are poorest at the start catch up most rapidly, if they are free from tuberculosis, adenoids, and other troubles that enfeeble.

The conclusion is that a child is better off if he lives in an average good asylum than he is if he lives in an insanitary and unwholesome private home.

She went to the grave under the code she and the man she loved had made for themselves. Wright, with two nephews and his son, placed the body in a pine box, uncovered and unornamented, and took it to the grave, where it was gently lowered. There was a profusion of flowers Wright took from Mamah's garden. The bodies of her two children were taken by their father, E. H. Cheney, the man she left for Wright, to Chicago for burial.

THE MINUTE MEN'S PLANK ON LABOR.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—Friday's edition of your paper gives considerable prominence to statements by certain labor leaders concerning the Republican candidate for the vice presidency. The statement is there made, and in the past has been frequently made, that he organized the Minute Man of the Constitution for the purpose of fostering the open shop and fighting organized labor.

The plank in the platform of the Minute Men of the Constitution to which the labor leaders object, and upon which they base their statements, reads as follows:

"Indorsing the announced position of the government of the United States maintaining that the right of a citizen to work without unlawful interference is as sacred as the right of a citizen to cease work, irrespective of whether he is or is not a member of a labor or other organization."

What do the labor leaders object to in this plank? Do they maintain that it is a false statement of principle and that a citizen has not the right to work without unlawful interference? Do they maintain that they have a right to unlawfully prevent any citizen from working unless he belongs to a labor union and contributes his dues to pay their salaries, and enable them to enjoy the balmy breezes of Atlantic City during the hot weather?

If these labor leaders contend that no man has a right to work unless he belongs to a union, and that any one who asserts that a citizen has a right to work without unlawful interference, whether he belongs to a union or not, is an enemy of labor, then they are obviously enemies of the constitution and laws of this country.

The majority of labor leaders have not done an honest day's work in years, not by might of arm and sandbag have managed to exploit and derive a living from dues contributed to unions by honest workmen.

Any candidate for a public office might well feel highly honored to receive the support and votes of a majority of the laboring men of this country. On the other hand, a statesman, as distinguished from a politician, would feel deeply mortified by the support of a majority of our labor leaders.

THE TRIBUNE might fill its space with better material than the manifestly false representations of ignorant and irresponsible blatherskites.

JOHN E. HOUSER.

CREDIT FOR THE AIR MAIL.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—I was interested in your editorial this morning on the air mail, but there was one thing missing that we can be proud of. The entire management behind this enterprise, and the vision which created and carried it through was that of a Chicago man, educated in the Chicago public school system, and graduated from the old South Division High school.

The next time you have occasion to compliment the air mail service, I think Chicago should take some pride in the fact that it was made possible through the energy of Paul Henderson, second assistant postmaster general.

WHARTON CLAY.

WE'VE RECEIVED FORTY OF THESE.

Racine, Wis., Aug. 12.—For the benefit of W. B. Freeman and W. J. Stanton and others opposed to the canine race, will you kindly reprint this beautiful tribute to the dog by Senator Best:

"Gentleman of the Jury: The best friend a man has in this world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son and daughter that he has reared with loving care may become ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name, may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him when he may need it most. Man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees and do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The one absolutely unselfish friend a man may have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is the dog.

"Gentlemen of the Jury: A man's dog stands by him in prosperity and poverty, in health and in sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground, when the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer, he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince.

"When all other friends desert, he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey through the heavens. If fortune drives the master forth an outcast into the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him, to guard him against danger, to fight against his enemies, and when the last scene of all comes and death takes his master in its embrace and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by his graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws and his eyes sad, but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even to death."

THAT SETTLES THAT.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 13.—A three weeks test I have learned that the non-use of intoxicants and tobacco makes a person one hundred per cent better off—As I have always been a advocate for—I am now against, because right is right, and I want the world to know it.

U. OF C. HEARS OF DR. MOULTON'S DEATH ABROAD

Famous Here for His Work in Literature.

Members of the faculty of the University of Chicago were shocked yesterday to hear of the death on Friday at Tunbridge Wells, England, of Dr. Richard Green Moulton until 1920 head of the department of general literature at that institution.

R. G. MOULTON.

Dr. Moulton, who was an authority on Shakespeare, was 75 years old. He was born in Preston, England, May 5, 1849. He held degrees from London university, the University of Cambridge, and the University of Pennsylvania. It was only last year that the honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon him by Cambridge.

Came Here in '92.

He was Cambridge extension lecturer in literature from 1874 to 1890, lecturer for the American Society for the Extension of University Teaching in 1891, and lecturer for the London Society for the Extension of University Teaching in 1892. He came to the University of Chicago as a professor of English literature in 1892.

In 1920 Dr. Moulton was made a professor emeritus of literary interpretation at the University of Chicago and in 1923 was elected a fellow of the Royal Society of Literature.

Dr. Ernest DeWitt Burton, president of the University of Chicago, is now in England and a statement regretting Dr. Moulton's death was issued on behalf of the university by Prof. James H. Tufts, vice president.

"Prof. Moulton was brought here by President Harper because of successful work in university extension in England," he said. "In the early years of the university especially he gave lectures and interpretive readings from the Old Testament and Greek tragedy which drew large audiences in Chicago and many other cities in all parts of the United States.

Great Aid to U. of C.

"He was one of the most eminent and successful in the field of adult education outside of university walks. His literary arrangement of the Old Testament poetry in 'English Reader's Bible' has had wide circulation. In later years he was not able to travel so extensively, but taught large classes of university students.

"He contributed greatly toward making the University of Chicago widely known and brought to large circles of hearers and readers the refreshment and vision of scholarship."

BUSY

Mrs. Mabel Reinecke, collector of internal revenue, signing checks for refund of income tax.

STARTS CHECKS FOR REFUNDING OF INCOME TAX

170,000 in This District to Get Them.

Mrs. Mabel Reinecke, collector of internal revenue for the northern Illinois federal district, yesterday began the task of returning 25 per cent of the 1923 income tax paid by each of 170,000 persons in the district.

The refund is being made under the terms of the new revenue act, passed by congress and signed by President Coolidge after the 170,000 taxpayers had paid their entire tax on last March 15.

To Sign 3,000 Checks Daily.

Mrs. Reinecke announced yesterday that $1,190,000 had been deposited at the Federal Reserve bank to the credit of her office and that she will personally sign checks at the rate of 3,000 a day until the appropriation is exhausted, after which another appropriation will be forthcoming.

Chicago pays 32 per cent of the income taxes of the entire district of forty-five counties, Mrs. Reinecke stated. She said that 140,000 taxpayers in Chicago would receive refund checks before the end of September.

Useless to Call Up.

Mrs. Reinecke urged that all taxpayers refrain from calling her office to inquire the status of their refund claims. "To call or 'phone will only delay matters as it will take up the time of clerks in the department without accomplishing anything," Mrs. Reinecke said. "Taxpayers entitled to refunds are listed by number and not by name."

It is said the checks vary from a few cents to $100 and more, most of the payers of larger incomes having taken advantage of the instalment privilege.

Those who are paying by installment will have an adjustment of their taxes at the time the fourth installment was to have been due.

"YOUNG FRIENDS" CHIEF BERATES DEFENSE TEST

Washington, D. C., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Criticism of the war department's "defense test" plans is expressed in a statement issued today by L. E. Hiatt, director of the Young Friends Committee for Peace.

"A mobilization of the spirit of peace and good will on Sept. 12—this idea is spreading among many organizations of young people throughout the country, sponsored by the Young Friends Committee for Peace," said Mr. Hiatt. "This movement is gaining momentum very rapidly, because much of American youth feels strongly that the war department's 'test defense day' or 'mobilization day,' as it was first and more properly called, will have a serious effect on all moves for international friendship and world cooperation.

"Careful thought is showing the youth of our country that the only permanent national security lies in world cooperation and the international reduction of all armaments. They desire that the United States should take the lead in an effort to bring this about.

"It seems to them entirely inconsistent in policy for their country to call Washington disarmanent conferences, to demand a world court and the outlawry of war, and then completely nullify these moves toward peace with an attempt to 'visualize' war conditions on Sept. 12."

"MRS. BOB" IN ARMS AGAINST DEFENSE TEST

Madison, Wis., Aug. 16.—[United Press.]—Mrs. Belle Case La Follette, wife of Senator Robert M. La Follette, independent candidate for President, today launched an attack on National Defense day, declaring it to be a "move by the war department to create a little war hysteria."

Public sentiment, "Mrs. Bob" said, kept compulsory training from becoming a law at the last congress.

Quoting Gen. Pershing as declaring "This test will show the preliminary steps required for prompt utilization of our large reserve force of patriotic citizens," Mrs. La Follette, in an article in La Follette's magazine, says "Herein is revealed the real incentive, the underlying motive of mobilization day.

"The war department, deprived for the time being of power to carry out its plans by compulsory training, has found it necessary to rely on voluntary training to work out the huge scheme of militarization contemplated by the reorganization act of 1920.

"The war department fears that under the voluntary custom it may not be able to carry out its prodigious plans of national militization under normal peace time sentiment. Something must be done—a little war hysteria created, a degree of pressure applied—mobilization day!"

JAPANESE BIDING TIME TO RENEW EXCLUSION FIGHT

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TOKIO, Aug. 16.—"President Coolidge may consider the exclusion incident closed, but Japan does not," stated the foreign office today apropos of Mr. Coolidge's references to Japan in his acceptance speech. "Regardless of the presidential candidates, Japan intends to renew its protest."

The officials refuse to discuss the probable date of their new lines of protest, stating they do not desire to permit an international question to become an American election issue.

It is intimated by the foreign office that Mr. Coolidge already is feeling out Japan on the matter of a second disarmament conference, which the officials are taking up and studying in preparation for a reply. They say the opinion of the administration here is not clarified yet, although it previously was announced that Japan was ready to talk disarmament when a conference was called relating to land forces, air forces, light cruisers, and submarines.

"Hursen" Funeral Autos

The Finest in America

It costs not a cent more to ride in one of Hursen's superb, specially designed, private, noiseless funeral-limousines than it does to ride in any of the usual unlovely public funeral conveyances. Hursen's automobiles are recognized as the most beautiful in America.

Each has been specially designed by Hursen himself. Each required a small fortune to build. Each possesses those traits of unusual beauty, comfort and always appropriate loveliness which distinguish all things "Hursen."

The interior of "Hursen" cars is perfection in drawing-room elegance, and in arrangement for roomy comfort. The exterior in contour, in finish and in equipment represents a development far in advance of many of the highest-priced automobiles of the day.

"Hursen" cars are noiseless, vibrationless. Each rides like a Pullman coach. Each is under the supervision of a Hursen-trained, always correct, liveried driver. It is small wonder that a fleet of "Hursen" cars, wherever seen, always excites such universal admiration.

The elegance of "Hursen" funerals to the last detail is unsurpassed. Yet the charge for "Hursen" funerals is from one-third to one-half the charges usually asked elsewhere. It is this policy that has made "Hursen's" the greatest undertaking establishment in America.

MAYOR PLEDGES CONTINUANCE OF PENSION QUIZ

Contends Cook Is Not the Man to Run It.

Investigation of police pension fund affairs was assured yesterday. Mayor Dever interrupted an angry discussion between Corporation Counsel Busch and Attorney Edgar Cook with the announcement that $1,000 had been set aside from his contingent fund to defray preliminary expenses of the inquiry.

EDGAR COOK.

Cook, retained with J. L. Jacobs, an efficiency expert, by the council police committee to substantiate charges that the fund has been looted by politicians and their lawyer friends, quit Friday. In a letter to the committee he charged that Mayor Dever and Mr. Busch refused to guarantee payment for his services.

No Opposition Made.

In authorizing the police committee to undertake the investigation, the council neglected to make appropriations for the employment of special counsel or auditors.

In his letter to the committee, Attorney Cook promised a report of irregularities discovered in the manage ment of the pension fund after only a few days' research. Beneficiary rolls have been padded with claims of doubtful validity, clients of certain attorneys have been favored by the rulings of the administering board, which has held secret meetings contrary to law, he charged.

Opposed to Cook.

"This investigation must go on," Mayor Dever declared, "but Attorney Cook is not the man to conduct it. His statement, based on what he admits is merely a cursory examination, kills Cook so far as this inquiry is concerned. No attorney who will make such charges after a three days' investigation is fit to conduct the probe we desire to make.

"I don't want one of these vindictive, mud-slinging investigations that develop into nothing more than personal rows. All I want to find out is the faults of the system, if there are any, and expose the irregularities."

Began at Wrong End.

"Cook's error apparently was in starting his investigation into the fund from the wrong end," Ald. Albert declared. "It was expected that he would begin his search in the records of the Thompson administration. Instead, he began at once to delve into the actions of the present board of trustees. As a result he is not wanted."

"It's an infernal lie," declared Attorney Cook, when told that Mr. Busch insisted that he told the lawyer on Friday that the mayor was giving $1,000 from his contingent fund to carry on the inquiry until an appropriation from the council or from the retirement board could be secured.

Advised to Desist, Says Cook.

"Mr. Busch told me that there were no funds with which to carry on this investigation and advised me to desist until money could be found. Whether I am retained or not, this inquiry should go on to expose practices which if allowed to persist mean the dissipation of the fund."

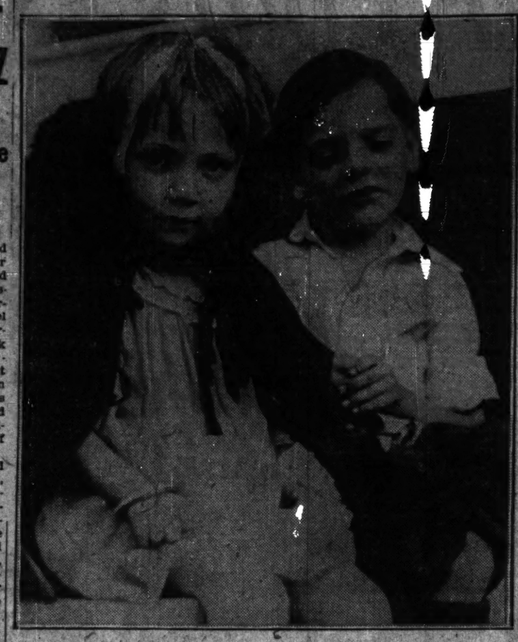
In a letter to the police committee, Mr. Busch explained that because of other engagements, the mayor could not discuss the matter with Cook but had referred him to the corporation counsel. Cook, he continued, refused to proceed with the investigation on the assurances that his bills, if reasonable, would be allowed by the council finance committee in the 1925 budget.

"It is the mayor's idea," said Mr. Busch, "that the $1,000 made available from his contingent fund, if prudently handled, will carry the investigation along until the return of the pension fund trustees, who will be asked to appropriate for the purpose or until the council meets in October."

MAID LEAVES WITH MINK COAT.

Two hours after being hired as maid, a colored woman about 25 years old, giving the name of Mary Jackson, disappeared with a $1,000 mink coat and silk garments belonging to her employer, Mrs. Joseph O'Neil, 1038 Sheridan road, Evanston. Mr. O'Neil is merchandise manager of Davis Dry Goods company.

A Little Chap with a Whale of a Heart



When Douglas Bisset, 7, learned that his sister Phyllis, 5, might not get well if somebody didn't supply skin to graft onto her small body where fire had burned her own, he promptly offered his. He lost eighty square inches of his epidermis; but Phyllis, peeking through her bandages, will not suffer so long, and Douglas doesn't think he did much.

275,000 FOLKS HAVE SEEN FUR FASHION SHOW

A report given by directors of the Associated Fur Industries of Chicago states that the Third Million Dollar Fur Fashion Show opening its final week's run tomorrow at the Riviera Theater has been viewed by 275,000 persons since Aug. 4 when it opened in the loop.

According to Don L. Omo, president of the association, the influence of the fashion pageant has been directly felt in local fur sales which have advanced 25 per cent over those of last August.

With "a moderate priced year" as their slogan Chicago furriers have endeavored to exhibit in this showing varied styles adapted to the woman who must use one fur garment for all purposes, rather than hundreds of spectacular garments beyond the reach of the average purse. This year, say the furriers, every woman can afford one fur coat.

Herriot Newspaper Clears Ex-Kaiser of War Charge

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Aug. 16.—The Ere Nouvelle, Premier Herriot's newspaper, today publishes a number of telegrams exchanged between Herr von Moltke and Herr Berchtold, Austrian foreign minister in 1914, showing that the actual outbreak of hostilities was prepared without the knowledge either of former Kaiser William or the late Emepror Franz Joseph. This expose is complementary to previous publications purporting to indicate M. Poincare's complicity with the Russian ambassador, M. Izvolsky, and the Czarist premier, M. Sazonoff, just previous to August, 1914 in the war responsibility.

ORDERS LOCKOUT OF "LA FOLLETTE" CIGARMAKERS

Madison, Wis., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Learning that organizers for the Cigarmakers' union were circulating among the 100 men in his plant engaged in manufacturing "Bob La Follette" cigars, George Wiese, president of the Wiese Cigar company, today ordered the men locked out when they returned Monday morning.

The union men met later at the labor temple and denounced Wiese for using the name of La Follette for his cigars when he is opposed to unionism.

DAVIS OUTLINES HIS POSITION ON LABOR QUESTIONS

Give Worker a Voice in Industry, His Belief.

Locust Valley, N. Y., Aug. 16. — In his Labor day speech John W. Davis will give a full exposition of his views, first stated in his acceptance address, that democracy in government and democracy in industry alike demand free recognition of the right of labor to share in all decisions that effect their welfare.

On behalf of the Democratic presidential candidate, it was stated today that his conviction is that there can be no lasting settlement of industrial unrest until the workers have a share in the councils of industry and that labor's knowledge of its own needs gives it a right to a voice in all matters of government that directly or peculiarly affect this right.

Run Over Strike Causes.

With labor having a voice in the management of industry, Mr. Davis believes there will be removed the main cause for industrial disputes.

The Democratic nominee also is represented as holding that the plan of stock distribution to workers now in operation in some lines of industry should be given wide application.

Mr. Davis remained at his home here today marshaling material for his addresses. He spent the morning in his study preparing the speech he is to deliver at Columbus, O., Aug. 26.

Plans Two Talks in East.

Before going west, Mr. Davis will deliver two addresses at Sea Girt, N. J., Friday, it was stated today. The first will be before the state Democratic committee and the second at an open air meeting.

NEWTON THINKS PRESIDENT WILL WIN MINNESOTA

Washington, D. C., Aug. 16.—[Special.] — Improved agricultural conditions may make it possible for the Republicans to carry Minnesota, according to Representative Newton [Rep., Minn.], who is connected with the speakers' bureau of the national committee.

Mr. Newton thinks the La Follette sentiment in the northwest has passed its peak and that the independent movement will not be as formidable as expected.

He thinks that the decidedly improved agricultural outlook has greatly increased the Republican strength.

"The people are beginning to realize," Mr. Newton said, "that La Follette has no chance to be elected President. They know that all the Wisconsin senator can hope for is to cause a deadlock, the election being thrown into the house.

"'This is making the people sit up and take notice. Such a possibility is not pleasing. The Coolidge sentiment is growing in and outside of the Republican ranks."

Charles S. Huffman, former lieutenant governor of Kansas, expressed optimism over the outlook for the Republicans in Kansas. He said there is no question that Coolidge will carry that state, which he said never has been as prosperous as it is at the present time. He expects the President to get a large majority.

He also predicted victory for the Republican state ticket there. Mr. Huffman also said he is impressed with the favorable reports from Colorado and Nebraska, which indicate these states will be found in the Republican column in November.

Herrick Is Home from France for 2 Months' Rest

UNNEIGHBORLY

The Bulgarian foreign minister charged yesterday that the trouble between Greece and Bulgaria is due to the Greeks in Greek Macedonia terrorizing the Bulgar population. A mixed commission has found that twenty-eight Bulgars were killed recently.

Bulgaria also announced yesterday that it had broken a system by which large quantities of arms were being smuggled to the agrarians and communists.

It is claimed that the arms came from Russia.

CHARGE GREEKS SPREAD TERROR IN MACEDONIA

Bulgaria Claims 28 Were Killed.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 16.—[By the Associated Press.]—Bulgarian officials announced that the number of their nationals shot by Greeks recently in the region north of Saloniki has been found by the mixed commission inquiry to have been tfenty-eight instead of nineteen.

Foreign Minister Kalloff said Bulgaria was anxious to establish all the facts because the affair was taypical of incidents which have caused bad feeling between Greece and Bulgaria and "indicates the method whereby the Greeks are terrorising the Bulgarian population of Greek Macedonia forcing the people to leave their homes, ripening crops and all their possessions."

Permits are said to have been issued to 10,000 Greeks to leave Bulgaria in an exchange of populations but it is declared that not a single Greek has left while 14,000 Bulgarians have fled from Macedonia into Bulgaria.

Break Up Arms Smuggling.

A comprehensive system for smuggling into Bulgaria large quantities of munitions by Russians at Sebastopol is alleged by Bulgarian officials to have been revealed to additional arrest of smugglers along the Black sea coast. The authorities are also said to have discovered a secret system of communication between Russia and Bulgaria.

The Bulgarians, in an official announcement, stated that eighteen tons of munitions had been seized in a single shipment and additional deposits of rapid fire guns, revolvers and automatic rifles had been located in a forest.

Communists Arrested.

It was said the smugglers had arranged food supply stations and a transportation system to the ports of Altos and Burgas. The government declared that most of those involved, including both Bulgarian agrarians, communists and Russians, have been arrested.

Standard Oil Reduces Activities in Roumania

BUCHAREST, Roumania, Aug. 16.—[By Associated Press.]—The Standard Oil company has suspended all its construction work in Roumania and has reduced its staffs here while awaiting a decision by company officials as to whether operations in Roumania will be entirely discontinued because of the new mining and oil legislation.

Hertzog Urges Self-Rule for Ex-German Africa

THE COOLER DAYS.

The cooler days are not so many weeks away. Then this season's hollyhocks will be only memories, the last of the gladioli will have withered, and only the belated asters will hold the garden trenches against advancing winter.

Once more, the fireplace in the living room will come into its own. The house, and not the garden, will be the center of attention for family and friends.

It is said that the home is the cornerstone of our civilization. Let us furnish it accordingly as the cooler days approach.

SIMPLE, KINDLY WELCOME HOME FOR COOLIDGES

Father Kisses His Son as Hollyhocks Nod.

yielding man, they say of the father, who has begun to mellow in his latter years. A strong, virile figure today, dressed in dark sack suit and "best" line and black felt hat that seems to take on an ecclesiastical dignity.

What will the President do? Well, for ten days he is to be kept in isolation, Secretary Bascom Slemp said after he had seen his chief safely in the arms of his home.

The President does not play golf. There are no horses here to ride, just hills and hay field and pastures, and a few old friends. Mrs. Coolidge has no maid with her, and the couple will live in the utmost simplicity of style, the old New England farm style.

Wood Shed Needs New Shingles.

There is no haying to be done. The roof of the wood shed needs shingling badly. Most of the energy of Plymouth has been spent in fixing up the rooms over Miss Cilley's store, where the President was born. This has been arranged into "executive offices," but it was bare and clean this morning. A stuffed owl sat over in the corner of the room where a plain pine table covered with white oil cloth has been placed if Mr. Coolidge cares to stroll across the street and attend to any business.

A clerk and stenographer came along; also John Mays, the president's colored valet. Col. Coolidge greeted him with same courtesy and politeness which he had shown to more exalted visitors. A dusty old piano occupies one corner of the "offices," for under these low ceilings where Baby Calvin once kicked his heels (and there are women here who recall distinctly that sight) the grange has been holding dances, and the feet of youth and maiden have tripped over the old floors.

First Telephones Are Installed.

A discarded stove, a clock, hanging oil lamps, and a few chairs comprise the furniture. Two telephones have been installed, the first that Col. Coolidge has ever consented to.

No excitement or unusual scenes anywhere. The President would have passed unnoticed, for even the day of his arrival was an uncertainty in Ludlow and Plymouth, had it not been for the newspaper correspondents, camera men and secret service men who trailed him.

Every time he turned around he was "shot." He spoke to his father and the two strolled down the road in the other direction, toward the cheese factory.

The President was said to have the report of the tariff commission on sugar in his hands, when he entered his father's house. "I will decide this judicially and not politically," he said.

Journey Devoid of Incident.

The trip here in a special Pennsylvania railroad train, under charge of Thomas Lipsett, was devoid of incident.

When the President awoke this morning his car, "Ideal," had been parked near the Ludlow station. The valley was deep in fog. He arose at 6 o'clock, as his custom, and at 7 left the car. Only one or two citizens were at the station. He drove immediately through the town, along the shaded Black River highway, which had been improved for his coming, past lakes reflecting the hills and trees, past tiny towns, where two or three persons stared at him, up the old notch road to the village green sheltered by a giant elm.

Out of those hills has come no wealth to the Coolidges. "A few thousand," they say the colonel is worth. For years he may never have seen more than $100 a year in cash saved.

But the house, and the two men there, and this background, have produced that "character" that bids fair to send "Cal" back to the White House for a term in his own right.

SCALDS CAUSE BABY'S DEATH.

Wreckers Attack Old Rush Medical College

Landmark Passes

After nearly fifty years of service, the old Rush Medical college building at Harrison and Wood streets, will soon be but a memory. Built in 1875, thousands of physicians, among them some of the most noted in the country, received their training within its walls.

Noted for the excellence of its equipment, insofar as the building permitted, the college possesses one of the finest collections of medical works in the world. Known as the Mease collection, from its donor, Dr. Edward Mease, a graduate of Rush in the '60s, the library contains 292 volumes, ranging from the sixteenth to the eighteenth century, including first editions of practically all famous medical works.

The work of razing the veteran structure, seen above, is to make way for the new Rawson Laboratory of Medicine and Surgery. The new Rush will be on the University of Chicago campus.

Buys Fags for Another Man; Husband Kills Her

WOMAN'S LEAGUE WORKS TO POLL INCREASED VOTE

Two years' efforts by the National League of Women Voters to "get out the vote" in 1924 promise to bear fruit abundantly, according to Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham of Texas, director of the campaign organized in 1922. The efforts have been nonpartisan but intense, the sole purpose being to stimulate the interest of American women in political and governmental affairs.

Less than one-half the women vote went to the polls in 1920. The league set as its goal for 1924 a 25 per cent increase or a total vote of 40,000,000. Many states have been canvassed by league "flying squadrons" and Mrs. Cunningham says the indications point to a big increase in the size of the vote next November because the women have displayed a keen interest in the science of government, party platforms, political machines and individual records of candidates.

7,000,000 NEW VOTERS TO BE RECKONED WITH

Washington, D. C., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—More than 7,000,000 new voters who have become of age since 1920 will be a powerful factor in deciding the presidential election, according to Simon Michelet, Washington lawyer, who has organized the national get-out-the-vote club.

Michelet has previously estimated that there was a stay at home vote of nearly 26,000,000 in the last presidential election.

Adding these two groups, he shows there are about 33,000,000 eligible voters who did not participate in the 1920 election who may figure in deciding the outcome of the present three cornered contest.

"First Voters" Swing Some Elections.

Michelet has obtained his figures by using the 1920 census and making various computations with respect to groups of different ages shown by the last available records.

Working out the figures by states, he shows that in many important states the number of young men and young women who are eligible to vote for the first time for President is sufficient to decide the outcome.

"Looking first at the national total, the largest plurality ever shown in a presidential election was that of 7,000,000 for Harding and Coolidge in 1920," Michelet said. "Nothing like such a plurality was ever known before, and may seldom be seen again. Ordinarily, the national plurality is a few hundred thousand, that of Wilson in 1916 being 591,000.

Cites Pivotal States.

"But even the 7,000,000 plurality of 1920 is equaled, and probably exceeded, by the number of new citizens of voting age who may go to the polls next November.

"Consider the situation as it affects the leading close, or pivotal, states. Take Indiana. The deciding plurality was only 6,942 in 1916, and 10,700 in 1908. The average margin is seldom over 50,000. Even the 1920 record of 188,000, which may never be known in Indiana again, is exceeded by the number of 1924 first voters, 199,683.

In New York presidential pluralities run from 1,000 for Grover Cleveland in 1884 to over 1,000,000 for Harding and Coolidge in 1920.

President Wilson lost it by 110,000 in 1916 and carried it by 200,000 in 1912, and ordinarily a margin of 150,000 comes close to deciding the issue. There are 661,000 new voters to be reckoned with for 1924 in New York.

Illinois Another Vital State.

"Illinois is another state which Republicans count for heavy pluralities. The largest margin by which President Wilson lost any state in 1916 was the 202,000 of Illinois.

"Census figures indicate that Illinois in 1924 will have 210,458 new male voters and 217,682 young women.

"Michigan presidential electors ordinarily have a margin of around 100,000. Michigan new voters in 1924 number 335,000.

"There are 184,000 new voters in Wisconsin, 172,000 in Minnesota, 169,000 in Iowa, and 238,000 in Missouri.

"When we come to consider the army of new voters by geographic districts, the situation becomes even more interesting. The 2,500,000 first time presidential voters in the southern states, if 50 per cent are able to qualify and vote, are sufficient in number to change the 'solid south.'"

Brig. Gen. Martin Will Be Guest of Honor.

Brig. Gen. Charles H. Martin, assistant chief of staff and G-1, U. S. A., who commanded the Blackhawk division when it went to France, has notified Capt. James C. Russell he will attend the divisional reunion to be held in connection with the American Legion convention at Champaign, Sept. 1 to 3.

NORA BAYES TO MAKE LEW CODY, FILM STAR, HER FIFTH HUSBAND

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Nora Bayes, the American vaudeville star, confirmed today a report of her engagement to Lew Cody, the American film actor.

NORA BAYES.

Three days ago Nora decided to marry Mr. Cody whom she met fifteen years ago in New York. Mr. Cody left London for Paris yesterday. Nora said that according to his wish the wedding would be held in Hollywood in three months, after she has finished her London vaudeville engagement.

Miss Bayes denied that this, her fifth marriage, will alter her intention to remain on the stage. Between films Mr. Cody will join her wherever she is playing. Friends of Miss Bayes declare the couple realized their true feelings toward each other as a result of a motor accident near London two weeks ago.

"We were naturally thrown together," Nora is quoted as saying.

The car overturned and Mr. Cody was injured on the head and Nora's arm was injured.

KID M'COY SOBS AS ALIENIST TRIO INVADES HIS CELL

Woman's Story of Affair Mystifies Police.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Preliminary sanity tests today began the state's efforts to send Kid McCoy to the gallows for the murder of Mrs. Theresa Welnstein Mors. Three experts, Drs. Victor Parkin, Louis Weber, and Paul Bowers, began the examination, which probably will continue until McCoy is brought before the grand jury Tuesday for indictment, according to District Attorney Keyes, who sent the alienists to the city jail today.

The merciless battler of the ring and the man who coldly discarded many women could not restrain his emotion when the alienists entered the big cell in the city jail and his guards told him their mission. One big tear after another trickled down the puffy cheeks, and the Kid employed a silk handkerchief while he turned his back.

Kid to Stay in Jail.

With the sanity tests, and the orders of Detective Captain Herman Cline that McCoy was not to be taken from the jail for meals or the attention of a barber the investigation of Mrs. Mors' mysterious death today took a more searching aspect.

The principal reason for this was the new evidence in the story of Mrs. Iva Martin, occupant of the first floor apartment in the Nottingham building, directly under the "love flat" of McCoy and Mrs. Mors.

Mrs. Martin's story that two men, instead of one were in the McCoy-Mors apartment at the time thes hot was fired, practically wiped out the ex-prize fighter's defense that Mrs. Mors killed herself—but it also multiplied the police troubles in fastening the guilt, for they now must find the second man who was a witness to the woman's death.

Federal Agents in Case.

The new course of the investigation today saw police and federal agents digging into the secret activities of Albert Mors and his divorced wife, in response to repeated indications that they had been engaged in some subrosa activities which concerned jewels and large sums of money.

Jewels worth $40,000, pledged by Mrs. Mors with V. C. Emden, today were held by officials of the federal customs department. Emden was one of the men held up by McCoy in the Mors antique shop last Wednesday morning, when he shot down two men and one woman.

These jewels, it was asserted, represent part of a secret hoard whose possession has been attributed to Mors and his wife for months during which federal men questioned both of them.

The government's interest in putting the gems in escrow is to investigate the question whether they were not smuggled into New York.

BOXING CHAMP NO MATCH FOR HIS BETTER HALF

Being champion welterweight boxer of the U. S. S. Mississippi is one thing, and being able to ward off the blows dealt by his wife is another, according to a bill for divorce filed in the Superior court yesterday in behalf of Joseph F. Bonner. The kind of punishment his wife, Mrs. Louise Spear Bonner, handed him was too much, so yesterday Joseph asked for a divorce. Bonner is now employed by the Crane company and lives at 4826 Winthrop avenue.

The first night of their married life brought a fistic challenge from Mrs. Bonner, the bill filed by Attorney Lloyd D. Heth states. He declined, and attempted to pacify her, but with no avail.

The beatings continued periodically until he became the laughing stock of his fellow sailors. "On diverse occasions his wife broke through his guard and struck him in the face."

Bonner says that his wife's ambition is to have four ex-husbands before she is 21 years old. She is 18 now. Bonner is No. 2.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 16.—The state department today made public an exchange of notes between the United States and Guatemala, whereby each nation agrees to accord to the other "unconditional most favored nation treatment with respect to customs duties and other changes affecting commerce."

The agreement, however, provides that the understanding shall not relate to future commercial relations of the United States with any of its territories, or Cuba, or the Panama Canal zone. Similarly it shall not interfere with Guatemalan relations with Costa Rica, Honduras, Nicaragua and Salvador.

Furthermore, the agreement shall not interfere with "restrictions of a sanitary character, or designed to protect human, animal or plant life or regulations for the enforcement of police and revenue laws."

It was seen by a group of children, who called the police. The body of the Crow boy has not been recovered. The children were drowned after they paddled out in a leaky boat.

Soldier Bug on Hand to Kill the Caterpillars

The arrival of the "stink bug," or soldier bug, to Chicago will in time save shade trees of this vicinity from devastating effects of the Tussock and gypsy moth caterpillars, according to Prof. Conrad E. While insecticides effectively remove these caterpillars from trees, they also kill the stink bug, which is harmless except to caterpillars.

RANK AND FILE OF BRITISH LABOR ANGRY AT CHIEFS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The standards of rebellion against the alleged unlaborlike labor cabinet will be raised wholesale at the twenty-fourth annual conference of the labor party on Oct. 7.

Resolutions are being prepared by various branches to demand the abandonment of "foolish court dress," military apparel, and swords on state occasions; abstention of cabinet members' wives from all except essential gatherings; a standing order against labor candidates in parliament who have been party members less than three years; direct responsibility of government members of the party conference; undertakings by future party leaders to appoint cabinet officials who are not members of the party; submission of all cabinet appointments to the party conference.

Two branches will move: "In view of J. H. Thomas' general behavior he shall be excluded from the cabinet." Twenty-two branches want an affiliation with the communists.

JOE'S PLACE IS CLOSED AFTER DRYS FOOL HIM

Joe (Saved-off) Saizer, who has boasted that he knows every Chicago prohibition agent and professional reformer, at least by sight, was surprised in his bootlegging establishment at 708 South Dearborn street by a couple of "out of town buyers" yesterday.

Once in the place, they said they weren't adverse to taking a little beer. They said the beer was terrible and Mr. Saizer admitted it but offered to guarantee the booze he was putting out. Each partook of the red liquor.

The visitors then walked 100 feet to the prohibition headquarters and reported to Chief Enforcement Officer Charles W. Vursell, who obtained warrants and sent a squad to raid the place. The squad confiscated a quantity of liquor and wine, and arrested Joseph and his head bartender.

Chief Vursell next led raiders to Chicago Heights, where they seized liquor in three places, including the resort of Joe Guzzini at 14th and State streets, where fifteen women inmates interrupted the search by locking all doors.

The North American's breakfast of Bacon and Eggs for 30c proves you get more yet pay less here

If you will figure out just what you get for your money at the North American Restaurant, and compare it with what the same amount of money will buy in other restaurants or hotels, you will realize that our food values cannot be duplicated anywhere.

Take as an example the most popular of breakfast items—Bacon and Eggs. A portion of Bacon and Eggs at the North American consists of 2 fresh eggs, fried in butter, and 4 strips of bacon. With a big sweet roll or fresh toast and butter for 5 cents, and a 2-cup pot of coffee for 10 cents, one has a complete breakfast for only 45 cents.

Many dining-places advertise "Club Breakfasts" of bacon and eggs, rolls and coffee for around 50 or 60 cents. But such breakfasts usually include one egg only, one or two strips of bacon and a single cup of coffee. So at the North American you actually get more food yet pay less.

And here there are no waiters hovering around waiting to be "tipped." So you also save that extra 10, 15 or 20 cents which custom compels one to leave for the waiter in dining-places that include "service."

Fresh "Outdoor" air—cooled to 70 keeps this restaurant comfortably cool

A few of our other specialties:

Cold Sliced Turkey: A generous portion with dressing and cranberry sauce . 50c

Lake Superior Whitefish: A portion, enough for two 60c

Tenderloin Steak: A thick, juicy steak, with French fried potatoes and lima beans 85c

Fried Premium Chicken: Breast of Premium Milk-fed Chicken, with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce . 65c

SNOOPERS SCOUR WILD WAVES FOR FLOATING OASIS

Liner Cabaret Thrills N.Y. and Intrigues Officials.

New York, Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Coast guard officers received orders from Washington today to hunt down and report on the 17,000 ton steamship which lies some fifteen miles off Fire island, for the entertainment of wealthy and thirsty Americans, at prices ranging from $1 for Scotch whisky to $20 a quart for sparkling Burgundy. It was reported from Washington, also, that inquiries might be made of Premier MacDonald of Great Britain as to the identity of the vessel, which carries a British crew.

Officers of the coast guard in Washington had a hurried conference with Acting Prohibition Commissioner Jones concerning the floating hotel, as a result of which orders were sent to Capt. Jones, commander of the New York division of the coast guard, to investigate. The guard cutter Seneca has been ordered to cruise until the palatial floating saloon has been found.

Seek Source of Supplies.

Captains of other cutters also have been instructed to keep a sharp lookout for the ocean cabaret and for other such vessels. Commanders of cutters and coast guard men generally are under orders to uncover the means by which such vessels receive coal and other supplies.

Although the floating cabaret, which carries silverware marked "Frederick Der Grosse," is well beyond the limits defined in the recent treaty between Great Britain and the United States, it was said today that smaller craft have no right to take passengers to a foreign vessel. This is in violation of customs acts. Skippers and passengers may be fined and reprimanded if caught beyond the twelve mile limit. The liner was believed in shipping circles to be the former Kronprinz Wilhelm, rechristened the Von Steuben, of the Old North German Lloyd.

Out of Jurisdiction.

Director R. Q. Merrick said the vessel, of course, was out of his jurisdiction and there was nothing "we can do about it." He said the finding of the liner tended to confirm recent rumors that such sumptuous purveyors of liquor were in existence. While the patrons of the ocean cabaret impressed him as having "more money than brains," he said.

"I think a whole lot more of the people who make the long journey seaward to get a drink than I do of the citizens in New York who slip into speak easies and drink on the sly."

FRENCH SENATOR SAYS GOLD SPOON STORY IS FALSE

New York, Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Lou E. Holland, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, reports he has received a cablegram from Senator Paul Dupuy of Paris stating that the newspaper article widely published in the United States to the effect that after a visit of prominent Americans, including members of the Associated Advertising clubs, at the Elysee, twenty-four gold spoons were missing, was absolutely false.

Mr. Holland's inquiry of Senator Dupuy was: "Is story true gold spoons missing after the visit of American advertisers?" To which Senator Dupuy replied: "Story of missing spoons absolutely false and childish. President Domergue just told me how he was charmed with all your delegates and how he appreciated their splendid behavior and tact. I confirm with pleasure the publicity concerning the excellent impression produced in France by this visit."

Senator Dupuy was chairman of a committee, representing statesmen and business men of France, to extend an official welcome to the publishers and advertisers who visited France following the world convention of advertising at London.

8 HOUR DAY IN STEEL MILLS HAS FIRST BIRTHDAY

Results Satisfactory, but Some Plants Hold Out.

New York, Aug. 16.—[By the Associated Press.]—The partial elimination of the twelve hour working day in the steel industry, which was put into effect a year ago today, has brought results so generally satisfactory that neither manufacturers nor employes in the areas affected would consider a return to the longer hours.

Nevertheless, a large proportion of the men engaged upon basic steel processes still work more than ten hours a day, while the eight hour men generally work seven days a week, said a survey of steel labor conditions by S. Adele Shaw, made public today by the Cabot fund. This fund has financed numerous independent researches in industrial problems, notably Prof. H. B. Drury's study of the twelve hour day in steel, made in 1920.

Full Week Reestablished.

The seven day week in mills where continuous operation is the rule, which was partly eliminated during the depression of 192-, was reestablished in 1922 and perhaps extended when the eight hour day replaced the twelve hour day in many of these works, the report asserted. Moreover, there are many companies that in May, 1924, had failed to do away with the twelve hour shift; independents had not made the change in eastern Pennsylvania, and the Birmingham district independents had not completely installed the eight hour day, said the report.

Emphasizing the fact that the industry "has by no means gone to an eight hour day and a six day week," the survey quotes compilations of the federal department of labor for the pay period of Jan. 16 to 31, to the effect that on blast furnaces less than 9 per cent of the men work forty-eight hours or less a week, 6 per cent work eighty-four hours a week, and 22 per cent work sixty hours. In the open hearth departments, according to the same authority, only 4 per cent work forty-eight hours a week or less, while on the Bessemer converters more than half of the men work forty-eight hours a week.

As to increases in labor required, steel executives were unwilling to give specific figures on the ground that the data covered too short a period to be conclusive; but the report submitted various facts indicating that the increase in production cost as a result of the reduction in working hours would be relatively small.

In the rolling mills, where ten hour shifts superseded twelve hour shifts, with payment on a tonnage basis, there has been no increase in the number of employes, the same output being obtained from twenty hours' labor on the shorter shift as was obtained from twenty-four hours' labor when the men worked twelve hours.

The Iron Age Survey.

The Iron Age, which also conducted a survey, reports that abolition of the twelve hour working day has resulted in a decided improvement in social conditions while not appreciably affecting production, and the seven day labor week is no more prevalent than before the change.

Men employed on continuous work in blast furnaces, excepting those of the United States Steel corporation, work seven days a week, but are allowed a day off if they want it, according to the steel publication. In the Youngstown, O., district, according to independent companies, the twelve hour day has been almost wholly eliminated, but in the blast furnace and coke departments the seven day week prevails, with the eight hour day and the privilege of one day off a week.

In Pittsburgh and the South.

Independents in the Pittsburgh district have made some progress toward reducing working hours, but some companies have been inclined to yield in cases where employes wanted to work twelve hours a day to increase their earnings.

"The Tennessee Coal, Iron, and Railroad company is the only company in the south that has abolished the seven day week and twelve hour day," said James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation. "We also pay from 15 to 25 per cent more wages than other manufacturers in that district."

The tenements suffer almost more when the weather is cool than when it is scorching. When the torrid temperatures descend upon the city the contributions to THE TRIBUNE'S free ice fund roll in. People feel the necessity of this relief among the poor on the hot days.

As soon as the thermometer drops they seem to forget about these unfortunate and destitute families. Yet in the weather which is a relief, the milk spoils and the food cannot be kept fresh without ice. True, it goes farther and lasts longer, but this means that more families are served and oftener.

Contributions Needed.

The funds need your contributions as much these cool days as during the hot weather. There are always more families in need than available funds. The cool weather is an opportunity to reach everybody.

The same is true of Camp Algonquin on the Fox river. This camp maintained each year by funds collected by THE TRIBUNE takes care of hundreds of ailing mothers and sickly children. It gives a vacation to those whose homes are bare of happiness and cheer.

When the houses and pavements in the tenements sizzle Camp Algonquin is needed most. From the sweltering playgrounds and houses to the cool fairyland of the camp means much to poverty stricken families. But even in the cool weather this relief is needed.

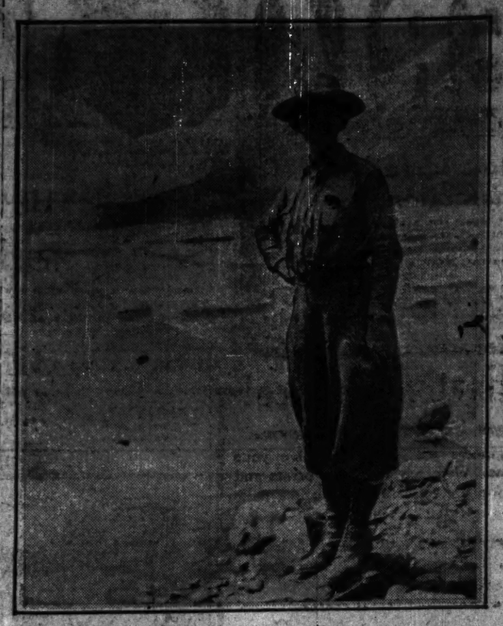
Mothers Need Rest.

The burden bourne by most of these mothers the year round is unbearable and they need a rest. The children are undernourished and need the good clean food and fresh country air. The mothers need the rest and the health bringing sleep. Cool days or hot days these families need this relief.

Both funds need help. There must be no letup. People must be cared for and this takes money regardless of the temperature. Send your contributions to THE TRIBUNE, 7 South Dearborn street. Mark for either fund.

Don't forget Chicago's poor these cool days. They still need ice and air.

BLAZING NEW TRAILS



Miss Edna V. McClelland of the Prairie club at Iceberg lake, Glacier National park.

N. Y. Movie Operators Threaten Strike Sept. 1

New York, Aug. 16.—The darkening of the motion picture houses of New York through a strike of the moving picture machine operators union on Sept. 1 was threatened tonight by the executive board of the organization. It announced that the Theater Owners Chamber of Commerce has refused to arbitrate a new wage scale, and that unless the owners do so, a walkout of the operators may take place.

Braves Danger

A telegram received at the headquarters of the Prairie club yesterday from Seattle, Wash., announced that eleven members of that organization, under the leadership of Miss Edna V. McClelland, have blazed a new trail across the glaciers and through the forests flanking the slopes of Mount Rainier from Paradise inn to White River camp. Snow on the upper slopes of the Stevens, Cowlitz, Williwakos and Frying Pan glaciers made the trip especially hazardous around the crevasses. Once a avalanching snow and ice narrowly missed falling upon the party as it plunged past and spent its force hundreds of feet below. The new trail which traverses the mountain territory known as Chatahbeosah park and Summerland has been named the "Prairie Club Trail."

Haynes Finds the East Is Obeying the Dry Law

Plymouth, Vt., Aug. 16.—Prohibition Commissioner Haynes passed through here today on a tour of inspection of the New England states. Mr. Haynes reported conditions in the section, so far as prohibition is concerned, as "splendid." Only in Boston, he said, is there any difficulty in enforcing the prohibition law.

BOURSKAYA WINS FRESH TRIUMPH SINGING 'DELILAH'

Ravinia Opera Adds to Its Successes.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

If every time an opera company made an addition to its repertoire it did it in the way the Ravinia put on "Samson and Delilah" for a week-end observance last night, the process of going to opera would be considerably more exciting than it is now.

There was a performance new all the way through. Giovanni Martinelli, in one of his finest parts, was the best bait, and Ina Bourskaya, for the first time anywhere, the second of the title, a full set of scenery had been especially constructed for the Ravinia stage, and a great success achieved thereby and the chorus, which has much to do in this opera, had been trained to the last degree of expert ease.

Some Other Innovations.

One expects to hear good singing from the Ravinia chorus and one is seldom disappointed, but here were members of the most impressive profession in the world actually acting and showing by expression rather than gesticulation some connection with what was going on in the stage action. One can hardly say as much of the supernumeraries, one of whom nearly succeeded in puncturing a few choristers with a spear, but there are points beyond which stage management cannot expect to pass. But there was also a ballet, another new thing at Ravinia, which made a welcome addition to the lovely color of the stage picture.

Mr. Martinelli comes near to being the best "Samson" in the experience of this reporter, being superb of voice and energetic, romantic and manly of demeanor, fitted to stir the populace to deeds of violence in the first act or to pour out his soul in the lyric luxuriance of the second.

Stars as Biblical Vamp.

Miss Bourskaya's sheer gorgeousness made her a figure that all screen vamps would do well to look to, plus a voice that is all her own and that added to the flame. A great pair in a great opera.

There was also Giuseppe Danise, as the high priest, somewhat less dramatic of manner than his two companions, but nevertheless giving an able and satisfactory performance, and Leon Rothier in a brief, but beautifully done part. Over all presided Louis Hasselmans at the baton developing the score in masterful fashion.

ILLEGAL OPERATION CAUSES DEATH.

A criminal operation, believed to have been self-performed, is thought to have caused the death of Mrs. Della Gedmaski, 36 years old, 908 West 37th street, yesterday.

The Facts about Oil heat

What you can expect from it. What it costs to install and operate—expert answers to the questions you have in mind

This proved and simple unit—in use for years in thousands of small and large homes—fits into your present heating plant. Pays for itself in what you save. Obtainable on terms which enable you to pay for it as you use it—a NEW plan.

By BYRON K. EATON, B. Sc. of M. E., Member A. S. of H. and V. E.

THE object of this is to give common-sense and unflavored facts about oil heating. Those that follow are based on the experience of many thousands of users in every part of America. They mark the passing of the coal pile and the ash heap.

Is it dependable?

Is oil heat practical? Is it dependable? Can I rely on it like coal? Can I get oil to run it as easily as I can coal?—those are your natural questions.

* * * * *

Virtually every big trans-Atlantic liner built during the last five years is oil burning; practically every battleship, every government vessel. And that applies to English, French and foreign vessels as well as American.

Surely, then, oil burning cannot be measured as an experiment.

The same applies to great railroads, to important industrial plants, to factories, public buildings, etc. Coal as a heating fuel is fast being supplanted.

Coal is dirty, laborious, antiquated. Why should you put up with another winter of it? It is inevitable that you will change to the cleanliness and efficiency of oil heat. And today there remains no possible reason for delay. In Chicago alone more than 2,000 installations prove that Kleen-Heet is not an experiment—but is an advance as necessary and scientific as your telephone or electric lights. Many of these users are in your own neighborhood. We will gladly supply their names—so that you can get their opinions first hand.

Today, an oil wagon will draw up at your door, discharge its load and be on its way in a few minutes—minus the dust and dirt of coal: minus the expense of a man to put it in.

Every consideration is in favor of arranging for a Kleen-Heet installation now.

With Kleen-Heet you simply light the burner at the start of the heating season—that's all.

Then set the thermostatic control at the temperature you want. And it will hold it, night and day, as long as you want it. No cold rooms at night.

Its cost

The cost of operation is equivalent to coal at $12 a ton in the Mid-West. And that is its total cost.

You save the expense of a "furnace man"—say $15 to $25 a month average.

You save ash hauling. You save constant cleaning of papered and decorated walls. For oil heat is clean heat—no dirt, no soot, no ashes.

In hundreds of cases, those savings are amply sufficient to meet the monthly payments on the average size oil-burner.

A type and price for every home

A Kleen-Heet unit may be purchased—on easy payments, as desired—precisely adapted to the heating demands of any size home or other building. This is important, because every home or building differs from others in its particular heating problem. There are inexpensive units for smaller homes—larger units to meet the requirements of larger homes, even apartments, hotels and other big buildings.

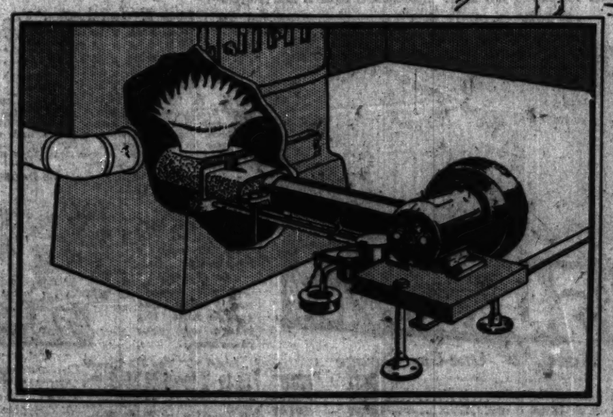
We offer a wider range, to meet your specific needs, than any other oil-burner company. We offer the exact model required for your home—rather than the "closest thing to it."

And the equivalent of an average, two months' coal bill is sufficient for your initial payment.

That is because, under a new plan, Kleen-Heet can be purchased from income rather than capital—an obvious advantage to anyone living on the budget plan.

We should like to send the complete details of this plan to you.

Compare this clean way of taking the oil into your tank for Kleen-Heet, with the dirt and nuisance of the old-fashioned coal wagon. Speed, cleanliness and simplicity, combined with economy.



You simply light the burner—that is all—in this modern way of heating. Then you set the thermostat at any temperature required; and get it, 24 hours a day, without further thought or bother.

The one mistake to avoid

Kleen-Heet is made by the oldest manufacturers of automatic oil-burners; a proved and dependable mechanism. There are 6 exclusive features found in no other oil-burner . . . all covered by patent.

There are thousands and thousands of Kleen-Heets in use in your type of home today. Some for as long as 5 years. Their owners will tell you their experiences. Some live near enough for you to talk to. Most sales are made through present users; one enthusiastic user telling another.

When you consider an oil-burner, don't leap into an unconsidered purchase of a yet-to-be-proved unit. That's the one mistake to avoid. Kleen-Heet is absolutely and unqualifiedly GUARANTEED.

Look for these five things

When you consider an oil-burner

1 Simplicity of Mechanism—Kleen-Heet has fewer parts than any other automatic oil-burner on the market. Nothing complicated to go wrong and cause annoyance. Women particularly appreciate this point. Kleen-Heet is entirely automatic.

2 Proved Performance—Kleen-Heet is not a theoretical type of oil-burner being tested out at the expense of the people who buy them.

Kleen-Heet has proved its performance with thousands of users, under all conditions of use and weather.

3 Installation and Service—We are equipped to render the 100% service we guarantee our users at all times. You are doing business with a direct factory branch which has been here since the company was organized—and will be here next year, and the year after that.

We make them—sell them—install them—service them. Service 24 hours a day—all year around. This point cannot too strongly be considered.

4 The Right Burner For You—Kleen-Heet builds the widest range of burners in the market. Thus we have the exact type needed for your requirements. You do not get the "nearest thing we've got" to what you need. You get the exact installation.

5 The Company Behind It—The Company behind Kleen-Heet is one of the oldest in the oil-burner industry. Solid, dependable, experienced, strongly financed.

TRIBUNE STAGES GREAT REGATTA TODAY

HELEN AGAIN PROVES SUPERIORITY OVER MOLLA

CALIFORNIA MISS BEATS VETERAN IN NET SINGLES

Retains National Title at Forest Hills.

FATHER IS PLEASED

BERKELEY, Cal., Aug. 16.—[United Press.] — "That's fine stuff, fine work," exclaimed Dr. C. A. Wills, Berkeley physician today, when informed of Miss Helen Wills' victory.

Dr. Wills many times has admitted that his only claim to fame is being the champion's father and today he was as pleased as any father could be.

"Mrs. Mallory is a real fighter," he said, "and I'm mighty glad Helen came through all right."

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 16.—[By Associated Press.]—Miss Helen Wills, sturdy, dark haired California school girl, rules supreme as queen of America's tennis courts. The 19 year old Berkeley star proved her right to the national title beyond dispute this afternoon when she slashed her way to an overwhelming victory over Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory of New York in the final singles match, 6—1, 6—3.

HELEN WILLS.

Figuring in her third victory of the day, Miss Wills also captured the doubles championship. Paired with her veteran partner, Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman of Boston, she conquered Miss Eleanor Goss of New York and Mrs. Marion Z. Jessup of Wilmington, Del., in the final round, 6—4, 6—3, after previously disposing of Miss Mary K. Browne and Mrs. T. H. Dudley of Los Angeles in the semi-finals, 9—7, 6—1.

These victories gained Miss Wills a reception which has seldom been equaled in the big West Side club's stadium, for they completed a conquering march by this young westerner probably unequaled in tennis annals in which she added the highest honors to her brilliant triumphs in both the Olympic singles and doubles championship.

No Doubt About Winner.

There was no doubt about the final outcome of the Wills-Mallory encounter from the moment the champion drove across a clean placement for the first point until Mrs. Mallory netted the final shot. It was the third straight year they have fought for the title and Miss Wills, taking only thirty-four minutes to gain her second successive triumph, demonstrated more conclusively than ever that she is Mrs. Mallory's superior.

Coming on top of the thrilling semi-finals yesterday when Miss Wills was forced to three hard fought sets to eliminate Miss Mary K. Browne, former champion, the final was, by comparison, a colorless anti-climax. Helen, except for a brief spell in the second set, was a dominant, coolly confident figure, driving with rare skill and terrific power in an attack that simply smothered her veteran opponent. Analysis of the match showed that Mrs. Mallory earned but five points to thirteen for Miss Wills, while the former champion chalked up 50 errors to her opponent's 38.

Molla Beaten at Own Game.

Beaten at her own game—power and speed—and crushed at every turn, Mrs. Mallory seemed to realize she was battling against hopeless odds. Except for occasional flashes of the forehand power for which she has long been famous, the Norsewoman, who ruled American tennis heights for seven years, was an easy victim for the coast girl. Mrs. Mallory's only spurt came in the seventh and eighth games of the second set, both of which she won, temporarily halting Miss Wills' onward march, but it was only a fleeting rally, due more to a sudden streak of wildness on the part of the champion, than to any improvement in the loser's game.

The match was a back court duel with Miss Wills displaying not only superior tactics, but outdriving and outplaying Mrs. Mallory. Occasionally the champion showed a tendency to misjudge the lines, and weaken in her service, but these faults were few and more than offset by Mrs. Mallory's erratic stroking. At no time did the former champion have complete control of her shots and as a result few of the rallies were prolonged. Mrs. Mallory's service also was impotent and she won it but once, in the seventh game of the final set.

Also Wins Doubles.

Except for a spectacular first set with Mrs. Dudley and Miss Browne, which went to deuce several times, Miss Wills and Mrs. Wightman, the Olympic champions, dominated their two doubles matches. Miss Goss and Mrs. Jessup, who have held the title

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Due to the right handed efficiency of Art Hubbell the Cubs were held to the irreducible minimum in so far as runs were concerned yesterday. Meanwhile one George Harper was busy carving a name for himself as a swatter of note and the result of it all was that young Guy Bush and the other Bruins had to accept the worthless end of a 2 to 0 score in the second combat of the series with the Phils. For Kid Bush, however, the defeat was no disgrace.

The class with which the two clubbers marked their performance was of such a high grade that only seven hits were notched by the two teams. Four of these fell to the lowly Phils and the Cubs got the feat, but the latter three were merely isolated singles whereas two of the hostile taps were of length and Harper produced both. One was a homer and the other a double that occurred after two men had reached base by somewhat fluky means.

Harper Starts Clouting.

Harper's first effort to make himself unpopular with the home rooters was in the sixth frame. He was first up in that round and pulled a line drive into right. Heathcote leaped for the flying pellet, but it had just enough "legs" to elude him and clear the screen in front of the four bits seats.

In the Wake of the News

FOOTBALL LOOMS.

WITHIN a month—four weeks from tomorrow, to be exact—Big Ten gridiron squads will begin practice for this fall's contests. It promises to be the greatest season the middle west has ever known, even if the almost intact Illini, which last season tied with Michigan for the title, appear at this time to hold a marked edge over their rivals.

Allowed eight games instead of seven as formerly, athletic directors have scheduled more tilts than usual outside the Big Ten, including several intersectional games. Notre Dame enters the conference picture, and Rockne's always formidable outfit will cut some lively capers against Wisconsin and Northwestern at Madison and Evanston, respectively.

With six conference games carded, Chicago has gone outside the circle to schedule Missouri and Brown in its first two combats. Illinois journeys to Nebraska for its opener. Michigan, with Miami and Michigan Aggies as its extras, sticks to the middle west. Wisconsin takes on North Dakota, Ames, Coe, and Notre Dame.

Minnesota wanders a bit to book North Dakota, Haskell, Ames, and Vanderbilt. Iowa has Teachers' college, Lawrence, and Butler. Ohio State confines itself to the Big Ten and smaller Ohio colleges. Purdue adopts a similar schedule, with Indiana colleges filling in. Indiana will entertain Louisiana in an early game. Northwestern, in addition to its fixtures, has South Dakota, Cincinnati, Michigan Aggies, with Notre Dame for its climax effort.

While there is no outstanding intersectional affair, the schedule, as a whole, offers plenty of thrills, which will become thrillier as the season advances.

Table Golf.

Golf can be played on card tables in one or two forms as follows:

Match play (foursome or twosome, as desired)—Deal one card to each player and to the lowest player goes the hole at any specified amount per hole. Ace is low, followed by deuce, etc., up to king, which counts 13.

Medal play—Deal card to each player in turn, with all cards above ten eliminated from deck. Keep track of points per hole. Reshuffle cards after nine deals (or holes) and deal another nine. At end of game low score hand collects from other players all over his total. Julius.

A Boy Again.

There's a winding road of my truant dreams
That leads through a wonderland of flowers
With intricate paths, of the woodland folk,
That baffle men's ken and destructive powers.
There are massive stones, from the rocky steep
Shielded from cold, when the north wind blows,
But catching the warmth of the noonbeam's smile—
And there the earliest wildflower grows.
It follows the course of a sparkling stream
To the red covered bridge, near the Rockwell mill,
On, through a canopied leafy vale,
To the crest of the rugged Benny hill.
Its maze of beauty and mystery
To boyish minds a lure imparts;
A road of dreams and vicious fate,
To Elysian fields, for lovers' hearts.
In fancy I discard time and care
And ruthless edicts, imposed on men;
And traverse that road an untaxed
Of dueling—a boy again!

ARIEL IS PICKED AS RICHARDSON CUP DEFENDER

Ariel, the speedy R boat, owned and skipped by Ogden T. McClurg, will defend the Richardson trophy which it won last year in the international yacht races here Sept. 16. The McClurg sloop earned this honor yesterday off Belmont harbor, by winning the sixth of the series of races sailed under the auspices of the Chicago Yacht club.

The victory of Ariel also gave its owner the Sir Thomas Lipton cup, this cup race being decided in the same race series as the Richardson cup defender series.

Piled Up 38 Points.

Selection of Ariel to defend the Richardson trophy came after its victory of yesterday and three other triumphs in the series of six races. Ariel was also credited with a pair of first places in the Lipton cup races.

During the races McClurg's sloop accumulated a total of 33 points, which easily established it as the best all around boat of the nine that fought it out for the honors. Gossoon, which collected 35 points, was Ariel's princi-

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Featured by the appearance of some of the country's leading oarsmen, canoeists and divers, the third annual water carnival of The Tribune will be held in the Lincoln park lagoon this afternoon, starting at 2:30 o'clock.

This event, a civic affair, is staged primarily for Chicago's sports loving public, who have read of four and eight oared shell races between crews of the leading universities of America, not to mentioned international races and those held in connection with the Olympic games. This same public has read and heard about the great cutter races between crews from the various battleships of our navy, but only a few have seen the stroky men, stripped to the waist, tug at the oars in an endeavor to win.

COMMANDER FOWLER.

Unison of action in an eight oared shell or cutter is one of the prettiest exhibitions of all water sports. The men hasten their strokes at the commands of the diminutive coxswains and the eight oars of the shell and ten of the cutter strike the water as one.

Replica of Great Regattas.

A miniature replica of such national and international water events will be staged for the public this afternoon free of charge. Capture to one of Chicago's largest playgrounds is all that it will cost any admirer of water sports. All races will be over half mile courses and both sides of the lagoon with the sloping banks will give all an opportunity to see the races.

Not only will the shell races and the cutter contest command their share of attention, but the three canoe events which have attracted the cream of the paddlers in and around Chicago will be watched with interest. Trials were held yesterday to cut the field of starters in each final to four. Among the starters are Capt. Vincent Smith of the Lincoln Park club, unquestionably one of the best candeists in the country. Capt Smith will compete in the singles and team, with James Marshall in the doubles. Both will be members of the Lincoln Park four.

During the short intermissions between the finish and the start of the various races, men and women divers will perform from the high and low board under the direction of Harry Hazelhurst, swimming instructor at the Chicago Y. M. C. A.

War Canoe Race.

Still another event of interest will be the war canoe race. In this event the Lincoln Park boat club will meet a crew picked from other canoe clubs. Each canoe will be manned by thirteen paddlers and is among the most interesting of canoe competition.

The carnival, however, will be featured by the eight oared shell race between the crew of the Lincoln Park Boat club and the doughty middies from Culver Military academy. They will race over a half mile course. Culver won the event last year, while Lincoln Park was successful at the first carnival. Both crews are eager to settle the question of supremacy and the oarsmen will bend every effort to bring about the desired result. The local club crew has been developed by Jack Corbett, an experienced oarsman.

PLUM LAKE GOLF CUP CAPTURED BY RUTHERFORD

Sayner, Wis., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—In the annual tournament of the Plum Lake Golf club J. J. Rutherford of Chicago defeated A. M. Evans of Wausau in the final match of the first flight, 4 and 3, winning the President's cup.

The second flight was won by S. Harrison of Kansas City, Mo., over R. Wagner of Chicago, 2 and 1, the victor winning the Wilmot cup.

The directors' cup in the third flight was won by T. Johnson, Wausau, 4 and 2, from McLaughlin of Laurel, Miss., while in the fourth flight D. C. Everest of Wausau nosed out H. Haggie of Wausau, 2 and 1.

Midwick Club Captures Junior Polo Crown, 16-3

New York, Aug. 16.—Midwick Country Club of California defeated the Rockaway Polo team 16-3 in the final match for the junior polo championship at Meadowbrook today.

This is the first year a western team has won the junior championship. Eric Pedley, an aspirant for number one position on the American International challenge cup team, scored only one goal in the first half but came back in the second period with seven. Raymond Belmont starred for the losers.

Former Wisconsin Grid Captain Joins Benedicts

Delavan, Wis., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Guy M. Sundt, captain and full back of the University of Wisconsin football team in 1921, and who since his graduation has been director of athletics at Ripon college, Appleton, was married today to Miss Mary E. Earnest at the C. D. Earnest home in this city.

Sundt was picked as all conference full back in the 1921 season.

Cleveland Sends Cheeves to Kansas City A. A. Club

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 16.—Pitcher Virgil Cheeves of the Cleveland club of the American league has been obtained by the local American association club under an optional agreement, and Guy Morton, pitcher, who came to the local team from Cleveland, has been released to Indianapolis, it was learned today.

Comiskey Celebrates 65th Birthday at Summer Home

Ashland, Wis., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—President Charles A. Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox visited Ashland today. He will remain here several days to attend the Apostle Islands pageant. Comiskey celebrated his sixty-fifth birthday at his summer home at Eagle River yesterday.

and a former coach at Princeton university. Commander Fowler has trained the Culver eight. Fowler was a member of the Navy crews of a few years back and looked upon as one of the most efficient crew mentors in the country.

In the eight oared shell race Culver will row along the west bank of the lagoon and Lincoln Park along the east bank.

Culver will have the east bank in the cutter race and will have cutter No. 3, Great Lakes will have No. 4, and row along the west bank.

In the doubles and fours Peoria oarsmen have chosen the course on the east bank and Lincoln Park the west.

Single Sculls Attract Interest.

The cutter race will bring together the crews of Culver and Great Lakes Naval Training station. A.T. "Shoes" Sandus, who has drilled the navy crew, claims his outfit is better than the one of last year, which won over Culver and the Illinois Naval Reserve. In fact, Sandus has had his men on the water for the last ten days as early as 4:30 o'clock in the morning.

Still another race in which oarsmen are taking a keen interest is the half mile for single sculls. This event will bring together three of the best oarsmen in the middle west. Elmer Flood of the Illinois Valley Yacht and Canoe club of Peoria won the junior championship at the central states regatta. August Muckler of the Western Rowing club of St. Louis won the senior title at the same event, while Charles Miner won the quarter mile dash at the St. Louis regatta. It, therefore, will be seen this half mile race will have an important bearing on the single sculls championships of the middle west.

The singles will be part of the dual regatta between Lincoln Park Boat club and the Illinois Valley Yacht and Canoe club. Both organizations will be represented in the doubles and fours, both of which will be pulled over a half mile course. All races will start at the south end of the lagoon and finish in front of the boat club house.

Tribune Pays Expenses.

In staging this interesting spectacle, THE TRIBUNE is paying all expense of the visiting oarsmen in addition to giving prizes to all contestants, including those who give exhibitions.

A trophy will be given the winning crew of the eight oared shell race, while members of the winning eight will be rewarded with standard gold TRIBUNE medals. The crew of the losing shell will receive silver medals. The same conditions will be followed in the cutter race between Great Lakes and Culver and the dual regatta between Lincoln Park and the Illinois Valley Yacht and Canoe club.

In the canoe competition the club whose representatives score the greatest number of points on a basis of five for first, three for second, and one for third will be given a trophy, while the winners of first, second, and third places will be given gold, silver, and bronze medals, respectively.

Plenty of Fans on Hand.

Culver enthusiasts living in and near Chicago will be on hand to rpot for the middies, while a special rate will enable many Peoria boating fans to make the trip. Miss Marjorie Valentine, hostess at Great Lakes, will be in charge of a party from the lakes who will root for the navy cutter crew, while Lincoln Park oarsmen and canoeists will not lack for support from the banks and stands.

Canoeists Qualify.

Trials were held yesterday in the three canoe events in order to permit a reasonable number to start with safety in today's finals. The Lincoln Park Boat club qualified the most paddlers and some keen competition is expected in the finals. Following are the qualifiers:

Single canoe, half mile—Vincent M. Smith, Dick Strom, David Thom, James Marshall, Lincoln Park; R. Worthman, Dolphins; A. C. Ebbesen, Columbia.

Doubles—Vincent Smith and James Marshall, David Thom and Dick Strom, Lincoln Park; C. Davis and H. Worthman, W. Smith and J. Greiner, Dolphins; A. C. Ebbesen and Johnny Kroger, Columbia.

Club fours—Dolphins [H. Worthman, J. Greiner, C. C. Davis, Harry Johnson]; Lincoln Park [James Marshall, Dick Strom, David Thom, Vincent Smith]; South Shore [C. B. Packer, A. H. Packer, Dan Dow, Earl Coombs Jr.]; Columbia [A. C. Ebbesen, Johnny Kroger, P. O. Black, Harry Marsh].

MACKS WIN TWO.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 16.—Sweeping up Cleveland in both sections of the double header today was easy for Philadelphia. The Macks won the first, 3 to 1 and then took the second, 7 to 6. Ed Rommel, winner of the opening game, started the second game, but was dismissed at the end of the fifth. Scores:

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

New York, Aug. 16.—[Special.]—In one of the most exciting ball games of the year, New York's Yankees, in a desperate fight for another pennant, beat the White Sox today in the first game of the series, 3 to 2, but they were licked, 2 to 1, even when the last ball was hit until old Sol, glaring from the western sky, shot his sharp and blinding rays right into the eyes of Maurice Archdeacon and the long fly ball that should have been caught for the third out, escaped and went bounding on out toward the outer field fence, making it possible for the tying and winning runs to come home.

It was about the toughest bit of luck ever seen on a ball field and prevented little Mike Cvengros from being the proudest man on Broadway tonight. If the sun hadn't interferred, Mike surely would have possessed a grand and glorious victory over the big champions, because he made them look foolish with few exceptions from the start to the finish of the battle.

Sox Defense Cracks.

Going into the ninth, Mike had a margin of one run on which to work and he might not have had the least bit of trouble even with the sun plotting against him, if the Sox defense hadn't cracked for the first time during the contest. Whitey Witt was first up and died feebly on a soft fly to Falk. Dugan was next and bounced a rather nasty one down to shortstop.

Our newest recruit, young Mr. Morehart, made a valiant effort. He got the ball and cut loose. Probably a good throw would have nailed the man, but the kid heaved it over Sheely's head. Dugan was allowed a hit because of the tough chance and went to second on the bum heave.

Ruth was next. Before pitching to him there was a conference at the lench between Catcher Ray Schalk and Manager Evers. Apparently it was decided to make him hit a ball with plenty of stuff on it or else wait. Anyway Mike cut loose with plenty of curves and he made Babe swing and miss one and foul off another. Finally with the call three and two the Babe walked, because he wouldn't swing at a low curve.

Mike Fans Meusel.

This brought up Bob Meusel, a most dangerous slugger against a southpaw but Mike continued to put something on the ball and Meusel fanned.

Pipp then came for the final effort and managed to connect for a simple but long fly to center field. Archdeacon had to run back only a few feet to get under it, and everybody rooting for New York groaned and everybody rooting for Chicago cheered, for it looked like a sure out.

Then Archdeacon was seen to flounder and become frantic. He had lost the ball. It came down probably within two feet of his shoulders, but went bounding away toward the far and distant fence. The New York groans were suddenly turned into screams of joy and the thousands who were pulling for the Sox groaned with despair. It was only a jog for Dugan and Ruth to score. Pipp ran around to third and then turned off to the clubhouse. The game was over and the Yankees were sure of staying in first place for at least another day.

Babe Hits Double.

Sam Jones and Waite Hoyt pitched for the big champs. The Sox knocked two well earned runs off Jones in the sixth. A single by Collins, a pass to Sheely, a single by Falk, and a sacrifice fly by Kamm did the business. It was enough business, too, to win, if Old Sol hadn't been bribed or something by New York.

The Yankees scored one run in the seventh when the Babe slashed a two-bagger down the right foul line with a man on second and a man on first. That was the only run they deserved.

Looked as if the Sox deserved another in their half of the ninth when Hooper made a great dash from third to the plate on a bounder by Cvengros to Scott. Lots of folks, including Hooper, Evers, and a thousand fans, thought sure as shooting old Harry beat the play. Would have been nice to have had that run, too, when Old Sol flimflammed the Sox out of the game a few minutes later. Old Sol is a bum sport.

GRAND Avenue Congregational nine clinched the championship of the west division in the Church A. A. league, which finished its season schedule yesterday, winning 2 to 1 over Portage Park Baptist at Homan and Division streets. For eight innings Barrows and Morris hurled on even terms, but in the final session the latter weakened a bit and allowed a Grand Avenue man to nick the plater with the decisive counter. Score:

SPEEDY SANOLA WINS 8TH RACE AT HAWTHORNE

BY FRENCH LANE.

Speedy Sanola, from Kentucky, won her eighth victory of the Chicago racing season out at Hawthorne yesterday. She beat her greatest rival, The Runt, by a half length at the wire, and also raced into defeat the classiest band of sprinters that has yet faced the barrier since Hawthorne's gates opened early last month.

There was no fluke about the victory of the fleet Blue Grass miss. She just ran one of her customary honest races, over a track that was a couple of seconds slower, within exactly two seconds of the record. She boosted her total winning efforts at the west side track to eight in ten starts, and except for Black Gold is the greatest money winner of the season.

Sanola Cuts Loose.

Sanola came from behind to win this race. Jockey Fronk kept her back in fourth and fifth place during the early running, the pace for which was cut out by Brunswick. The Runt was always closeup and Marionette and Sanola were switching positions as the first three furlongs were reeled off.

They were well down in the stretch still in this position when Fronk turned Sanola loose, and it was soon a thrilling battle between Barrett on The Runt and Fronk on Sanola. A dozen strides out Sanola pointed her nose into the lead, and despite Barrett's frantic efforts to shake up The Runt he dropped back inch by inch on the trip to the wire.

Marionette got third money and was floundering badly, but only had to move a little in reserve to outstay Brunswick, which had quit cold in the last eighth.

Holiday Crowd Turns Out.

The race featured one of the finest days' racing since Hawthorne opened. Big fields accepted the issue in every event, and the contests were so open that all a punter had to do was pick a couple of winners and go home with profits in his pockets.

A crowd of almost holiday proportions turned out. A warm sun was beating down an hour before post time and the track, which was only a trifle slow when the first race was called, improved as each event was run off.

Aside from Sanola's sparkling victory there was another race which held the eye of the public, it being the Plamondon handicap, third on the program. C. W. Riedinger's great colt Giblon was installed the favorite, but at odds so liberal that the lawnites did Giblon Wins Easily.

It was all but a walkaway for Giblon, as he jumped into the lead as the barrier lifted and made every post a winning one. It qualified him handsomely for the $15,000 Chicago special to be run at Hawthorne next Saturday.

Old Red Wingfield finally showed an inclination to run in this race, but he picked out a bad spot when he attempted to head the flying Giblon. He got up to grab second money, with Cannon Shot third at the wire. The Roll Call had been among the leaders in the first part of the journey, but he was out of it from the head of the stretch on home. The race was named After Al Plamondon, president of the Hawthorne Hockey club, and he was on hand with Mrs. Plamondon to decorate the winner after the official numbers had been hung out.

While thrilling contests were provided in most of the other races, only one of them got much of a tumble from the big Saturday crowd. That was Mark Master's triumph in the second. He carried the colors of the Chicago insurance broker, Herbert G. Schimp, to victory, and as he was a red hot favorite, the crowd broke loose with a mighty cheer when he came down to win easily from Moon Magic and Louis Rubenstein.

Outsider Upsets Dope.

Colfin twisted the form when he captured the opener from Devil Girl and Great Lady, while Mary Ellen O tossed over another favorite when she won the fifth, getting the verdict over Wong Bok and Hoy. Sagamook was the one the public fancied, but was always outrun.

Huonec was just able to outstay Virginius to win the last with Yorick running third.

CENTRAL A. A. U. STARS

HORATIO FITCH. ROBERT AYRES. KARL ANDERSON.

RAPID PROGRESS IS MADE ON AURORA OVAL

Rapid progress is being made in the building of the new mile track at the Exposition Fair grounds at Aurora where the Fox Valley Business Men's Racing association will conduct a 25-day race meeting starting Sept. 5.

Enlarging the half mile track into a mile oval according to President Charles E. Ford will mean an expenditure of close to $75,000.

Track Superintendent Keegan says that Aurora will be the fastest track in the country when completed.

To Have Long Finish.

When completed the new mile track will resemble the Aqueduct, N. Y. course. Some of the big race men say Aqueduct with its long stretch furnishes plenty of exciting finishes and the same will be the case at Aurora.

The track will be ready in plenty of time for morning workouts. Trainers will use the half mile course while the mile affair is being built. The inside half mile affair will be kept intact so that fair officials can have harness events run at any time.

Aurora officials are building a new paddock and jockey room and there will be no charge for paddock admission.

Special Train Service.

The fact that there will be special train service direct from Chicago to the grandstand will help the Kane county meeting. The trip may be made in one hour and fifteen minutes.

It was at the same Aurora institution that Black Gold, three time derby winner, was rested up last fall. It will be remembered that Mrs. Oots' great money getter grazed in the Aurora pastures and was put into shape for his three-year-old career. Trainer Webb always claimed that the Aurora water is beneficial for racers and if the occasion ever arises will be glad to bring Black Gold or any other of his campaigners back to Fox River valley.

NORTH SHORE TURF MEET

Gen. John J. Pershing may be the dominating figure at the opening of the North Shore Jockey club's nineday running at the North Shore polo race track on Aug. 30.

Officers of the 65th cavalry division, which will headline the day with drills and a polo game as a feature of the Chicago Carnival Industrial exposition in connection with the running meeting, wired the army chief last night and expect to have him as their guest. Other military units here will assist in arranging the program.

Announcement is made by officials of the Jockey club that feature races will be run on each of the first five days. On opening day the Gen. Pershing handicap will carry an added $1,000. This is for 3 year olds and up. The Stockyards Derby will be the attraction on Aug. 21, while on Labor day the feature race will be the Union Labor handicap, carrying an added purse of $1,200.

On Tuesday the Chicago Day handicap will be run for a purse of $1,000. This event is for 2 year olds over a distance of four and one half furlongs. The Uptown Chamber of Commerce handicap will be staged on Wednesday for 3 year olds and up.

The North Shore handicap, which will be the final feature on Saturday, Sept. 6, will carry the largest purse of the meeting.

OLYMPIC STARS IN CENTRAL A. A. U. MEET

Stirring competition for the team trophy is expected in the Central A. A. U. track and field championships at Stagg field Saturday, when the I. A. C. and C. A. A. squads hook up. Each team is expected to have its full strength in the field, with many Olympic stars competing.

This will be the first time since 1921 that the Chicago A. A. has been in the outdoor title tests. They held the title from 1915 to 1921 without a break. In 1922 and 1923 the games were held in Detroit, and in the absence of the C. A. A. the I. A. C. cleaned up by a huge margin. In the last three indoor meets, however, the I. A. C. has won only after a hard fight.

The C. A. A. is a slight favorite for the title this year, as its men have been in better training than the tri-color athletes. Horatio Fitch, quarter miler, who broke a world's record in the Olympics, and Laddie Meyers, member of the pole vault squad, are practicing daily.

Karl Anderson, Gus Pope, and Archie Dowding of the I. A. C. squad also have returned. The remaining members, Harold Osborn, Ivan Riley, Ray Watson, Joie Ray, Ray Buker, and Ray Dodge, left Ireland yesterday and may arrive in time for the contests. Aside from the two big clubs there will be a scattering of small club representatives and unattached athletes.

SPEER IS WINNER OF SACKETT CUP IN SWIM SPRINT

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Charley Speer, former Mercersburg academy and New York A. C. aquatic star, today joined the list of winners of the William P. Sackett cup, oldest perpetual swimming trophy in the country, when he raced to a decisive victory in the Schuylkill river at Miquon.

Speer, carrying the colors of the Garden Court S. P., defeated five of the fastest sprint swimmers in this section of the country to annex the honors. Ed Bardo placed second to Speer, trailing the former national scholastic title and record holder by about three yards. Horace Weil of the Germantown Boys' club was third and Joe McQuillan, Philadelphia Turngemeinde, fourth. The winner's time was :62 3-5.

Caldwell Wins Southern Net Crown in Straight Sets

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 16.—Jack Caldwell of Atlanta won the southern tennis championship here today, defeating Dan Murray of New Orleans in the finals at Biltmore Forest Country club courts. Caldwell outclassed Murray in every department of the game and won in three straight sets, 6—2, 6—3, 6—2.

Canuck Pair Wins Match from Hagen and Kirkwood

Toronto, Aug. 16.—Andrew Ray, professional of the Lambton club, and Arthur Russell, Lakeview club, defeated Walter Hagen, British open champion, and Jon Kirkwood of Australia, 2 up and 1 to play in an exhibition match at Lakeview today. The Commercial club playground was third with 18 points. Five hundred and sixty athletes, surviving the tryouts in which 2,000 of Chicago's youthful stars competed took part in the track and field meet. The points were won in the junior, intermediate, and senior divisions.

Following the disqualification of Gidlund, Unique A. C. distance man, the Nurmi of the games was Tom O'Neil of McKinley playground, who galloped in first in the 880 yard and mile events. Gidlund was declared ineligible because he had competed for another club within the last year.

Wudi Wins Century.

Joseph Wudi, the Seward sprinter, took the century sprint in :10 1-5, from one of the largest fields of the day. Surviving five preliminary heats and two semi-finals, he tore over the cinders in a manner which marks him as a future great.

In the intermediate division, with lads between 14 and 17 years of age as the contestants, Harry Donihi of Franklin park playground was the outstanding performer. Donihi's record for the day included firsts in the 75 and 220 yard sprints and thirds in the broad jump and hop, step, and jump.

Frank Navismal of the victorious Douglas park crew was another outstanding performer in the intermediate division. He won the broad jump and ran third in the half mile.

Colored Star Disqualified.

In the junior division, the summaries had to be revised when it was found that Spencer Thornton, colored, of Forrestville playground, who had totaled the most points in that division, was ineligible on two counts—having participated for a Y. M. C. A. within the last year, and being over the age limit.

In the new alignment, William Hogan of the Welles Park playground and Shivers of LeMoyne topped the field. Hogan took first in the high jump, and fourth in the quarter mile run; Hogan leaped the farthest in the broad jump and came in fourth in the 50 yard sprint.

Swim Events Today.

The Olympics will continue through today. At the municipal pier the swimming contests are scheduled, and the playground stars will take to the water and do their stuff there this afternoon.

Col. Horatio B. Hackett is referee of the "Olympics" and as is customary with his programs, things are being run off on the dot. Summaries:

WESTERN OPEN ALL THAT'S LEFT ON GOLF CARD

CAN YOU BEAT IT?

HERE'S a record from Gibson City, Ill., where on the local course, C. A. Wade made the nine hole course in 32, one over par but took only eight putts. At the other hole he sank a twenty-five yard approach. His companions on the round were J. W. McCall and George H. Nix of Gibson City.

BY JOE DAVIS.

With the completion of the western junior championship at Briergate last week, the Western Golf association has cleared its schedule with the exception of its twenty-fourth open championship carded for Sept. 4 to 6 at the Calumet Country club.

The western open always has been popular with the professionals, and there is every indication that all the leaders of the middle west will be on hand and a strong contingent from the Atlantic coast golfing centers.

Jock Hutchison, who won the title at Memphis last year by a brilliant display, his total of 281 being six shots ahead of the 287 made by Bobby Cruikshank, Walter Hagen, Joe Kirkwood, and Les Diegel. Scores will run higher this year, as the Calumet course is more difficult than that of the Colonial club of Memphis.

Among the stars expected at Calumet next month are Walter Hagen, the British open champion, Cyril Walker, the national open champion, Bobby Cruickshank, Joe Kirkwood, Leo Diegel, Jim Barnes, Bob MacDonald, Johnny Farrell, and Bill Mehlhorn. As the Professional Golfers' Association championship will start at French Lick Springs Sept. 15 a number of the eastern players probably will go there from Chicago for a few days practice.

Locally the big event of the week is the Cook County amateur championship starting tomorrow at Garfield Park. There will be the usual big entry. On the short Garfield course three's are more necessary than fours, and as mistakes are not severely punished it will, as usual, be a battle of the putters.

Other events of note are the annual tournament of the Briergate Braves at Briergate, on Wednesday, the annual Plae-Day tournament of the Park Ridge Country club on Thursday and the annual Pater-Filius tournament of the Midlothian Country club on Friday.

RAVISLOE.

Ravisloe members will visit Northmoor today to compete in the annual interclub event. Golf, tennis, bridge and field games will make up the program of events.

Finalists in Class A will be Ernie Gallaher vs. E. C. Tubbs. Gallaher in the semi-final round defeated A. Martin, 2 up, while Tubbs advanced by a similar margin against C. C. Darnell.

Darnell won the medal play event for Class A players, with 84—12—72. In the blind Mogenson topped the field with 91—16—75.

Other semi-finalists will be L. Hebbard vs. "Cal" Smith. Gilbert Roach won the junior championship title after going to the home green against Kenneth Morrell. J. W. Floyd, 2 up, and H. L. Kemp, 3 down, were the respective winners in the match play event over the No. 1 course.

Woods and Waters by Bob Becker

HUNTING SEASON WILL SOON OPEN.

WITH the hunting season just about a month away, it's not a bit too early for gunners to begin their preparations for some fall sport. Opening day sneaks up before a fellow knows it. Here it is mid-August when we are thinking of camping and fishing and yet one can unlimber the shotgun on ducks and snipe only one month hence.

There are usually some chores for the hunter to do as he prepares for fall shooting, not the least of which is lining up a few places where he can sling shot without danger of being arrested for trespassing. The duck hunters will have to paint up decoys and attend to other little tasks between now and opening day.

This is the time of the year when not only duck hunters but also rabbit and squirrel shooters should do a little scouting for lands on which they can hunt. The wise man with the "forward look" keeps his eye peeled at this time of the year for likely spots, makes friends with some farmers, and gets permission for shooting later in the season. Better yet, line up three or four fellows and secure shooting privileges on several farms. It doesn't cost a mint of money and is one sure way of getting some sport this fall. There is no use denying the fact that this is the system which is becoming the vogue, among hunters. Farmers that are tired and disgusted with all hunters because a few irresponsible gunners have trampled over their lands and destroyed property and everything that lives, from cows to tame geese, are usually keen for such an arrangement. It sure is a great thing for hunters to have a "huntin' home" and if a fellow really wants shooting this leasing arrangement is a good investment.

A good week-end trip for automobile driving duck hunters is to tour along the Illinois river and scout for shootin' grounds. It isn't a bit too "previous" to be getting acquainted and making dates with hunting guides. Open hunting grounds are getting scarcer every year. Many of the fellows who take in hunters make dates a year ahead. If a city hunter wants to horn in he'd better hop to it. It's a great feeling to sit back when the duck season comes on, knowing that you're all set for grub, sleeping accommodations, live decoys, and blinds, and all you have to do is wait until a wire arrives telling you to come along with the shootin' irons.

MISS CUMMINGS GOES EAST FOR NATIONAL MEET

Miss Edith Cummings, the national and western champion, has gone east to prepare for the women's national tournament at the Rhode Island Country club Sept. 1. Miss Cummings and Miss Glenna Collett, former national champion, will appear in a number of exhibition matches against men players, over some of the eastern courses. There will be no English players of note at Providence, but Canada will be represented by several of its leading players.

Entries for the annual Pater-Filius tournament of the Midlothian club, which will be held Friday, should be sent to Andrew Christ Jr., chairman of the tournament committee at the Midlothian club, Hue Island. Other members of the committee are Charles W. Booth, Frank Bostwick, Leo P. Cummings, C. B. Dashiell, R. A. Dolan, and Lloyd B. Maxwell. The entry fee is $10, and includes luncheon and dinner for father and son, but not caddy fees. Play will be at thirty-six holes, handicap applying. A prize will be awarded for low gross.

The eighth round of the Daily Fee championship will be staged today, with Budlong Woods at Mid City, Big Oaks at Greenview, Galewood at Harlem, and Evergreen at Oak Hills. Eldridge Robinson, winner of the western junior championship, is a member of the Evergreen team. His consistent golf has had much to do with Evergreen's unbroken string of victories in the Daily Fee championship games.

Walter Crowe, who is the only local player in the men's division to hold two golf titles, will be called upon tomorrow at Garfield park club to defend the Cook county amateur crown. Crowe's other mark of distinction is the Illinois public parks title. Arrayed against the champion will be a field of at least 100, including several over whom he triumphed in the state meet. Play will start at 8 o'clock. The course will be closed to the public during these hours.

Invading British golfers who will oppose the United States team at Garden City, Sept. 12 and 13, are scheduled to arrive in New York Aug. 26. The team, according to official advices, will include Cyril J. T. Tolley, St. Andrews, captain; O. C. Bristowe, West Byfleet; Maj. Charles O. Hezlet, Royal Portrush; W. L. Hope, Turnberry; Dennis H. Scott, Roehampton; W. A. Murray, West Hill; Robert Scott Jr., Glasgow; Hon. Michael Scott,

RACERS WILL TRY TO BREAK AUTO RECORDS TODAY

Spectacular racing is scheduled for this afternoon at the North Shore Polo club speedway at Lincoln and Peterson avenues when Sig Haughdahl and his 180 miles an hour Wisconsin Special, and Fred Horey, with his Miller eight, make their attempt to life local speedway records.

The two drivers head the fastest field of cars that has been on the north shore half mile track this year, and both are entered in special match races in addition to the regular five and fifteen mile events.

While there will be three five mile events to qualify the field for a fifteen mile final, the match races, three of which are scheduled, are expected to provide most of the thrills. Haughdahl, who is the fastest driver on dirt tracks in the country, and has a victory over Ralph De Palma to his credit, will drive his powerful Fiat against George Beck in one of the events. In the second Cliff Woodbury will pilot his Frontenac in a five mile race with Fred Horey of Joliet for a purse of $1,000. Fuzzy Davidson and Sonny Talamont are matched for the third special event.

The track is in excellent condition and will not be affected by a light rain. Time trials will start at 1 p. m. and continue until 2:30, when the races will start. Busses will meet Lincoln avenue street cars at the end of the line and elevated trains at Granville station.

CARD OF EXIT PROBLEMS.

PROBLEMS involving the finesse of exit are the most fascinating of all that occur in the game of bridge. Not all these problems, however, are so difficult as those which are given the declarer in notrump declarations.

There are more easy card situations offered the opponents of the declarer in no-trump declarations than occur in declared trump deals, or than are offered the declarer himself.

The declarer's problems, however, frequently call for great subtlety and rapid thinking.

One of the finest situations is that which is illustrated by the deal below.

THE HANDS.

[illegible]

Score 6—2. Rubber game. No. 4 dealt and bid one diamond. [illegible] and South passed. West bid one no trump and the [illegible] closed. North had [illegible] initial lead.

THE PLAY.

Tricks.	N.	E.	S.	W.
1	D9	D2	D7	D10
2	H6	HK	H2	H3
3	5S	3S	2S	4S
4	KC	AC	3C	QC
5	8C	4C	5C	6C
6	7C	9C	9C	10C
7	JS	4S	9S	8S
8	HA	7S	HA	HQ
9	D9	D4	D10	DQ
10	D2	6S	10S	D3
11	D5	7S	QS	8S
12	DJ	H7	7C	D6
13	DK	H9	HQ	H4

West secured nine tricks.

The declarer had the advantage in this deal of knowing that north had according to a school which will not make an opening bid with less than one ace and two [illegible]ings, or equivalent cards.

Therefore the d[illegible]arer could at once place the ace of [illegible]earts and king of clubs in the north [illegible]and. The fall of the seven of diam[illegible]nds from south at trick one showed [illegible]at north held originally six cards [illegible] that suit, leaving but seven in the other three suits. If five of these seven were black cards, which seemed likely, north could not have more than [illegible]wo hearts in his hand, and the de[illegible]rer at once led a heart at trick t[illegible] hoping to leave only the ace in t[illegible] north hand, or, in other words, to [illegible]rive north of his most valuable as[illegible] his exit card in the heart suit.

North's next mo[illegible]suspicious at this stage of the game, merely thinking that the declarer was attempting to develop a heart ruff, but west had no intention of trying to establish an extra trick in either hearts or [illegible]spades, as south was likely to have [illegible] in which ever suit he attempted.

After getting past the ace of hearts at trick two the declarer to[illegible] his five tricks in the black suits as rapidly as possible, leaving north only the ace of hearts and his diamonds, headed by the minor tenace.

North had perceived his danger long before the lead was thrust upon him with the ace of hearts, but was not sufficiently alert to perceive at trick two, when the end situation which actually occurred, could only be imagined by an expert.

BILL JOHNSTON WINS NEWPORT SINGLES TITLE

Newport, R. I., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—William M. Johnston of San Francisco won the Newport invitation tennis tournament today, defeating Harry Snodgrass of Los Angeles in the final round by the same score at which he eliminated Norman E. Brookes yesterday, 6—2, 6—2, 6—2.

The largest gathering of society of the week turned out for the match, attracted both by the caliber of play promised and by the ideal weather. In the play, however, they were disappointed, for the match proved to be a walkaway for Johnston. Snodgrass, who has been playing brilliant tennis all week here, and who disposed of Norton yesterday in summary fashion, was as hopelessly outclassed against his fellow Californian as was Brookes.

Little Bill Wins Doubles.

Johnston, with Clarence Griffin, also won the doubles tournament in the afternoon when the Kinsey brothers defaulted to them in the fifth set of a struggle that was marked by the same exhausting and desperate competition that characterized their match in the final at Seabright, won by Johnston and Griffin.

Robert Kinsey was seized with such severe cramps in his legs in the tenth game of the fifth set that it was impossible for play to go on any further, and the default was registered after the Kinseys had twice been within a point of victory. The score ended at 7—5, 4—6, 6—3, 5—7, 4—5, and Johnston's advantage on his own service in the tenth game.

Robert Kinsey Falls.

Kinsey was first seized with a cramp in the eleventh game of the fourth set. After his leg had been massaged he resumed play and pulled out the game from 15—40 and then went on to take the next one for the set, amid great applause from the grandstand and bleachers, which were packed to capacity.

Later, however, he was again seized with cramps, falling as he ran after an angled shot by Johnston. This time he had to be carried off the court and the match went to Johnston and Griffin.

MICHAELS WIN FROM SQUARES IN NINTH FRAME

Overcoming a four run lead, the St. Michaels of South Chicago defeated the Logan Squares, 5 to 4, yesterday on Michaels field. In the second inning Bermele and Baude poled out homers, giving the teams a run each. In the ninth two hits put two men on bases and Forrest's two base clout scored two runs and won for the Michaels. THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT themselves three times, made a gallant bid, but found themselves outgeneraled and outdriven at critical junctures.

HELEN BEATS MOLLA; KEEPS NATIONAL TITLE

Mrs. Jessup was the outstanding performer on her side of the net, employing her service effectively, while Mrs. Wightman's brilliant overhead play and chop strokes gained many points. Miss Wills was visibly tired from the effect of her two previous matches and made many errors but clinched the match with a clever shot that had so much "English" it bounded back into the net on her opponent's side.

Following is the point score and stroke analysis of the Wills-Mallory match:

	FIRST SET.
Wills	441	444	9—30	6
Mallory	024	211	7—17	—1
	S.A.	P.	Outs.	Nets.	D.F.
Wills	1	5	8	5	1
Mallory	0	3	11	13	0
	SECOND SET.

Mrs. Mallory	312	413	452	—28	—3
	S.A.	P.	Outs.	Nets.	D.F.
Miss Wills	6	7	7	15	2
Mrs. Mallory	0	2	13	13	0

Will Try In Mixed Doubles.

Miss Wills, who gained her fifth major crown of the season today, will bid for a sixth title next week, when she plays in the national mixed doubles at Boston with Vincent Richards, youthful Davis cup star, as her partner.

This brings into partnership the two outstanding younger stars of American tennis ranks for the first time and their progress will be watched with interest against such combinations as William T. Tilden and Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, the champions; Rene La Coste of France and Miss Eleanor Goss, and Jean Borotra, another French Davis cup star, and Mrs. George W. Wightman.

Miss Wills' two victories today, which added laurels to the double triumph she also scored in the Olympics and her victory with Mrs. Wightman in the Wimbledon doubles final, marks probably the greatest string of successes any American woman star has ever recorded in a single season.

Miss Wills' Record.

Miss Wills' tournament record over the last few seasons now has few, if any, equals in court annals. From a youngster in pigtails who first attained fame in 1921 when she won the national girls' championship, the Californian in three years has risen to the greatest honors the courts holds—supreme in her country and rivaling, if not surpassing, the best abroad. Only the question of supremacy with Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen remains unsettled, but the French star's sudden illness at Wimbledon spoiled the setting for a duel this year between the best of Europe and America.

Aussies Swamp Japan Team in Davis Cup Tennis Match

Providence, R. I., Aug. 16.—Australia made a clean sweep of its final American zone Davis cup matches against Japan when Pat O'Hara Wood of Australia defeated Zenso Shimizu of Japan, 6—1, 6—4, 6—2, and Gerald L. Patterson of Australia defeated Sunao Okamoto of Japan, 7—5, 6—1, 6—4, today in the final matches of the series.

Wood had no trouble beating Shimizu, bringing about his downfall in a fast match which required only forty minutes to complete. The Australian star played brilliantly except for a brief spell in the second set when he temporarily lost control and Shimizu won four games in a row after trailing 3-0. But the Anzac star steadied and ran out on his Oriental rival.

Patterson's service was far too speedy and deceptive for Okamoto and he was buried in a deluge of aces and smashing placements which broke his morale and left him far out of position for Patterson's smashing kills.

RAY MILLER IS COMER, BOXING EXPERTS SAY

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Ray Miller of the west side, who meets Patsy Flanagan of St. Louis in one of the all star bouts of Jim Mullen's boxing show at Aurora Friday night, is considered by such competent fistic critics as Eddie McGoorty and Harry Forbes to be about the best prospect developed in Chicago in years.

Not since the days when Joe Burman gave indications of bringing another bantamweight title to Chicago has such a promising youngster been developed. Miller has come up with leaps and bounds in a year's time. Many local fans will recall that Eddie McGoorty stopped the bout between Miller and Ray Jeffries at the Hawthorne race track about a year ago because Miller refused to fight. Since that time Miller has developed a punch in either hand. Whether he can take it is another question, but it seems to be the general opinion the Miller boy will soon be among the strong contenders for the featherweight title now held by Johnny Dundee.

Several Other Bouts.

While the Miller-Flanagan bout will attract a large gathering of fans from the west side, whose both are strong favorites, the other bouts on the card have their followings. The clash between Eddie Anderson of Moline and Ernie Goozeman of Milwaukee will be watched with interest. It will be the second meeting of this pair of 122 pounders, and Eddie is bent on making amends for his defeat of a year ago in St. Louis. In that bout Anderson broke his left hand in the seventh round and Goozeman was given a technical knockout over the Moline boxer.

Joe O'Hara and "Tiger Johnny" Cline, claimants of 154 pound honors on the west side, will meet in another interesting fracas, while Harold Smith of the stockyards will tangle with Al Dundee, a hard hitting bantamweight from Mansfield, O., who broke into boxing prominence while living in Elgin. Joe Pagliana of Louisville and Eddie Shea of the west side will meet in the other bout on the card

All 8 Round Affairs.

All bouts will be eight rounds and tickets are on sale at the usual places.

Unless conditions change his plans, Joe Coffey, president of the Arena Boxing and A. C. of Michigan City will leave for New York tomorrow to meet Tom Gibbons, who will return from England on Tuesday. According to Coffey, Billy Gibson, manager of Gene Tunney, the American light heavyweight champion, has agreed to meet Gibbons on a percentage basis. Coffey believes by going to New York he can call a meeting of Gibbons and Gibson and close the match for the sky blue arena of the city of the dunes.

Hildebrand Nine Clinches K. C. West Section Title

GAR WOOD WINS LEG ON $5,000 SPEED BOAT CUP

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Baby Gar IV., owned and driven by Gar Wood of Detroit, today won her third straight fifty mile heat in the Buffalo Launch club regatta on the Niagara river course to capture the Fisher Allison gold cup, valued at $5,000. As in the first two heats, the Detroit speed boat was not extended to win. It is the first leg that Gar Wood has won on the prize trophy, which will become the permanent possession of the owner who wins it three times.

Commodore Wood's boat, Baby Gar III., finished first in the last race at Hamilton, Ont., two years ago, but the cup was awarded to the Nick Nack, owned by Humphrey Birge of Buffalo, who protested that Wood's boat had an aviation motor. Nick Nack finished third in the races here.

Rainbow, owned by S. B. Eagan of Buffalo, which won a leg on the cup in 1921, took second place.

Webb Jay of Chicago has two legs on the trophy and H. B. Greening of Hamilton, Ont., holds one.

An average speed of 42.06 miles an hour was made by Baby Gar IV. of the 150 miles. On her fastest five mile lap today she averaged 44.8 miles an hour.

Taking her third straight heat, Wilgold II., owned and driven by J. A. Williams of Buffalo, won the interstate championship trophy for runabouts of not less than twenty-six feet length. She covered the ninety miles at an average speed of 38.73 miles an hour.

Arab VII., the hydroplane owned by R. H. Sidway of Buffalo and piloted by Phil Wood, brother of Gar, again scored in the final heat to win the Leary trophy. She averaged 48.38 for the sixty miles.

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Charles E. Neffa, Lyons, Wis., was awarded $5.

The Question.

Whom do you consider the best heavyweight boxer of today, Dempsey excluded?

Where Asked.

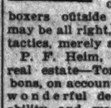
Grant park, foot of Monroe street.

The Answers.

Edward McCool, 367 North Karlov avenue, fireman—Gibbons and Carpentier are the only men I would consider. Gibbons first. Firpo has no more of a show than the man in the moon. The trouble with Firpo is that he likes to rush a man too much. That's where he loses. I know; I put in a little time in the ring myself. Now, Gibbons, he's a scientific fighter from start to finish.

J. A. Williams, 381 West Madison street, railroad clerk—With Dempsey excluded, I think Firpo is the best man. He fought Dempsey and made a good showing. He's getting the best fights. He's fighting Wills now, and Dempsey probably will fight the winner, which makes Firpo more in the limelight than Tom Gibbons. I wouldn't be surprised to see Firpo hold the championship some day.

W. C. Stafford, 613 North 7th avenue, Maywood, retired—I consider Gibbons a good man in every sense of the word. He is the cleanest fighter of any of them. He is a good tactician, a good ring general, and one of our cleverest boxers outside of Dempsey. Firpo may be all right, but he is without ring tactics, merely a rough fighter.



P. F. Heim, Indiana Harbor, Ind. real estate—Tom Gibbons, on account of his wonderful defensive ability and wonderful personality. One can't help admiring a man of his scientific ability, his clean methods, and the sportsmanship-like way in which he conducts himself in the ring and out of it.

David Duncan, 5555 Ellis avenue, nurse—Tom Gibbons, I guess. He tried to take the championship away from Dempsey and didn't get knocked out in his attempt. That's the best recommendation any boxer looking for laurels could have. Firpo can take a lot of punishment, he has the strength, but he hasn't any science back of it.

Villa and Genaro Sign for Flyweight Title Go

New York, Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Articles for a world's championship flyweight bout between Pancho Villa, spectacular little Filipino who holds the title, and Frankie Genaro, American champion, were signed today at a meeting in the offices of Frank Churchill, Villa's manager, prior to Churchill's departure for New Orleans, where Villa is to box Monday night. The bout will be held at the Nostrand A. C., Brooklyn, on the night of Sept. 4, and will be for fifteen rounds, at 112 pounds, weight to be made at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

FIRPO WORKING TO DEVELOP HIS SOU'PAW PUNCH

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Luis Angel Firpo's trio of new sparring partners, Izzie Kid, Joe Stoessel, and Jack Townsend, did not arrive in time for the afternoon training session. Consequently Bill Tate and Mickey Ferraro, Firpo's countrymen, suffered some more of the Argentine's punching.

Firpo was a left handed man today. He demonstrated a peculiar shift and swung a left hand that Bill Tate declared was more murderous than the famed right.

Firpo said he intended to prove himself anything but the "one punch" man that many of the boxing experts call him.

"My left is as big as my right, isn't it?" he asked. "Then why should I let it remain idle?"

GREB IS DUE AT FREMONT TODAY FOR FLOWERS GO

Toledo, O., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—According to an official announcement of Promoter Jay Bronson here this afternoon, Harry Greb, world's middleweight champion, who meets Tiger Flowers of Atlanta in a ten round championship contest at Fremont, Thursday, will arrive in Fremont tomorrow to complete his four days' training.

Red Mason, Greb's manager, wired today that Greb had just completed a week's training up in the Alleghenies and was leaving this morning for Fremont. He reports that Greb is in the pink of condition.

GARDINI, STEYNKE SIGN FOR BOUTS AT SHOW FRIDAY

Renato Gardini and Hans Steinke will be the headliners on the opening mat bill at the Star and Garter theater Friday night. The Italian is signed to test the ability of Andres Castanos, the clever Spaniard, while the big German meets Oscar Siegwert, a new arrival from Norway.

Shawkey Is Indefinitely Suspended for Wrangle

New York, Aug. 15.—Robert Shawkey, veteran pitcher of the New York Yankees, today was notified of his indefinite suspension by B. B. Johnson, president of the American league, as the result of his altercation with Umpire Hildebrand here last Thursday. As Shawkey was put out of a game for rubbing the ball on his uniform, his punishment is expected to be ten days, the rules providing for an automatic suspension for that period for an infraction of the pitching rules.

New York, Aug. 16.—Midget Smith and Joe Ryder of New York, bantamweights, and K. O. Phil Kaplan, Jersey City, and Eddie Burnbrook, U. S. Army welterweights, will meet in twelve round preliminaries to the Young Stribling-Paul Berlenbach match Aug. 27, M. Del Pina, lightweight champion of Cuba, and Red Cap Wilson, Albany, will box four rounds.

River Bluffs Open Land of Promise to Motor Tourists

Isaak Walton League Leads Gas Army Into New Trails.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

TREMPEALEAU, Wis., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Nearly two hundred and fifty years ago Father Louis Hennipen, questing down the great river that formed the hub of earliest exploration in the American northwest, discovered a majestic peak which seemed to rise straight from the Mississippi channel. Tree-clothed and with ragged outcroppings of rock breaking into fantastic figures along its sides, the mass towered high above the vast tangle of bluff, inland lake, and forest guarding the river's upper reaches and formed a peculiarly arresting landmark in a land of wild mystery.

Hennipen's friends, the Winnebagos, called the hill "Hay-nee-ah-chah," which, translated, meant "soaking mountain" to the adventurous priest. And Trempealeau, or "soaking mountain," it has remained through the long years while the river lapping its base became the mobile depot for the first French voyageurs, the broad highway of the early fur traders, a means of movement for the American pioneers, a market feeder for the northwest, and, lately, a lonely expanse of moving water little used and strangely unfamiliar to the newer world of steam and gasoline.

How generally unfamiliar this district has become is illustrated by the fact that until a few years ago historians had never found the site of the fur trading post established at the foot of Trempealeau mountain by Nicholas Perrot in 1685, nor of the old French fort built there by Linctot in 1731—one of the ten fortifications raised in Wisconsin during the French occupation.

This isolation is true of a great part of the rugged river lands that stretch south from Lake Pepin, near Wabasha, Minn., to Rock Island. Heavily timbered, dotted with small lakes and tiny, sheltered bays, and almost undeveloped except near towns and cities along the river, the 300 mile strip is waiting to welcome the automobile tourist. Its wild beauty and usefulness has already been preserved and perpetuated by the McCormick bill, the measure passed by congress and signed by the President in June, which prohibits artificial development of the bottoms and makes the river and its environment a wild game sanctuary under government control.

This measure, fathered by the Isaac Walton league and supported by sportsmen the country over, saves the strip as the natural breeding ground for American water fowl and game fish, but does not, according to local authorities, exclude motor campers, hunters, and fishermen from enjoying its unusual sporting advantages to the limit in season.

The sleepy little village of Trempealeau is perhaps the best gateway to the district offered the tourist in Wisconsin. Half hidden from both river and main roads by towering bluffs and virgin woods, it lies east and a little south of the river peak and at the edge of Perrot park, the 900 wild acres some twenty-five miles north of La Crosse which were presented to the state by a Winona, Minn., man, and which, although undeveloped in any way, offer unlimited vacation sports.

South and east of the village are four lakes, teeming with every variety of game fish, except those of the northern, cold water type. A narrow spillway joins First and Second lakes and takes the water on to Third lake, which lies to the north and east parallel to the Mississippi. Two camps, the first including twelve cottages and the second six, have been established here.

To the south of Third lake lies Lotus, one of the loveliest spots in the entire district. Here, in some five acres of birch bordered water bloom thousands of exotic lotus plants, the great, creamy blooms forming an almost unbroken canopy over quiet water and a safe haven for nesting water fowl. Another small stream, now being improved in order to save the fish during low water stages, drains into Long lake, and thence to the river.

This vacation paradise, according to George G. Gibbs of Trempealeau, local leader of the conservation plan, was menaced by the many river bottom drainage projects before Uncle Sam came to the rescue.

"We saved it just in time," he said today in recounting the struggle for the wild game supply. "Artificial development seems to be the course of this country and of this state where our few remaining natural features are concerned. The north has been stripped ruthlessly of its forests and left to shift for itself with charred stumps and burned over lands as its resources. Business goes ramping around looking for today' penny of profit and robbing tomorrow of potential millions. Resources of the north ran out and the development hunters came down to our river bluffs.

"Before we could stop them they had diverted and drained the water from Trempealeau bay, some 7,000 acres of the finest natural spawning ground for the game fish and fowl of American waters. The workaturned this wonderful acreage into a desert and developprs found, after the damage was done, that nothing will grow there now—except a few sand burrs and company debts. The fish are gone, the birds are gone, and corn refuses to come up in the old river sand.

"All along the river more development ideas were hatching until the Isaac Walton league and sportsmen of the country stopped the damage and the President signed the conservation bill.

"Now that most of the district is saved we are going into the matter of reclaiming the ruined acreage and opening up this country for the tourists of the middle west. Plans are pretty well along to reflood the bay and restock it with fish. Here and there in the strip the small streams are being dredged or dammed up as need arises to keep water at proper levels. Plans are on foot to cut a new road into this state park and to establish the kind of camps and outfitting posts needed by tourists.

"The good work done by the Isaac Walton league has made it highly popular all along the river. We expect this season to form an active league chapter here with some eight towns represented and, through this organization to establish the free tourist camps and put over the highway improvement work needed to bring in the automobile visitors."

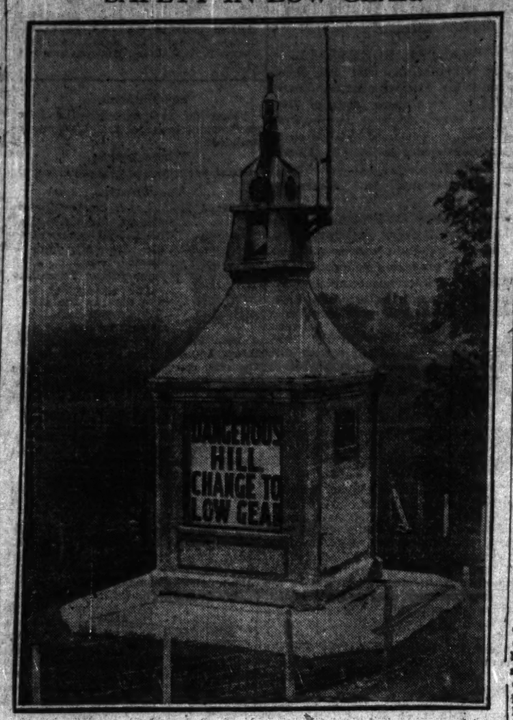
Just now the traveler from the east will find the combination of roads through Madison to LaCrosse his best route in reaching this district. The Grant highway, No. 5 Illinois trunk line, is paved from Chicago to Rockford and north to Janesville. Trunk 13 is the best road from that point into Madison although 12 from Lake Geneva through Whitewater offers an excellent option. From Madison, 12 may be followed through Baraboo where 33 goes west through the hills to the river or 12 offers more improved roads through Kilbourn and New Lisbon and 29 is a fair road into LaCrosse.

To reach Trempealeau go north from LaCrosse on highway 35 to a point five miles north of Holmen, and turn west on 162 to the river settlement. A better but longer option uses 35 to Galesville and county highway K down to Trempealeau.

A King's Order.

A special American made passenger automobile has been designed for the king of Bulgaria, with the longest wheel base of any car on the market. It is equipped with an airplane motor. The interior of the car is finished in mahogany, with solid ivory and gold fittings.

SAFETY IN LOW GEAR.



Tourists still persist in depending on service brakes alone on many bad hills and mountain grades, but few of them disregard this spectacular warning set at a dangerous hill turn on an English road. The lighthouse idea is worked out at many bad spots on European roads, and has proved a life saver for motorists.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Edward F. Mullens, 2900 West Lake street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

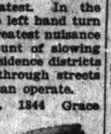
As a motorist yourself, what do you consider the greatest fault with Chicago's traffic system?

Where Asked.

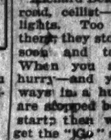
Grant park, foot of Monroe street.

The Answers.

R. B. Macdougall, 5438 Woodlawn avenue, Eureka Vacuum Cleaner company—There are so darned many faults it's pretty hard to say which is the greatest. In the loop the left hand turn is the greatest nuisance on account of slowing down traffic. In the residence districts there are not enough through streets where light deliveries can operate.



Raymond Carlquist, 1344 Grace street, bookkeeper—That's difficult to answer. They ought to have more boulevards or highways leading out of the loop. Michigan avenue is the only one to the south side. Washington street has a tunnel in the middle of the street, leaving Jackson boulevard as the main



Richard Beidel, 1654 West Marquette road, cellist—The stop lights. Too many of them; they stop you too soon and too often. When you are in a hurry—and you're always in a hurry—you are stopped before you start; then when you get the "Go" signal you rush like mad to make a few blocks. You make about two, and then—"Stop."

Benjamin Zimberoff, 1643 Lunt avenue, violinist—My answer to that would be—One arm driving. The "one arm driver" disobeys all laws, because his mind is not on his driving, but on the girl who has his other arm. I have seen that plenty right in the daylight, right in the rush hours.

H. W. Dennis, 3254 East 58th street, salesman—That's a hard question. There are so many machines in one place. If they had a way of getting the machines spread out—the trouble is, every one is making a bee line for two streets, Michigan avenue and Jackson boulevard. Guess there is only one way out of it—create more through streets.

Motor Exports Show Big Gain Over 1923 Record

Detroit, Mich.—[Special.]—June exports of all American automotive products, according to the department of commerce, exceeded the exports in June, 1923, by more than 300,000. Total value of automotive exports in 1923 was placed at approximately $170,000,000.

During the first six months of this year the aggregate value of automotive exports from the United States has been $119,347,802, or 67 per cent of the total value for the entire year 1923.

Production of passenger cars and trucks in the United States and Canada during June totaled 251,[illegible]. Exports of cars and trucks numbered 16,949, or 6.7 per cent of the production.

The growing importance of American car assemblies in foreign countries, is shown by the figure of 111,872 during June; this, if added to the exports of complete cars and chassis brings the total number of foreign shipments to 28,841 or 11.5 per cent of production.

Local Warehouses Report Fewer Cars

Chicago warehouses report further reduction of cars in storage. Only one warehouse reported the number of cars on hand as the same as last month. Stocks on hands at the end of July were reported below those of June. The number of used cars on hand was under that at the end of June.

Send 'em Back.

Automobiles stolen from Americans and smuggled across the Canadian border are being returned to their owners by the Canadian government whenever ownership is proved. On May 9, 210 machines, of which 180 were smuggled, were in the custody of the department of customs.

Full Size, GENUINE BALLOON Tires

The Easiest Steering and Riding Hudson Ever Built

$1500

Freight and Tax Extra

This Hudson Coach makes history. It is the first closed car ever to sell at exactly open car cost.

And Hudson, alone, can build it. As the largest producer of 6-cylinder closed cars in the world, Hudson exclusively holds the advantages to create this car and this price.

Greatest of All Hudson Achievements

And now full size balloon tires are standard equipment. Do not confuse with "semi-balloon" types. Hudson's are genuine full size balloon tires—33" x 6.20". Compare the difference.

Hudson has not simply "added balloon tires." Both running and steering gear have been especially designed to compensate for the radical differences balloon tires bring.

The result is the easiest steering, most comfortable and steadiest riding Hudson ever built. And braking efficiency is almost doubled.

More than ever, "Closed Car Comforts at Open Car Cost" is the uppermost buying issue. Note how fast the Coach is displacing open cars. As the wanted type the Coach maintains the highest resale value against the waning desirability of the open car.

New Dirt Track Mark Is Expected in Races Today

SIG HAUGDAHL, who claims to hold more official racing records than any other driver in America competing in automobile events sanctioned by the International Motor Contest association, will be one of the participants in the race meet to be held at the North Shore speedway, on Peterson road today.

Ever since Haugdahl thundered over the sands of Florida at the rate of something like three miles a minute, the North Shore management has been angling for his services with the Wisconsin Special which he used in his sensational performance. Now Haugdahl has agreed to smash the North Shore track record or ask nothing for his services.

Last winter Haugdahl met Ralph De Palma on the Ascot speedway in a match race and won a victory that made him the idol of the racing fans of the Pacific coast. He has defeated many prominent race drivers on the dirt track during the last ten years.

In preparation for today's events 4,000 gallons of oil were laid on the track yesterday to keep the dust down. Arrangements have been made for busses to carry spectators from the Lincoln avenue car line and the elevated.

If you take today's trip to the Thousand Islands you will travel over excellent roads, provided you keep on the American side. There are very few camp sites on this circle east of Toledo. Although there is a detour on No. 40 near Decatur, it is not as bad as one of the two detours on No. 11 between St. Joe and Kalamazoo. In order to get your car on the boat at Detroit or Buffalo you'll have to have crated the tools, camping equipment, and other things that are not part of the car. The gas is taken out of your car before it is run on the boat, and at Buffalo you are given two gallons of gas. Before you can drive your car into Canada you will have to produce papers that show you are the owner of the car, and you are then given a thirty day permit for 50 cents. Good hotel service is to be had at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., and the fast motor boat ride through the islands is thoroughly enjoyable.

Detroit, Mich.—[Special.]—J. L. Farley, president of the Auburn Automobile company, has sailed to visit Auburn distributors in Europe and negotiate with several prospective connections there and in London.

MAXWELL
Initiates a New Order

The public in general probably has no adequate realization of the great advances which have recently been made in motor car engineering.

It is a fact that the good Maxwell, together with the Chrysler Six, has literally accomplished a revolution in motor car results.

If you have not familiarized yourself with the good Maxwell since Chrysler engineers began their work with it, you cannot begin to appreciate what it means to thorough satisfaction and economical, carefree motoring.

Its engineering design and its fine materials are directly responsible for the statements of owners that the good Maxwell now costs less to maintain than any car they have ever known.

When you ride in the good Maxwell, be prepared for a quietness and a smoothness that you probably never expected from a four-cylinder engine.

One reason why you don't feel any trace of vibration when you ride behind the Maxwell motor, is the fact that the reciprocating parts of the engine are balanced to the fraction of an ounce.

Another reason is a floating platform spring mounting under the front end of the motor—a wonderfully effective device which is exclusive to Maxwell.

Owners will tell you that gasoline economy generally averages 24 miles to the gallon.

With this economy is coupled performance that would be gratifying in a car of far greater cost and power.

You accelerate from 5 to 25 miles an hour in eight seconds, when you drive a good Maxwell.

Its engine, with displacement only a fraction over 185 cubic inches, develops power that will take you anywhere a car can go—and some places where some cars cannot go.

The car is a revelation in ease of steering. Its ease of riding is equally remarkable.

The spring suspension is one reason for this. The noticeable absence of motor vibration is another.

If you really want to know how far four-cylinder engineering practice has advanced—take a ride in the good Maxwell. Nothing else can give you a full realization of the new order of things which the good Maxwell has initiated.

Firestone full-size
BALLOON GUM-DIPPED CORDS

Perform as No Other Tire Can—
Because No Other Tire Is Gum-Dipped

Gum-dipping is the special Firestone process that made the Balloon Tire practical by adding extra strength and endurance to thin side wall construction. It insulates each strand of each cord with pure rubber—destructive internal friction is eliminated—resistance to wear is increased—and longer tire life results.

Firestone, having perfected the Gum-Dipping process and used it for years, was in the position to pioneer the Balloon Tire. Gum-dipping is the foundation of modern tire performance. Race drivers insist on Gum-Dipped cords—which have won all the important track and speedway events in recent years. Leading taxicab and bus operators recognize the mileage value of Gum-Dipped cord construction by standardizing on Firestone. Millions of motorists use Gum-Dipped cords exclusively because their own check-up of mileage and all-round performance has convinced them of Gum-Dipped superiority.

Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords have produced remarkably high mileage per tire in over 1,300,000 miles of supervised tests. For comfortable motoring for greater safety in fall and winter driving—equip now with Firestone Full-size Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords. Their leadership is based on proven merit.

Badger State Has World's Greatest Cherry District

Growers Well Organized for Marketing and Canning Crop.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

STURGEON BAY, Wis., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—"Cherries, cherries!" Tourists hear this cry coming from lads and lassies at the roadside market stands of cherryland from the time they leave the Sturgeon bay canal until they reach the Ellison bay, near the tip of this finger shaped peninsula sticking out into the lake here on the east side of the state.

Peninsula fruit growers had a million dollar crop of sour cherries hanging on the trees at the beginning of the picking season a few weeks ago. It was estimated that the yield would be 10,000,000 quarts, breaking the previous record of 6,808,272 quarts harvested in 1923. Recent storms, however, damaged the fruit and cut the yield.

The story of Door county's cherry orchards is not just a tale of how an insignificant, weather beaten point of rocky land has been made famous the world over. It is a story of prosperous, contented farmers who blasted holes in rocks and transformed stones into delicious fruit. They have branched off into a special line of agriculture that is paying big dividends on land that was apparently worth only a few dollars an acre. Within a few years this county has become the greatest single cherry growing district in the world.

Army of Pickers.

The whole countryside along the shores of Green bay and Lake Michigan turned out to help take care of the crop. An army of more than 8,000 pickers has been busy for a month harvesting the fruit. Tribes of Indians—nearly 400 men, women, and children—from the Oneida reservation near Green bay were hauled over in trucks and provided with camping facilities in the orchards during the picking season.

No other orcharding section in America can compare with this county when it comes to producing cherries. It has all been developed within the last quarter of a century, starting from a forty acre orchard of cherry trees set out about twenty-seven years ago by E. S. Goff, a horticulturist at the University of Wisconsin, and A. L. Hatch, a practical fruit man. The real development began about ten or twelve years ago, when big orchard companies made their start.

Largest in the World.

Five miles north of here is located the largest single cherry orchard in the world, consisting of 640 acres, owned by the Martin Orchard company. Hundreds of holes had to be blasted in solid rocks to make a place for the trees in this orchard, where the rock beds lay bare without a speck of soil for many feet around spots where the transplanting was to be done.

Once the trees are set they have ideal conditions, with a limestone soil and water on two sides. The big bodies of water on each side of the peninsula, which averages about nine miles in width, keep the air filled with moisture, which protects the trees. There has never been a frost heavy enough to kill the fruit in Door county, old fruit growers say. Orchards are being rapidly increased in size and numbers in this county. There were 500 acres of cherry trees set out this year. Door county has, in addition to the cherry orchards, more than 3,000 acres of apple orchards, 100 acres of plums, and 100 acres of strawberries.

Growers Well Organized.

A unique feature of the fruit growing industry here is that growers are effectively organized not only from a production standpoint, but they have also combined in the harvesting, canning, and marketing of the crop. All phases of the industry is directed by one man, H. W. Ullsperger, general manager of the Door County Fruit Growers' union and the Fruit Growers' Canning company.

The farmers buy all of their supplies collectively and at a reduced price through the union, which is capitalized at $100,000. The union is also a sales organization and disposes of all the fruit. Four hundred growers are members.

"Six years ago we found that all of our fruit could not be sold fresh, so we organized the canning company, which now has seventy-five members," said Mr. Ullsperger. "We are now able to put into cans all of the cherries that cannot be sold fresh. The farmers own the canning company; in fact, they cannot become members unless they are actual growers. This company is incorporated for $125,000."

All but three commercial growers in the county sell their fruit through the union. Between fifty and sixty carloads of cherries have been sold this season as fresh fruit. The rest is being hauled and put into cans at the farmers' factory at Sturgeon bay.

Almost one-fourth of the cherries are sold as fresh fruit. Only a small percentage is sold at the roadside market. All of the fresh fruit is precooled in a refrigeration plant at Sturgeon Bay. The canned cherries are all sold under the Sturgeon Bay brand.

During the picking season two boats are run daily along the shore of Green Bay to take up cherries at Ellison Bay, Sister Bay, Ephraim, Fish Creek, and Egg Harbor. They are brought down to the canning factory located here on the canal.

Pickers are paid by the quart—3 cents where the cherries are picked with the stems on and 2¼ cents with stem off. Picker averages 200 quarts a day. The cherryland record is 468 quarts in a day.

Only two varieties of sour cherries are grown—the Early Richmond and the Montmorency. Few sweet cherries are grown on the peninsula.

Picking is one of the growers' biggest problems. This has been greatly simplified this year. Thirty growers organized the Cherry Harvesting association, and, through coöperation with the state Y. M. C. A., boys have been brought in this season from all parts of the state to pick cherries. The picking is greatly aided by keeping the trees headed back, so that a big percentage of the fruit can be picked from the ground. The tallest trees are not more than 12 or 15 feet high.

CHERRY PICKERS' CAMP

HEADQUARTERS OF WORLD'S LARGEST CHERRY ORCHARD—This is a bird's-eye view of the Martin company's 640 acre cherry orchard, said to be the largest in the world, located five miles north of Sturgeon bay, in the heart of cherryland in Door county, Wis. More than 1,200 pickers, including 350 Oneida reservation Indians, are picking cherries in this orchard. They are shown here taking a rest over the week-end. They are a part of the army of 8,000 pickers harvesting Door county's record breaking million dollar crop of sour cherries.

Wisconsin's Output More than Half of Nation's Pea Pack

MANITOWOC, Wis.—[Special.]—More than half the nation's pea pack is now being put into cans in the 140 factories strung all over Wisconsin. This industry started in this town in a tiny factory almost forty years ago, and has grown to be one of the two most important industries in the state. Approximately 170,000,000 cans of peas are grown by badger farmers and canned in Wisconsin's factories. The business managers of this great industry talk about it in terms of millions of dollars. From the viners farmers haul back to their farms more than $700,000 worth of ensilage made each year from the vines, a by-product of the industry.

Pea growing is developing rapidly in various sections of the state, particularly in the southeastern counties. While Wisconsin farmers produced between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 cases of peas in 1907, the great growth began in 1911. Last year the pea packing industry in this tate amounted to approximately $25,000,000. The acreage has increased by leaps and bounds, until there are more than 72,000 acres used in the growing of this crop alone every season. This enormous development is going on in this state despite the fact that other states are increasing their acreage rapidly; Minnesota alone has more than doubled her output of peas within the last season or two.

Done With Dispatch.

Growing and handling the crop all takes place within a few weeks. The canning season lasts only about a month and a half. With a highly specialized and systematized method, the peas are shelled, washed, graded, poured into the cans, and sealed within two hours, often within thirty minutes, after they leave the field. Practically all of the work is done by machinery; the human hand touches the peas only once—that is when they are finally inspected to eliminate any foreign matter or damaged peas.

With 96 per cent of the crop consumed outside the state, tourists who are epouring through Wisconsin now by the thousands, seeing dozens of canning factories and vines that line the highways on every side, wonder why theye haven't heard more about Wisconsin peas. The answer is that 85 per cent of the output is distributed through wholesalers and jobbers who sell under fifty-seven different varieties of brands. Chicagoans as well as consumers in other parts of the United States have been eating Wisconsin peas for many years without knowing it. They had no way of identifying the high quality of peas produced by Badger farmers. Wisconsin farmers have been working hard for forty years to produce the highest quality of pea that can be grown, and now they want due credit for their work. They want to have some incentive to continue to produce canned peas that taste as good as the fresh.

Getting the Credit Due.

Badger state farmers have about perfected their production plans, and now they are starting in to develop marketing. Until this year peas have been mere peas. Hereafter every can of peas that goes over the Wisconsin line will have the Badger state's label on it. Under the new label law, which went into effect the first of June, the variety, name, and size of the peas must appear on the label of the can. Cooks and comp[illegible]series will now know what they are buying, and Wisconsin farmers will get credit for their work.

Canners control the production of peas and the farmer always knows what he is to get from this cash crop. The canners grow some of the peas. Farmers grow them under contract.

While peas are grown in various parts of Wisconsin, nearly half of them are grown in the five or six counties lying south of the north end of Lake Winnebago, including Fond du Lac, Sheboygan, Dodge, Washington, Ozaukee and Columbus. Dean Harry L. Russell of the College of Agriculture, who had much to do in perfecting the pea packing methods, says that one the counties bordering Lake Michigan controlled the pea canning business of Wisconsin, but within recent years the crop has spread to the interior counties. There are almost unlimited areas for future expansion on the heavier silt loam and red clay soils of the Lake Superior and Green bay districts. These new areas are free from disease organisms and have the cool climate required by peas. Dean Russell says this cash crop will undoubtedly come into these regions when the cutover lands are subdued.

Eliminating Canning Troubles.

It was Dean Russell who took the secrecy out of the canning process used several years ago and found what temperatures were necessary for perfect sterilization to prevent spoiling. Spoiled peas used to blow the lids of cans and spatter peas all over the walls and ceilings of factories, storehouses, and grocery stores, but since the new methods have been universally adopted losses from imperfect sterilization rarely occur.

Farmers in this state have learned that pea growing and dairying go together, and both are developing hand in hand at a rapid rate. Wisconsin has ideal soil and climate for both lines of farming. The peas are soil builders, and not only furnish a cash crop but the vines make one of the best winter roughage for cattle when made into silage either by storing in silos or by stacking the vines and allowing them to ferment. This season many farmers are getting more than two tons of vines to the acre from the rank growth.

Poultry Tips

Poultry raisers are beginning to realize that it takes a lot of time to incubate chickens, and they are gradually turning the job over to commercial hatcheries or establishing community hatcheries at convenient points in the neighborhood. The community hatchery is being operated successfully in Indiana and other midwest states, as well as in the southern poultry raising districts. Clubs and business men are coöperating with poultry keepers at Brookhaven, Miss., where community hatcheries have been established at two of Lincoln county's consolidated schools, according to the Illinois Central magazine. The plants will be increased so that 10,000 chicks can be turned out every three weeks.

This has been a good year for chicken lice. They'll be coming in great droves during the next few months. Just as cattle are dipped in Texas for ticks, every bird in the flock—old hens, roosters, and this year's young pullets and cockerels—should be dipped in a solution of sodium fluoride made by dissolving an ounce of this material in each gallon of water. Two or three gallons of the solution will be enough to dip the average backlotter's flock.

Thousands of Chicago Families know the joy of a motor car that's not a toy

WHEN a family buys a Jewett they marvel at the vast difference between the ordinary light, flimsy, underpowered car—a "toy"—and Jewett's husky weight and power.

Any trip they want to make they make in comfort and on time! No "babying" of the Jewett—no question about mastering strange roads or hard hills.

Jewett, remember, has full fifty horsepower. Jewett's power is developed from motor size—not from wearing, straining motor speed. So its fine performance lasts! Jewett weighs 2805 pounds—200 to 400 pounds more than "light" sixes. Has 6-inch-deep frame—all-steel universal joints—Paige-Timken axles front and rear. A ruggedness inviting confidence.

Jewett's sturdiness and ability are proved. Over a billion miles of service in the hands of a hundred thousand pleased owners prove Jewett's "rightness."

At anywhere near $1,[illegible] Jewett Six has no equal. Never before such power, strength, sheer ability, roominess, convenience. We can prove to you the truth "in all the world no car like this."

Come in—today! Look Jewett over. Drive it. Take the family along. We'll arrange for a demonstration when ever you say the word.

Hog buyers took advantage of an over supply of mixed packing grades on the week-end session and lowered prices largely 5@10c, with instances of as much as 25c reduction in evidence comparing with the high point Friday. The day's average, due partly to poorer quality, slumped to $9.10, while top held within 5c of high point previous day at $10.10, comparing with a top and average of $10.30 and $9.40, respectively, previous Saturday. Better grades were off the least, outsiders quickly absorbing the limited number available, with shipments from Chicago at 3,000 totaling about 75 per cent of the day's fresh receipts. Offerings totaled over 27,000, including 23,636 carried over from Friday. There were 11,000 estimated in the pens at the close yesterday.

Almost Set Record.

Receipts of hogs last week at 151,100 stand largest since week ending July 19, being 16,800 greater than arrivals previous week, the same as a year ago, and 41,700 above the ten year average. Estimated average weight of hogs last week at 242 lbs stands heaviest since last September, but equals the lightest corresponding week since 1917, being 2 lbs heavier than previous week, same as a year ago, 13 lbs below the unusually heavy average two years ago, and 3 lbs under the ten year average. General average price of hogs this week at $9.30 shows a decline of 30c compared with previous week, but stands $1.70 above a year ago and 45c above two years ago, being $2.20 under the ten year average.

After an uneven break early in the week beef steers regained the loss and closed steady to 25c higher compared with a week ago, light and handy weight stock showing the advance. Best 1,484 lb averages brought the week's top of $11.25, against $11.75 previous week, while choice 1,037 lb cattle topped in the yearling class at $11.10. Unevenness featured in the butcher stock market, choice and fancy corn fed heifers closing strong to 25c higher for the week, while other grades were from 25c to $1.00 lower than a week ago. Calves closed $1.00@1.50 higher and stockers and feeders strong to 25c higher. Range feeders brought $8.20. General average price of good beef cattle at $8.70 stood 20c below previous week, $1.00 under a year ago, and $1.85 below the ten year average.

Lambs Close Strong.

Closing lamb trade proved highest of the week and fully 25@50c above last week's late buying, with spots reflecting even sharper gains, considering quality and "sorts." Tendency in prices ruled higher throughout the week, despite liberal offerings, which totaled 77,900, billed largely from Idaho, Washington, and Oregon. Natives sold at the week's top of $14.15, against $13.90 at the high point previous week. Offerings of feeding lambs were beyond trade requirements, as prices passed the $13.00 mark early in the week, resulting in a break of 15@25c after midweek. Best 55 lb feeders Tuesday reached $13.25. Lambs averaged $13.45 and sheep $7.10, the latter being highest since last May.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 21,000 cattle, 44,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 21,142 cattle, 55,319 hogs, and 18,217 sheep a week ago, and 20,622 cattle, 49,906 hogs, and 22,514 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 58,000 cattle, 140,000 hogs, and 85,000 sheep, against 62,511 cattle, 158,044 hogs, and 97,021 sheep a year ago.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Cool weather is bad for the watermelon trade and the market is unsatisfactory. Supplies are large, arrivals being thirty-six cars and ninety-five cars were on track. It is the first season since 1918 that there has been a season like the present. In fact the weather bureau reports that we have had no summer. Potatoes were taken fairly with prices unchanged. Arrivals were 110 cars.

Butter and eggs moved off moderately with no change in prices. Live hens sold at 1c decline at 23c.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

[Copyright: 1924: Fairchild News Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Generally higher prices in Great Britain are predicted by commercial leaders as a result of the government's announcement today that the former duty of 26 per cent would be reimposed on all German exports as soon as delivery started under the reparations recovery clause of the Dawes plan. The present duty is only 5 per cent. Leading factors in the woolen trade at Bradford predict an immediate hardening of quotations inasmuch as the levy of the higher rate probably will mean the minimizing of shipments.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—A well organized gang of clothing thieves is operating in New York and has got away with more than $100,000 in merchandise during the current week, according to the National Clothiers' Credit bureau.

*CHINA TRADERS PROTEST JAPAN'S TAX ON LUXURIES

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SHANGHAI, Aug. 14.—The Chinese general chamber of commerce here today filed a strong protest against the enforcement of the new Japanese 100 per cent luxury tax. The protest, which was addressed to the ministry of foreign affairs at Peking, points out that hundreds of Chinese articles of manufacture are hit by the tariff and trade between the two countries is seriously handicapped.

The message also calls attention to the fact that Japan is making concessions in the new tariff in favor of Great Britain, France, and Germany, and unless China is similarly favored it proves that Japan only respects strength.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Thirty stocks mounted to new high levels for the year in yesterday's brief but active session of the stock market. United States Steel common resumed its traditional role of bellwether of the market, duplicating its year's high of 110 and then slipping back to 109¾ for a net gain of 1 point on the day. American Can closed more than 2 points higher at 131½ after touching a new peak at 131¾. Baldwin touched 125 and then eased to 124½, up ¾.

Coppers provided seven of the day's new highs, although some of the net gains were small. American Smelting led this group with a net gain of nearly 1½ points at 73¾. Kennecott and Magma being among the others to attain new peak prices. Shares of motor companies engaged in the manufacture of trucks made the best showing in the automobile group, all the Mack Truck issues and White Motors climbing to new high ground.

Other issues to sell at the year's best prices included Marine preferred, Allis-Chalmers, Brooklyn Edison, Montgomery Ward, Associated Dry Goods, Liggett & Myers and its "B" stock, General American Tank, and Texas Gulf Sulphur.

Oils were rather backward. Pan-American "B" losing a point on profit-taking. National Lead also lost a point on realizing sales. Rails failed to move forward as a group, although they developed some strong spots, notably Southern Railway, which touched the record high price of 68¾. Prices preferred and Texas and Pacific also broke through their previous tops.

On the curb exchange numerous advances were recorded on exceptionally brisk activity for a short session at this season. New high records were obtained in Commonwealth Power and Foundation preferred. Increased activity also was noted in the petroleum division. The improvement in these shares, however, was generally moderate and lacked the vigor that developed in other departments. Former leaders such as Prairie Oil and Standard Oil of Indiana were confined to only fractional variations in price.

Diversion of speculative interest to stock trading reacted against the bond market, prices fluctuating within narrow limits and failing to develop a definite trend. There was a firm tone to French and other European obligations. Contrasting price movements featured dealings in the railroad group. Gains in Southern Pacific 4s, Frisco adjustment 6s, and Norfolk and Western convertible 6s were counteracted by losses of about a point in Central Pacific 4s, Louisville and Nashville 4s, and Rock Island refunding 4s. Philippine Railways 4s, after declining at the start, snapped back 2¼ points to a new 1924 top price at 47½. Industrial bonds were firm.

The stockholders' protective committee which is fighting the reorganization of the Denver and Rio Grande Western railroad under the present terms has issued another call for funds. The committee recommends that contributions be made on the basis of $10 for every stockholder owning up to $1,000 of stock, $15 for stockholders owning $1,000 to $5,000, and $20 for stockholders owning more than $5,000.

Under the stock acquisition plan of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey 14,700 employes of the company had subscribed for 606,641 shares of the stock on June 30. This compares with 408,431 shares for 13,928 employes at the end of last year. In the first six months of this year the total plan fund increased from $15,138,564 to $18,501,863.

Delivery of General Motors cars by dealers to consumers in July totaled 55,776 cars and trucks, compared with 63,209 in the same month a year ago, and with 56,146 in June this year. From Jan. 1 to the end of July 435,366 General Motors cars and trucks were delivered, compared with 472,194 in the same period last year, a decrease of 7.7 per cent.

In contrast to the recent tendency, failures last week showed an increase, numbering 373. This is thirty-two more than was reported by R. G. Dun & Co., in the preceding week and is sixty-one in excess of the 312 defaults of a year ago.

Directors of Montgomery Ward & Co., are understood to have agreed on a plan to pay off the $21 a share accumulated on the "A" stock. Details of the plan are expected to be announced following the regular directors' meeting next month.

The Midland bank of Cleveland, trustee for the bondholders of the Sharon Present Steel company, has decided to liquidate both plant and equipment. The company failed after considerable financing by the Cleveland Discount company when the latter was placed into receivers' hand.

Directors of Valvoline Oil company voted to cut the dividend on the common stock in half, declaring a quarterly payment of 1½ per cent, payable Sept. 17 to stockholders of record Sept. 11.

The committee on securities of the New York stock exchange rules that the stock rights of U. S. Hoffman Machinery company shall be quoted ex rights on Aug. 18.

An issue of $3,100,000 New York Central Electric corporation 5½ per cent first mortgage bonds, series of 1950, is offered by the Manufacturers Trust company at 97.

The Lake View State bank, North Clark street and Belmont avenue, has been admitted into the Chicago Clearing House association as an affiliated member. The bank has capital and surplus of $400,000 and deposits of over $7,000,000.

RAILROAD NOTES

The Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe railway applied to the interstate commerce commission for authority to acquire by lease control of that part of the Pecos and Northern Texas railway between Coleman and Sweetwater, Tex. The road also asked authority to lease the Concho, San Saba and Llano Valley Railroad at Texas. The Pan Handle and Santa Fe railway applied for authority to acquire control of the Pecos and Northern Texas Railway company.

Although the first half of 1924 was quiet in the anthracite coal trade, it was declared by officials of the coal carrying railroads to have been the first normal six months since before the war and to promise the most prosperous fall and winter season in several years, barring mild weather. With favorable consuming weather they expect soon to be carrying capacity loads, and to continue at a more rapid pace than a year ago.

No special change was reported in the revenue freight loadings on railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis in most lines. Grain movements have swelled the total to some extent, but the late harvest has prevented the heavy offerings usual at this time. Shipments of coal have kept up at about the same rate as recently and there has been no marked improvement in the miscellaneous freight loadings.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

Burton Hungerford, the Logan & Bryan crop expert, has returned from an extensive trip over the northwestern states and estimates that the Dakotas, Minnesota, and Montana will harvest around 304,000,000 bu wheat, compared with the government's August report of 185,000,000 bu, and final returns of 144,000,000 bu last year. If frost holds off until Sept. 20 and there are several weeks of warm weather, he believes that practically all the corn in South Dakota, southern two-thirds of Minnesota, southern half of North Dakota, and nearly all of Montana will mature. Business conditions in the northwest are much better than they were in the spring or early summer months. Roumania will have little or no wheat for export this season. Further increase in export tax is regarded as probable.

"Think general average of corn later than in South Dakota," wired George M. Le Count to Stein, Alstrin & Co. from Norfolk, Neb. "Fields very uneven here. Lots of corn not yet in tassel. Much of this corn cannot mature unless we have a very late fall. Lots of oats in shock. Threshing in progress. Crop is good."

The present level in Chicago, however, is 54 per cent higher than in 1913, Chicago showing the greatest increase above the pre-war level of any city in the country.

Wholesale prices of all commodities increased in July, the increases in farm products and foods being chiefly responsible for a rise in the general prices level from a weighted index number based on 404 commodities of 144.6 in June to 147 in July.

Every One Wants an Auto Now

The demand for used cars increases with the coming of summertime. During this season every person who can possibly afford to own an auto reads Tribune Want Ads in his search for a car that will fit his needs and his purse.

Here is a Tribune Want Ad that sold a car:

DODGE—TOUR., 1919, FINE COND.; 5 CORD tires; $175. 4071 Broadway.

Mr. Schultz of the Good Care Garage, 4071 Broadway, gave this statement of results:

"There were eight or ten calls in answer to our Want Ad. The car was sold on the second day, and at the advertised price. Getting the selling price did not worry us; we knew that if one person didn't buy at the price we asked, another person would."

CORN MARKET SETTING RECORD FOR ADVANCES

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Grain values continue on the upgrade with corn in the lead. Wet and cold weather over the main corn belt, with the local forecaster predicting that there would be no real warm weather the balance of the season while the crop is in imperative need of high temperatures to force it along to maturity led to a stampede of short covering and general buying. That caused opening values to be as much as 5c higher.

Individual operations counted for little and all deliveries of corn, oats and wheat, with the exception of September wheat, sold at a new high for the season.

For the day net gains were 1¾@2¾c on wheat, 1¾@4¾c on corn, 1¾@1¾c on oats, and 2¾@3¼c on rye. Heavy profit taking was on in all grains, but it was quickly absorbed by a new set of buyers, and the finish was well toward the top.

Record Advance in Corn.

There has been no such market in corn in the remembrance of two generations of traders. December has advanced 19c and May 20c from the low of the previous week, and there has been no material pressure all the way up. The quotations on the blackboard suggest a crop calamity as far as corn is concerned, according to the general view of local operators.

Corn prices are the highest on record with the exception of the war period. As compared with the finish of a week ago corn closed Saturday at net gains of 8@15¼c, while wheat was up 4¾@7c, oats 3½@4¾c, and rye 1½@3¼c. Lard advanced 25@50c and bellies 5½@12½c for the week, while ribs were unchanged to 12½c lower.

Weekly forecast was for generally fair and cool weather. Frost occurred at several points in northern Canada, and the forecast was for light frost overnight.

Stop Orders Caught in Corn.

Numerous stop loss orders were uncovered on the way up in corn. May touched $1.21½ at the opening and closed at $1.20¼@1.20½, while December was $1.19@1.19¾ and September $1.22@1.22. No. 2 yellow on track sold at $1.24. Receipts were 185 cars, with some corn bought to come here from Omaha.

Trade in wheat is broadening. A feature of the day was the selling of a large line of September by a local house, and while this checked the advance for a time the offerings were finally absorbed and the market advanced sharply toward the last. The bulge in futures checked export business at the seaboard, and sales for the day were small. Winnipeg gained 2¾@3c for the day, with Liverpool up 2½@3½d. September here closed at $1.33@1.33¼, December at $1.37¾@1.38, and May at $1.43¾@1.44, while July was $1.32¾ at the last.

More Interest in Oats.

Owing to the exceptionally high price of corn, more interest is being taken in oats, and, while there was considerable pressure on the December, there was persistent buying of all deliveries. Wet weather continues to delay harvesting and threshing, and there were fears of damage to the new Canadian crop if frost materializes over night. Receipts 185 cars.

Rye was influenced by the strength in other grains and the developments abroad regarding the Dawes plan. Export demand still slow.

Provisions were rather dull, but somewhat firmer, with grains, which offset the easier tone in hogs. Lard closed unchanged to 7½c higher, with ribs up 2½c and bellies 5½@10c for the day. Prices follow:

Joseph Tumulty Made One of Receivers in Oil Case

New York, Aug. 16.—Former Federal Judge Julius Mayer and Joseph P. Tumulty, former secretary to President Wilson, today were appointed receivers for the Middle States Oil corporation by Federal Judge Knox. Former Gov. Haskell of Oklahoma and other former officers of the corporation are charged with having dissipated its assets. This action is on the part of a minority stockholder. Another receivership action was brought today by creditors. Middle States Oil was incorporated in 1917. The capital stock is $30,000,000, of which $29,798,450 is outstanding. First rumors of difficulties were heard last year, when the stock meandered up and down. Dividends were suspended in 1924 after paying 12 and 10 per cent in 1922 and 1923.

None Tries to Purchase 'Surplus' Kodak Factories

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Because no bids were made at the auction sale of two plants of the Eastman Kodak company today in compliance with an order of dissolution made by the United States District court in a suit brought by the government, Attorney General Stone will be asked to decide what further action is to be taken.

It is said this case is without precedent in the annals of the department of justice. Two years were given in which one plant was to be sold for a minimum of $798,041.60 and the other plant for a minimum of $539,449.20. The decree provided for an auction as a final resort, but no provision was made for no sale.

The Outlook for Speculative Stocks

In forecasting probable market action from the above, consideration should be given to profits from summer trade in 1924.

The significance of the current buying upon the extent of such major or minor movement as is being introduced should be considered and given.

Some estimate from the technical action of the market should be made, as to when the main trend of stock prices will change—if this has not already occurred.

This is now being discussed in concise forecast in the current issue of

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Wheat has more friends than cost, despite the sharp advance. It is expected to sell higher as exporters and foreigners are, said to have taken a good part of the surplus off the market, leaving it susceptible to any new buying that comes in. It is a different kind of a market from what the trade is accustomed to.

Corn has advanced 11¾ to 12¾c from the low point of August 7, with May leading. It is up 10¼ to 12c from the close of Thursday and has gone so fast that it scares traders. It is a weather market and prices are at a level where many traders are afraid to stay long and are getting out. Those who believe in a poor crop are buying on all breaks. There is said to be no general shorts in the market and the trade is mostly long.

Oats are up 5@6c in three days, a good advance for them. They have come into favor and outside buying has increased. Rains delaying cutting and threshing combined with predictions of showers for a good part of the leading states are unfavorable for an early movement and are damaging the crop. Prices have been entirely too low as compared with corn and the trade looks for a further upturn.

A board of trade membership sold at $6,550 net to the buyers, a new high on this upturn.

F. S. Lewis, who has advocated higher prices for wheat for months, says foreigners and exporters are long and the position of the market is similar to that in 1917 when the foreigners had more wheat bought than there was in the country.

A pit observer in corn says the advance at the opening was so fast that it was almost impossible to trade, there being no corn on the market. Prices moved ½c between trades at times. On the theory that when a market advances over night to a new high level, leaving a gap over which the prices have not moved heretofore, these should be a good recession in values, many longs took profits. It is a dangerous market and commission houses are said to be asking 10c per bu margin on new trades.

Expectations are that receipts of grain in Chicago on Monday will be 2,000 to 2,500 cars, mostly wheat from the southwest and west. Inspectors will work Sunday on nearly every railroad.

N. B. Updike is a strong believer in higher prices for wheat, corn and oats, especially for wheat and oats. He says he is selling all the grain at Omaha they can get on Oats he says are too low and should advance to more in line with corn.

Argentine corn on Friday was 97¾c c. i. f. New York. This with 15c duty would make it cost $1.12¾, duty paid. Western corn for export was quoted in New York at $1.36, or 23¼c higher than Argentine.

A Chicago cash handler bought corn in Omaha Saturday to come to this market. The high price of corn is bringing out a little more old corn.

New Canadian rye has begun to move. Yields are said to be 20 to 40 bu per acre in Manitoba.

Louis Bressman, for years in charge of the grain futures department of the Rosenbaum Grain corporation and a man of wide experience and acquaintance in the trade, has formed a connection with Wheeler & Kenly, with offices in the Continental and Commercial Bank building.

"There is a loss of $1.50 per hog in packing operations," says a leading packer. "The advance in hogs has been too fast for the public to assimilate and consumption has been reduced the last two weeks. Export demand is the slowest in years. The continent is filled with lard and is not buying. In Germany there are good stocks which are being held by packers as credits are bad."

The J. J. Badenoch company, one of the oldest grain houses, being established in 1873, has moved its offices from 400-403 North Union street and consolidated them with its offices in 417, Postal Telegraph building at 332 South La Salle street. This will give them room for their expanding business in cash grains and futures.

SURPLUS CORN OF FUTURE MAY TURN TO SUGAR

BY SCRUTATOR.

An Illinois landowner, who has more than a thousand acres in corn and no interest in any corn products corporations or patents, has been making speeches downstate trying to work up sentiment for the use of corn sugar in the corn belt.

His arguments are unanswerable from the standpoint of self-interest.

But such drives are heart breaking work and usually disappointing as to results, as any one who has observed "use home made goods" crusade can verify.

Somehow neither drawing room nor kitchen are vulnerable to frontal attacks. Custom is custom. Cooks are conservatives.

But modern advertising and salesmanship have introduced a thousand new products and dishes. The breakfast food triumphs show what can be done.

In any efforts to introduce corn sugar to the table, all hint of substitution should be dropped. The speed with which war time "ersats" was discarded everywhere after the armistice demonstrates that.

Corn sugar will have to be put across on its merits, and it has them.

Once the retail price of the product can be set at a point which will compensate for the lower sweetening power, there is no telling the extent of its possible market.

It is interesting to speculate a bit on what the general use of the product might mean for corn growers, in the corn belt and in every state of the union for that matter.

Americans now use yearly about 10,000,000,000 pounds of sugar of which not less than 8,000,000,000 is usually imported.

Last year we paid foreign producers $380,000,000 for sugar.

Eight billion pounds of beet and cane are the equivalent in sweetening power of 13,333,333,333 pounds of corn sugar. There is no such disparity in nutritive power and as sugar is used for food as well as flavor, possible consumption should not be figured on the ratio of sweetening.

Assuming that 12,000,000,000 pounds of corn sugar would take the place of 8,000,000,000 pounds of imported cane sugar, and figuring 25 pounds of sugar to a bushel of corn, we would have a market for 480,000,000 more bushels of corn than at present. This is larger than any surplus of which we have record. It would mean higher prices for corn or increased acreage. In any event more money for the farmer.

Assuming that the farmer got the $320,000,000 now going abroad, it is easy to visualize increased demand for the products of all American factories, mines and mills and more business for the railroads. The $380,000,000 spent at home would go into the hands of people with a standard of living which assures demand for the things that Americans make best and of which they sell the most.

The by products of 480,000,000 bushels of corn used to make sugar would stimulate other industries and lower the prices of many articles to the consumer. Production on such a large scale with such a large amount of by products ought to lower the price of the sugar below present possible levels.

And of course the owners of corn products factories would prosper and the owners of sugar refineries might lose—but it is not impossible that in many cases the stock holders in both classes of corporations are identical.

If corn sugar begins to come strong, cane refiners will hedge by buying into that business just as there is today much stock ownership in beet companies by cane men. When a man's dollars are fighting, it is a good idea to have dollars in both armies.

GRAIN MARKETING HEAVY

Grain marketing at primary points last week aggregated 32,058,000 bu, the largest of the year and the heaviest at this time since 1921, when it aggregated 34,115,000 bu. Wheat receipts were the heaviest at this time in over five years, corn the largest since 1921, and oats the smallest in more than five years.

Chicago received 11,781,000 bu of grain during the week, an increase of 4,047,000 bu over the previous week and 885,000 bu more than last year, with a gain of 29 per cent over the five year average. The big feature was the increase in wheat and corn, both for the week and as compared with last year.

The New York Times.

New York, Aug. 16.—[Special]—The time was—and not so long ago—when Saturday markets were useful only in that they furnished the time and place for an "evening up" of the week's transactions. For the last month or so, however, the week-end markets have been extremely lively affairs.

Today's two hour trading in securities proved no exception to what seems to have become the rule rather than the exception, Stock exchange securities were particularly active and strong in the brisk two hours' market, the turnover was at the rate of more than 1,000,000 shares for a full day, and an extremely long list of "new high prices for the year" was established.

Averages Highest of Year.

The combined average of fifty representative railroad and industrial stocks also recorded a new high for the current year to date. Gains of a point or more were numerous among the active speculative leaders, but low priced issues under pool domination also attracted more attention. The recovery, with few exceptions, extended throughout the list.

Steel common and American Can continued their leadership. The latter rose 3½ points to 131¾, a new peak price. Steel common at 110 touched the previous high record for the year. Marine preferred and American Smelters again moved up sharply. Realizing sales, developed just before the close, but such selling was easily absorbed and most stocks closed only a shade below the high prices of the morning.

European News Cheers Market.

There was a disposition in the financial district at the week-end toward the belief that the gratifying turn the reparations problem has now taken abroad is to be considered an active motivating factor in the stock market, serving, along with easy money and moderate trade expansion, in providing the background of financial confidence.

Heretofore it has been left largely to the foreign exchanges to express prophetic vision about the probable outcome and its results, but in the last few days, and particularly in today's market, much was made of the fact that with complete settlement the other financial markets should directly affect it. Exchange moved moderately higher today.

German Loan Comes Next.

The next important step in the negotiations, and one which vitally affects the markets on this side of the Atlantic, will be the arrangement of the German loan and such primary details as its security and terms. Opinion of responsible bankers about the loan is, of necessity, reserved until these details are thrashed out.

The broad principle seems to have been laid down that it must be on terms which bankers can conscientiously recommend to their clients. It is recognized, however, that under our present conditions of rising security prices and active competition for vehicles for employment of capital the loan should be much easier to place than if it had been attempted a month or six weeks ago.

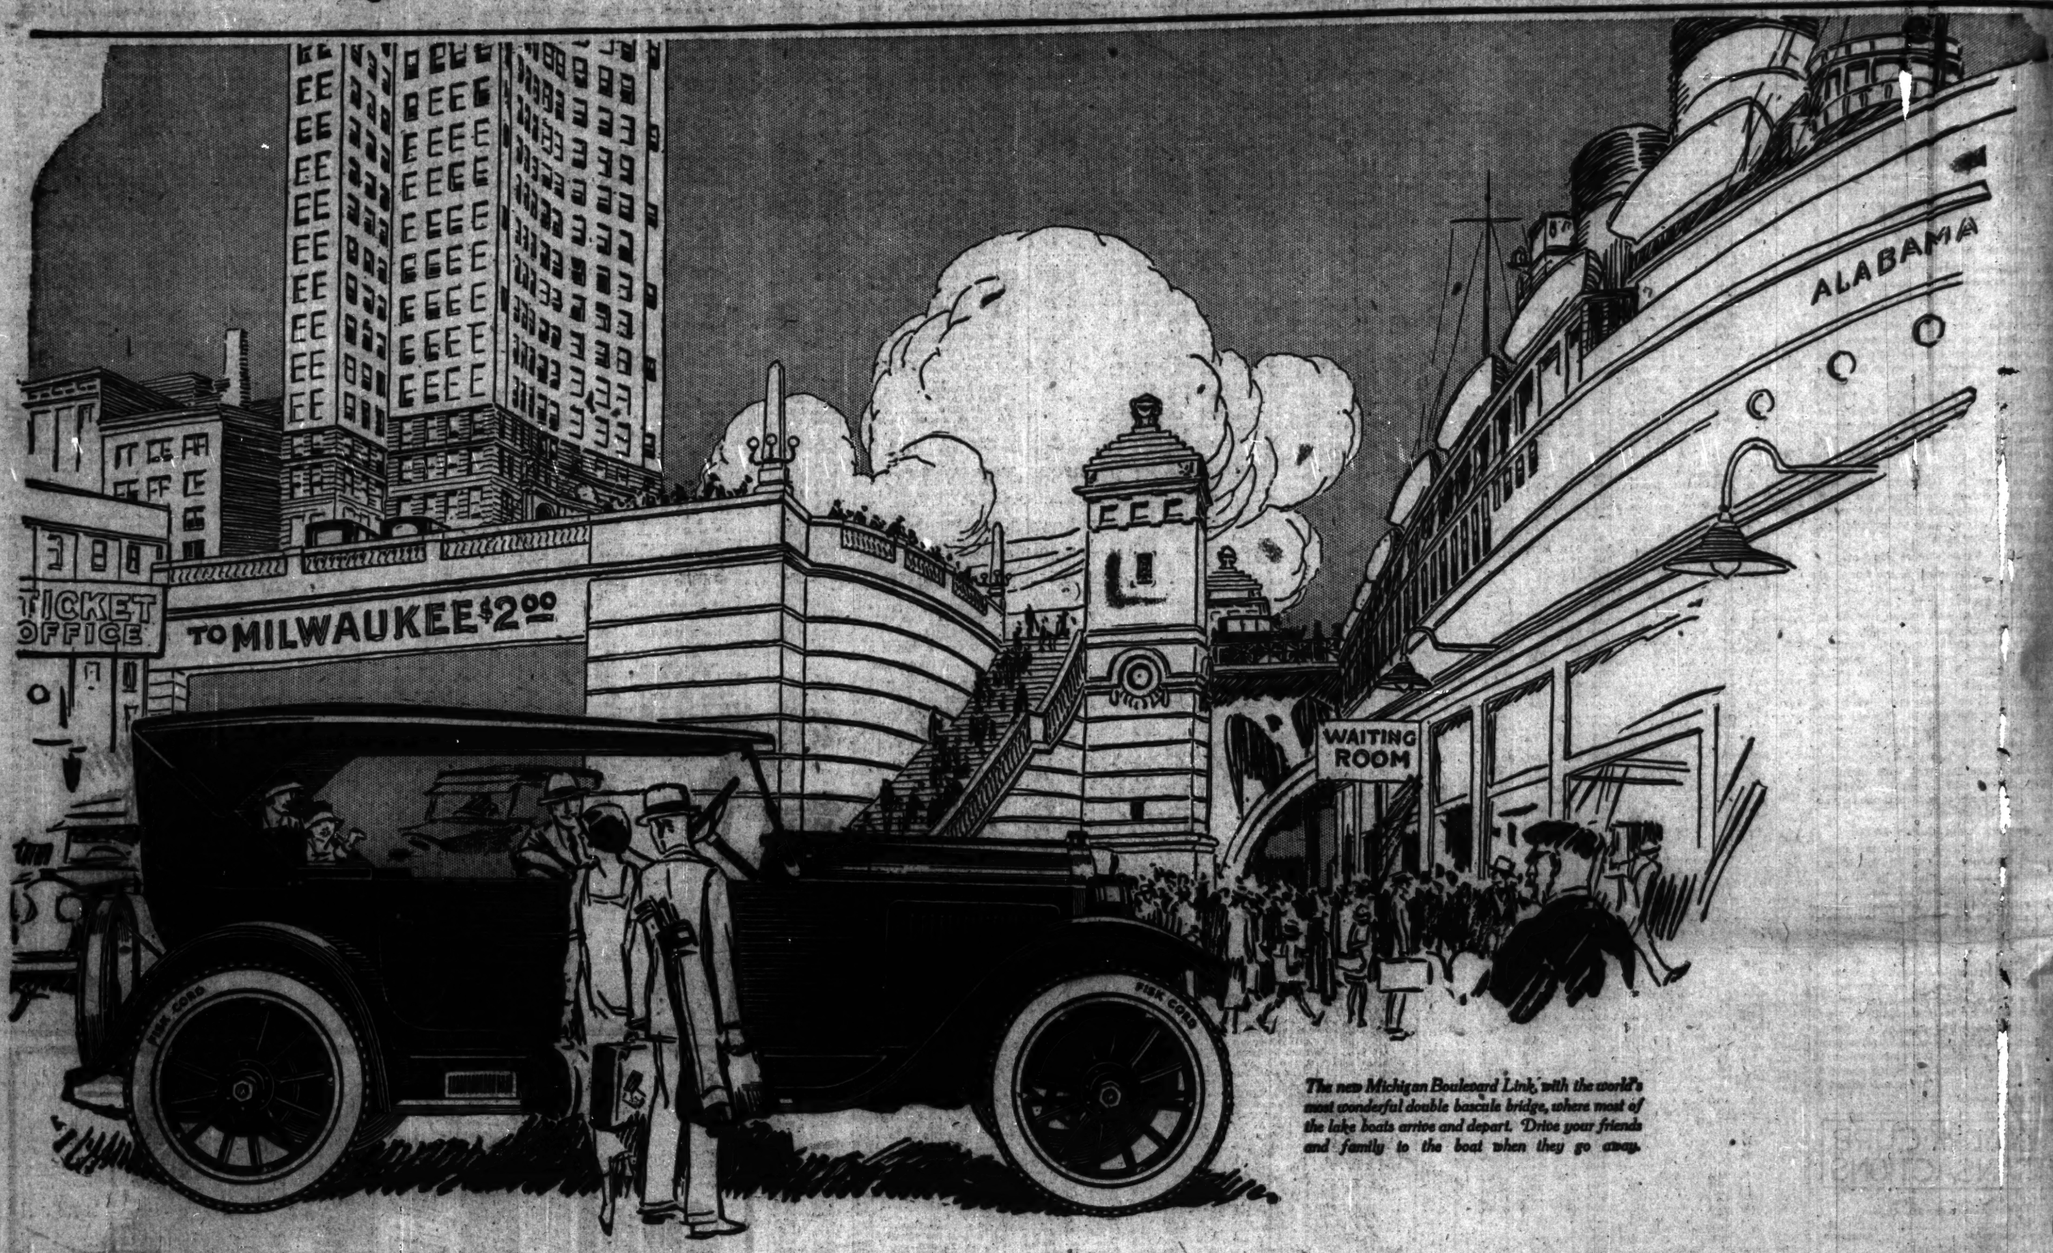
If everyone could own a Willys-Knight



The new Michigan Boulevard Link, with the world's most wonderful double bascule bridge, where most of the lake boats arrive and depart. Drive your friends and family to the boat when they go away.

WHAT more could be desired to make motoring supremely enjoyable? Beauty alive with velvety power. Conveniences and comforts without parallel at or near the price. Brilliant performance that thrills you to your very fingertips. Ease of handling that makes driving all pleasure. The supreme satisfaction of an engine that improves with use!

When you hear that the Willys-Knight engine actually refuses to wear out; that it gains in power—in pickup—in getaway—and grows quieter and smoother, mile after mile and season after season; you hear what more than 160,000 Willys-Knight owners know to be facts.

It is easy to understand why this world-famous motor lives long and stays young. Instead of noisy cams and pushrods, clicking springs and leaky valves, there are two simple metal sleeves in each cylinder which glide silently up and down between the cylinder wall and piston, one working within the other on a film of oil. Ports, or vents, in these sleeves register at intervals for the passage of intake and exhaust gases. Positive mechanical action, and perfect combustion in every cylinder, give the Willys-Knight a smooth, even flow of power and remarkable flexibility.

Carbon only makes this engine better, quieter, smoother and more powerful.

Owners report 50,000 miles, and more, of silent, care-free service without once touching a tool to this engine.

No car of its size is so easy to steer and handle. Eight Timken bearings in the Willys-Knight front axle are responsible for this.

Willys-Knight owners everywhere are the proudest and most completely satisfied owners you can find. Verily this is a car that tugs at the heart-strings of everyone who loves fine things.

Today, the public is turning to the Knight for greater mileage, greater satisfaction, greater economy and greater money's worth generally.

In the Chicago territory, Willys-Knight owners enjoy unequaled service facilities. The dealers listed below maintain highly efficient, trained service organizations, each giving literally neighborhood service to a rapidly-increasing clientele of enthusiastic owners.

Mr. Dooley on Court Procedure

By FINLEY PETER DUNNE

"D'YE know," said Mr. Dooley, "it seems to me th' administhration iv justice in this counthry has improved since I was a la-ad?"

"How's that?" Mr. Hennessy asked.

"It's gayer," said Mr. Dooley. "There's more iv the spirit of intertainmint about it. In former days 'twas a seeryous matther an' ivrybody wint at it solemnly as if all th' wurruld depinded on th' way they acted.

"No wan was more seeryous thin th' pris'ner. He obsarved th' look th' judge give him whin he enthered an' begun to figure on whether his best defince wudden't be a file an' a rope ladder.

"There wasn't much aujeence in those days because there were on'y about enough seats f'r th' witnesses an' mimbers iv th' fam'ly iv th' about-to-be-deceased. I'd like to see th' aujeence burst into applause in old Judge Wintherbotham's coort. Th' nex' burst they made wud be into th' Basteel. Ivrybody come in on tiptoe an' set down quitely. If they didn't,

"'Parabala parathensis. A common disease among th' insane.' 'What is th' vulgar term f'r this fearful malady?' 'Bowlegs,' says th' dock."

th' bailiff pushed thim into a bench or fired thim out. Suddenly a dure opened at th' side iv th' coort room, th' bailiff shouted 'Silence!' so fiercely that a man who was windin' a watch near fainted frim fright. An', led at a respictful distance be th' sheriff, in marched his honor.

"He was an imposin' figure, five-an-a-half by two in diminsions, but he looked as tall as th' old wather tower. Ye may have played pea knuckle with him dur'n' th' campaign, but today 'twud be a reckless man who'd meet his eye. As he marched in, glancin' nayther to th' right or left, th' coort room rose. He mounted the bench, cast a scornful look at mimbers iv th' bar, put th' black cap on a desk where he cud reach it, an' bowed. Ivrybody bowed back to him. Thin he set down. Th' crowd set down all together with a crash that caused th' bailiff to yell 'Ordher in th' coort!'

"AN' thin th' thrile begun without further preliminaries. Th' idee was to get it over while th' hans were still bitin'. Iv coorse, th' main point was to thry to prove th' innocence or guilt iv th' culprit. His guilt was admitted. He'd been caught in th' act. Plenty iv time must be allowed counsel to prove his innocence. But th' judge's vacation was comin' 'round. An' thin there was th' ixicutioner. His wishes had to be considhered. He said he cudden't wait. His brother had ast him to spind a couple iv weeks with him at Fond du Lac an' he didn't want to disappint him. Ye've got to be careful with ye'er ixicutioners. They're not aisy to find. It's not a job ye can fill at a moment's notice. Ye can't get a competint hangman at th' first emplyemint agency. Ye can get a cook, but their wurruk is too slow. Th' pris'ner was willin' to waive all his rights to an early demise to let this vallyable function'ry go away an' stay as long as he liked. Iv coorse it wud put him to considhrable inconvanience, but he cud wait. He didn't want to spile th' will arned vacation iv a conscientious an' pop'lar public officer. But no wan paid anny attintion to his gin'rous offer. An' Misther Jawn Ketch was able to make th' four-forty-five f'r Fond du Lac. Mrs. Ketch give him a fearful scoldin' f'r bein' late an' all he cud say was, 'Me dear, ye don't undherstand. There was a thousan' things I had to attind to befure I cud lave.' An' she said, 'O, I know all about these business men's excuses.' An' he played Cat's Cradle with th' childher as far as Janesville.

"But nowadays a thrile ain't somber an' business-like th' way it wanst was. It's like a curcus or a vowdyville show or th' 'Follies.' An' that's th' way it ought to be. It ought to be f'r th' public amusemint. Th' idee is that if justice isn't made more lively an' frolicsome people won't pay f'r it.

"I think it cud be improved, Hinnissy. It's a little amachoorish at prisint. There has been some good mateeryal in recent thriles. But manny iv th' lines ought to be cut. There ought to be more incidental music. A little buck an' wing dancing wudden't do anny harm while th' coort was lookin' up th' law in th' mornin' pa-apers.

"Still it ain't bad as it is. If I had nawthin' else to do or cared f'r th' theaytre, which I don't, I'd spind manny delightful afthernoons in th' cooft cheerin' th' opposin' counsel an' laughin' at th' alyenists. No bether comeejans have come befure th' public in my time thin these head spin men. They're comical.

"I DON'T know all that has happened. I've been away in Waukegan. But I got a good gin'ral idee iv th' intertainmint frim th' Waukegan pa-apers, an' it must've been fine. Th' coort room is crowded to th' dures an' thousans ar're thryin' to break in an' can't. Aven th' pris'ners have difficulty in findin' seats.

"Th' pris'ners enther an' seats are found f'r thim at th' press table. They come in ar-rm-in-ar-rm. Wan iv thim wears a light yellow pongee suit with green sthripes an' carries a bunch iv orchids. Th' other is in mauve with no ornamints but wrist watch. They are hummin' a madrighal as th' enter. They blow a kiss to their frinds in th' aujeence an' set down at a table where they start a dice game.

"A faint cheer greets their enthrance. A lady in pink, supposed be th' reporther to be a prom'nent s'ciety leader frim Bloo Island Avnoo, tosses a rose to thim.

"'Well, boys,' says th' judge, 'let's go. Call th' first dock.' 'Wait a minyit,' cries a stentoryan voice frim th' back iv th' coort room. 'We haven't got our cameras focussed,' says th' chief iv th' phootygrafters. 'Hold on just a sicond, ye'er honor. Move a little over to wan side. Pris'ners, put ye'er chairs a couple iv feet to wan side. Pris'ners, put ye'er chairs a couple iv feet to th' left. If th' disthrict attorney will set on th' edge iv th' table, holdin' a book in his hand, 'twill look bether. Will th' attorney f'r th' defince put wan hand on th' shouldher iv each iv th' assassins? That's good. Hold it! Ar-re ye r-ready, boys? Shoot! Thank ye, ye'er honor, we'll clear out now an' let th' movie men in. I'll sind ye a proof,' he says.

"Whin that's all done with, th' light comeejans enther an' th' show pro-ceeds. Th' performance goes with a rush. Th' wur-rk is fast. Th' disthrict attorney an' th' lawyer 'fr th' definse put on a fine act an' ar-re ginrously applauded. But th' pris'ners don't seem to like it very much. They show signs iv discontint, yawn an' shuffle their feet. Wan iv thim says, 'Let's get out iv here. This is no fun.' 'O,' says th' other, 'we might as well wait a while. It may get betther later on. There's nawthin' goin' on over in th' jail, annyhow, but a lot iv intherviewers waitin' f'r us.'

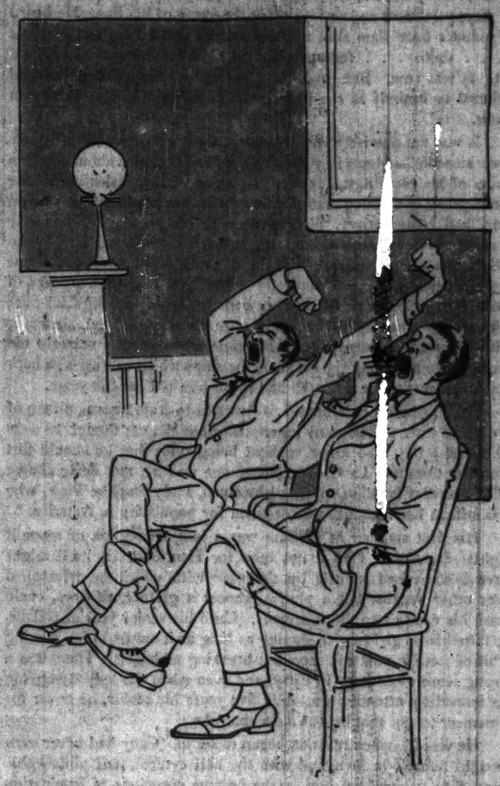
"THEIR patience is rewarded whin th' big act comes on. Th' throupe iv thrained alyenists at ivry murdher thrile is alway a riot. This is prob'bly th' highest price vowdyville act on th' big cirket. It has been tourin' th' counthry f'r years an' niver fails to crowd thim in an' turn thim away. It is unique. It is too expinsive f'r th' small shows an' it has niver been known to play f'r charity, but in high class intertainment there's nawthin' to akel it. I ain't goin' to spile th' pleasure ye'll have whin these intertainers come through again, but I can give ye what Hogan calls a synopsis iv wan act

"Th' alyenist jumps into th' thrapeze—I mane th' witness stand—an' th' lawyer asks him, 'Have ye made a careful study iv this case?' 'I have.' 'Iv ivry deetail?' 'Yes, sir.' 'Where?' 'In th' Boston pa-apers." (Laughter an' cheers frim th' aujeence.)

"After that th' joker goes on, 'I become inthrested in th' dee-tails iv' their lives.' 'What did ye find?' 'I found that at th' age iv two they teethed.' 'What does that indicate, dock?' 'Paranoya boozicooza. In three millyon cases iv this dhreadful malady that I have obsarved in Lynn ivry wan iv' th' victims had begun to teethe about th' age iv two. At th' age iv' three they begun to walk. This deviloped what is known in our pro-fiission as Parabala Parathensis.' 'Is this a common disease?' 'Quite so among th' insane.' 'What is th' vulgar term f'r this fearful malady?' 'Bow legs,' says th' dock. 'Did ye obsarve anny other signs iv cereebral disturbance?' 'Yes, sir.' 'State it to th' coort.' 'Wan iv thim thried to pick me pocket whin I wasn't lookin'. What does that show?' 'Senile dementya,' says th' dock.

"Did ye ast these young gintlemen annything about th', 'ye know, ahem! about th' murdher?' 'Now, look here,' says th' scientist, indignantly, 'I may be a poor man an' far frim home, an' I've a fam'ly an' I need th' money, as who does not, an' don't ye believe alyenistin' is anny soft snap because it ain't. We have our ups and downs th' same as ivrybody ilse. We're idle a lot iv th' time, sometimes months go on without an expinsive murdher. An' th' jumps between towns are frightfully costly. It's a tough business I'm in, but I'm a gintleman, an' don't ye think f'r a minyit I'd ask such a question iv these glitterin' young homicides. I'll not inquire into annybody's private affairs. I'd rather go to wurruk with me hands,' he says.

"'Paranoya boozicooza. In three millyon cases iv this dhreadful malady that I have obsarved ivry wan began to teethe about th' age iv two.'"



"Th' pris'ners don't seem to like it very much. They yawn an' shuffle their feet. Wan of thim says, 'Let's get out iv here. This is no fun.'"

"IV coorse, Hinnissy, this may not have happened at all. All I know about it I gleaned frim th' Waukgan pa-apers, an' aven th' Waukegan pa-apers might err. But 'tis pleasant to think that a murdher thrile that ordhinarly I'd want to shut me eyes an' ears to can be made lively an' inthrestin' to all. I hope ye'er grandchildher will see it in th' movies. They're too young to go to th' thrile, but some Sunday afthernoon, afther Vespers, ye shud take thim down an' see th' pitchers on th' silver screen. But, maybe, they've r-read about it already.

"I s'pose lots iv ol' fashioned ducks don't look at justice that way. They'd like to see th' coort conducted with as much dignity as a baseball game. They wondher what Jawn Marshall wud've done if somebody shot off a flashlight in his coort room. I know wan thing he wud do. He'd jump. Besides ye niver can tell. There weren't anny cameras in Jawn's day. He niver heerd iv an alyenist an' prob'bly wudden't hear wan if he'd come befure him. But he was up to date in his time an', if he'd lived to th' prisint moment, he'd still he up to date. If 'twas nicissry to open th' proceedins iv th' Supreem coort with a cornet solo he'd play it himsilf.

"I don't know whether it's betther to have these thriles gloomy or glad, dull or excitin'. If ye make thim gloomy, ye won't atthract so much iv an aujeence or so manny pris'ners. On th' other hand, Hinnissy, th' stage is overcrowded an' there's manny a young man sthrivin' f'r th' attintion iv' th' wurruld who can't get it onless he commits a crime. Wud ye shut off these ambitious artists? Th' answer is yes."

"Do ye think th' wurruld is growin' worse?" Mr. Hennessy asked.

"I do not," said Mr. Dooley.

"D'ye think it's growin' bether?"

"No," said Mr. Dooley. "If it's doin' anny thing but turnin' round th' wurruld is growin' younger."

Or Leave 'Em Alone

by Phyllis Duganne

Wherein a Young Man Who Thought He Knew All About Women Finds He Has Something to Learn

ON August twentieth of last year, at precisely 12 o'clock midnight, Coburn Dana stood at the window of his mother's house in Hendon and announced to the world at large that he was through with girls. He made the announcement aloud and solemnly, with the proper stress on each and every vowel and consonant, because Coby liked to do things that way, and there was only a little of disappointment and disillusion in the curve of his lips. He heard Wandine's door slam shut upstairs and he nodded his head. Finis . . . finito . . . fed up! He had liked feminine society quite a bit. It was true. But—and Coby squared his slight shoulders and grinned to himself at the phrase—he could take 'em or leave 'em alone.

It was not precisely one of conceit, Coby's attitude toward girls. Ever since he had been 15 years old, girls had occupied about eighteen hours of his every day. The fact that he was tall and slender, blonde like a pastel of a young man, with deep blue eyes and a smooth brown skin, had comparatively little to do with his popularity. Directly from his lovely mother, Henriette, and from the young father who would ever remain to them both the romantic boy he had died, came his heritage. Coby was naturally a flirt, and twenty-two years of close association with his mother had made him a delightful one; with some women he might let slip a gaucherie unnoticed, but never with Henriette. Europe, from the time when he was scarcely old enough to walk along the decks of the ships which carried him back and forth across the Atlantic, had made him old for his years.

At 15, when they returned to America to stay, he was a man of the world without being any more precocious than as though he were 60. And a boy who knew, without being told, that he should flirt with the Countess La Crosse, whose age was 50, and defer almost filially to that loveliest of Englishwomen, Lady Daphne Page, who was still in her twenties, was destined for popularity in America.

His first summer at Hendon was a long succession of moonlit nights—for Coby. Had it not been for Henriette, his head might have been turned a little by the ease with which he triumphed over other youths, but a phrase, almost a gesture, of hers, could crash his vanity into the ridiculous. Until his senior year at college, he flitted from girl to girl, staying as long as it amused him, making a bit of trouble now and then, but breaking no hearts. There was a strong sense of decency in Coby, and even when the lady occupying his immediate attention was fully five years his senior, he never for a moment forgot that he was older than she.

He was 21, when reaction began to set in. Coby had never even thought himself in love, and with the half cynical, half philosophic mood that pounced on him, as he became conscious of graduation and undeniable manhood only a few months away, he began to find the game unbearably dull. He was sick of holding this girl's hand, of thrilling the other by kissing her at the back of her neck when her lips were already raised to his, of murmuring charming phrases, vaguely reminiscent always, to yet another. It was like seeing the same show at the theater night after night—and it not a good show at that.

IT was March, 1922, when he met Wandine.

Wandine Torrey was small and dark, and Wandine had an undeniable way. She was not pretty, according to university standards, but Coby had liked the absurd way she arranged her hair, twisted all at one side in a coiffure that was at once grotesque and becoming; he had liked her ugly little French shoes, the ugliest he had ever seen—and Coby noticed such things. Joel Hammond had introduced him to her at a prom; they had danced, Coby had struck the chords of his usual conversational overture, and then become suddenly, unexpectedly interested by her husky, unmusical voice, when another man cut in and bore her off. He began at the beginning again with the new girl he found in his arms, but he kept his eyes on Wandine, and managed, when the music stopped, to extricate her from her escort and conduct her to a quiet bench in the gallery of the gymnasium.

As they climbed the stairs, he studied her, approved her extreme slimness and the taste that had chosen to cover it with a gown whose bodice was black satin and skirt a boldly patterned swirl of metallic colors ranging from dull red to a strange blue green. There was a black mole just above her upper lip, and Coby wondered, with a little conscious amusement at life, whether he was destined to kiss that mole this evening, or another. Some time assuredly, for Wandine attracted him.

They sat there, talking, for nearly an hour, and when they descended the stairs together, Coburn Dana was thoroughly bewildered. Fifty minutes they had been gone—and Coby had found a resting place so secluded that few but he knew of it—yet he had not even tried to hold her hand!

He saw her again the next day, at her house for tea, and their conversation flowed on uninterruptedly. A third meeting, and Coby returned home to confide in Henriette.

"I—I can't tell you what it's like," he said to her. "She's the first girl I've ever seen in my life who doesn't expect me to make love to her. I honestly think she'd be just as bored as I would. And it isn't because she's shy or anything—she just plain doesn't want it! She . . ." he couldn't put it into words, that relief, that peace, that came to him in Wandine's presence.

All the advantages of female companionship she gave him, and none of the disadvantages, he told her. Something attractive to look at, without having to praise it unless he wanted to; the fragrance of perfume which did not demand that he bury his face on her neck! Coby was beginning to take life a bit seriously and Wandine, with the intensity of twenty years, enjoyed taking it seriously with him, that spring.

"Gosh, you're the only girl I've ever liked!" he told her once, and she grinned and pursued the subject no further.

Graduation came, and summer, and, after two months in which Coby whispered many things beneath the Hendon moon to various Hendon ladies, Wandine appeared to pay the Danas a visit. To him she was like a drink of cold water after an eternity of warm, oversweet lemonades. When he paused, in his almost naive enjoyment of her company, to consider her, she seemed to him the most remarkable thing he had ever met in his life. Pretty to look upon, charming with all that charm of women which Coby so liked, and withal almost sexless, undemanding, intelligent. Occasionally, during her visit, some stray mood sent him to a parked automobile to kiss a particularly pretty pair of lips, or to watch blue eyes widen innocently before they hid themselves beneath artfully darkened lashes, but always he returned to Wandine, often to tell her about it, always to companionship.

She had been their guest for exactly ten days when the fatal evening occurred. The stage was set for it, one of those lazy nights, an uncomfortable amount of heat prevented only by a wind which was too sluggish to be actually cool. There had been a dance at the country club, and Coby had danced with other young women while Wandine whirled from one pair of arms to another. Coby felt he had never seen her look more charming; she stood apart from the other girls like a flowering fruit tree in an orchard of blighted branches. The conventional chiffons and satins of the dance frocks formed a background for her gown, a square cut, tight bodice of black taffeta, and a sweeping skirt of crisp white organdy, edged with an unexpected black wool fringe. At eleven o'clock Coby cut in on her and danced her to the door.

"Let's get out," he suggested. "Aren't you awfully bored?"

She smiled and nodded, and back in the Dana living room he made her comfortable with pillows, while he foraged for food and drink. When he returned with the tray she was lying back, sharply black and white in the dimly lighted room, against a mass of red pillows. Her eyes were half closed, and she opened them wide as she saw him, and smiled.

"You know, this Hendon bunch is a funny outfit," said Coby, sitting down on the floor at her feet and arranging food on a plate for her. "They've all grown up together, and . . ." for the first time in their acquaintance, something told him that she was not listening, and he looked up jerkily.

She was still lying back, looking down at him speculatively, unperturbed by his broken sentence.

"Sleepy?" he inquired, a little irritation in his voice.

"You know, Coby, I rather think you're the sort of young man who should marry young."

"N—o—o." Languidly she shook her head. "Awfully content. I like this place, Coby."

He handed her her glass, and looked away from her. The conversational thread had snapped, and he was searching for another when she spoke.

"Isn't this the laziest old night? I wish I was a kitten or something, so that I could snuggle up in a cushion and purr." He heard the rustling of her organdy as she shifted in her position. "You look awfully stern and forbidding, Coby—what's the matter?"

FOR an instant Coby looked into the tall glass in his left hand. The pause, before he answered her, was almost imperceptible to Wandine, but it held an enormity of understanding and realization for Coby. She wanted him to make love to her! Girls always did. He had been a young idiot to think for an instant that Wandine could be different. She had intelligence—but it didn't count. She wanted him to say to her the things he had said a thousand times to other girls, would say a thousand times more. In that instant she looked exactly like every other girl he had ever sat with, alone, in a moonlit room. The light in her eyes was as familiar to him as his own right hand—more familiar. Into her husky, delightfully unmusical voice had crept the same note he had heard ever since he was old enough to place an arm about a pair of feminine shoulders. She was waiting now, expectancy written in every line of her. Coby gave an internal shrug. Very well. If that was what she wanted, she should have it. He grinned suddenly. She should have—in his best manner.

"Stern and forbidding?" he repeated, his voice lowered automatically to that familiar low key. His eyes traveled over her, held her eyes. "Somebody has to be stern and forbidding when a girl looks as—as pretty—as you do tonight, Wandine."

She leaned toward him, smiling. "Why?" she asked.

Coby made an inward appeal to the Almighty. Look at her! he demanded of his Maker; I ask You! He shrugged. "Wandine—you little devil!" Funny how they always liked to be called little devils; he could see the organdy of her gown bristle with importance.

"You act as if you were afraid of me." Reproachful she was.

R-r-rotten! boomed an inward voice in Coby. O, Wandine.

"Afraid of myself," he assured her dramatically.

"I'm not!" She was prompt in her answers.

Coby was suddenly bored. If he hadn't liked her so much, the game might not have been so bad. But as it was . . . Coby occasionally had the emotions of the expert tennis player, dragged into a set with an amateur. Bad for his technique, as well as uninspiring. He would have to hurry it up.

"No?" he demanded slowly, allowing a threatening quality to creep into his voice. The tableau of his approach took only an instant, yet there was infinite artistry in it. One could see that he was overcome with desire to embrace this young woman, that he checked himself, holding off the violence of temptation; the intensity of a second rate actor was written in his face as he fought the impulse. He wavered, lunged forward to catch her in his arms and kiss her. The procedure flopped over into burlesque as their lips met. He drew away from her, and spoke in an aside to an invisible spectator. "Softer music," he ordered, imitating the wearied tone of a motion picture director he had once heard. "Softer and sobbier." To Wandine: "Shall we shoot the scene again?"

Distrust had been steadily growing in her face; now it blossomed into scarlet anger. He ducked beneath the impending flash of her hand, and came up a little distance away, grinning at her.

"Stern and forbidding are the exact words I'd chose, old thing," he assured her.

Her breath was coming in angry gasps; her dark eyes wide with indignation. "O, I hate you!" she said. "I hate you!" And as she whirled from the room Coby lighted a cigaret and blew a cloud of smoke after her retreating figure.

Weariness came over him, weariness overlaid with regret. Another illusion gone! Coby felt suddenly old. The amusement which the grownup part of him felt was mingled with the disappointment of a small boy; they merged into an impatience that amounted almost, to bitterness.

"Girls!" he said aloud, scornfully. "Females!" He was tired, tired of it all. He crossed to the window and stood for a moment, looking out at the night. "Well, I'm through! Finished—finito—fed up!" And after a moment he turned abruptly, put out the lights, and climbed the stairs to his room.

WORK was an entirely new experience for Coby, and he found he enjoyed it. It had always been understood that if Coby ever wanted to take it, there would be a place for him in his uncle's printing business, and when Coby appeared at Arthur Avery's office, his uncle found it impossible to disapprove of the young man. Arthur and his sister, Coby's mother, had never been the best of friends, and after the death of Coburn senior, when Henriette had sweetly refused to permit anyone to help her bring up her son, the slight ties that had held them were broken. Avery had always expected Coby to grow up an affected, ex-patriate sort of young man, and in spite of the trust and grudging liking which this first business meeting with his nephew inspired, he gave him an almost foolproof position in the firm. Within a month, Coby was on equal footing with his cousin, Max Avery.

He had tried, not too whole heartedly, to patch it up with Wandine. He was willing to forgive her. After all, he told himself, with a conscious sense of generosity, everyone had a right to a mood now and then. He liked her, and though he could never take the same delight in her companionship, at least she remained interesting and amusing. But Wandine had coldly refused to let the wound heal, and with her refusal Coby turned his back on all girls. He was fed up with them.

He threw himself into the business, and now that women were

OR LEAVE 'EM ALONE . . . . . By Phyllis Duganne

"Softer music," he ordered. "Softer and sobbier. Shall we shoot this scene again?"

banished from his life, he found his days three times as long. He read everything he could lay hands on about printing; long after five o'clock he was at the office, roaming from department to department, staining his fingers with types, fingering papers, examining inks.

His mother, satisfied that he was occupied, albeit puzzled at a change she did not wholly recognize, had departed for Europe; Coby was living in a lodging house on Beacon Hill, and as his landlady affirmed more than once, never had she seen a more decent or thoughtful young man. Not once did he rouse her from bed by coming in, keyless, after the outer doors were locked; not once was his breakfast brought to an empty room.

Coby's virtue was bound to attract attention, even among those who had not known him before, and perhaps it was the rumor that he was working toward a certain salary before he could marry the girl of his choice which made Arthur Avery call him into his private office shortly after Christmas and precede a promotion by a long talk on the printing business and a young man's responsibilities to his employer. Max, his cousin, was plainly envious of Coby's air of assurance in the presence of women, of the impression he made upon the females about the office. He was constantly trying to make Coby share in his parties, but Coby was impregnable.

"Sure, I like girls," he said, grinning. "Love 'em. But I just don't believe in taking them too seriously. I've sworn off for now. And—as Marc Antony didn't remark—I can take 'em or leave 'em alone."

Sometimes during that winter, when he sat in his room on Beacon Hill, studying heavy volumes and looking down the steep, snow covered street, Coby felt the surprise of the old woman in "Mother Goose" whose petticoats were shorn—Goodness, can this be really I? Sometimes when he saw men and girls walking together along the narrow Boston streets, talking and laughing, he felt a mingling of contempt with envy. But he was genuinely interested in his work—and for some inexplicable reason the thought of Wandine invariably held him back. Amusing though he considered the episode, detached though he might be from it, somehow it had left a mark. Not that he cared about Wandine, he assured himself; not, even, that he missed her. But the thought of her hurt.

SPRING came upon him unaware. One morning when he awoke and found his room filled with sunlight, warm golden sunlight smelling of salt and brown earth, he stretched his arms luxuriously and sat up in bed, whistling. A disgusting amount of energy for that time of the morning! He went out and ordered three new suits, and then, because he had nothing new to wear, he bought a gay necktie and was unable to resist a flower for his buttonhole, before he made an appearance at the office.

Spring was in everyone's veins; the elevator man had a sprig of pussy willow thrust behind his ear; the windows of the Avery offices were flung open, and a great bowl bloomed with jonquils and fragrant freesia on his secretary's desk. Everyone was making a great display of energy and work, and yet Coby suspected that they accomplished little more than he. His eyes kept straying to the sky above the office buildings opposite, while he played with the McCumber estimate, and when Max strolled across to his desk, he tossed the papers down, lighted a cigaret, and grinned.

"How about calling the bans off?" Max demanded. "I've got a girl in tow an' I'm taking her out tonight. Then she breaks it to me gently that there's also Isabel."

Coby looked out at the blue sky and shrugged. "All right," he agreed. "Tell Isabel that her name has made me break the vows of a lifetime."

Something seemed to creep back into his blood when he found himself in the taxi with Max and the two girls. They were both of them under 20, up from school for Easter vacation in Boston, and they were both pretty and absurdly feminine. The spring that Coby had tried to express in his tie and flower that morning was glorified in their gowns and their glowing faces; Coby found a delight in the old phrases and tones.

He hadn't intended to ask Isabel out to dinner the next night, nor had he done it wholly as a favor to Max. Somehow it was done, and back in his room he found his accusation that he was a fool softened by a slight excitement. It was fun to be towing a girl about again.

He was automatic in his conversation throughout dinner, but at the theater he found himself enjoying the girl at his side; he liked the warmth of her, the smell of perfume that drifted up from her gown. Coby found her hand and grasped it firmly, even went so far as to give her a little lesson in etiquette.

"You should never," he told her severely in his low voice, "pat a man's hand in that insultingly perfunctory manner when you're bored with holding it. It's too obvious. Let it slip away gently, or withdraw it to pick up your program. Do anything you like, O, Isabel, but never—well, hardly ever—the perfunctory pat."

She glowed with pleasure. She thought him very sophisticated.

Out side the theater, he wanted to walk, but he saw the light in her eyes when a cab driver accosted them—he had discovered that she was only 17—and he helped her inside, again warming slightly to the contact of her hand on his arm. He ordered the driver ahead into the park, and while the trees and occasional flashes of water slipped past them, he enjoyed the pleasure in her face. She was so young, so pretty, that something caught at Coby's throat; and his arm slipped about her with an expertness which did not disarrange her hat or the ruffles of her yellow gown. Her sigh, and the unconscious snuggling of her shoulders against him; the fragrance of the Fenway night mingled with her perfume, carried Coby away from reality. The taxi sped on, rattling and wheezing, and Coby leaned over and pressed his mouth on Isabel's parted lips. There was something electric in the feeling of his lips upon hers; his fingers tightened on her neck; he could feel her breath against his cheek. A light flashed past them, flooding the inside of the cab, and she pushed him away.

"O-h-h, you mus-s-s-n't!"

The s's hissed in the silence after she had ceased talking; her upper teeth were caught over her lower lip in a self-conscious smile. Unnecessarily, awkwardly, she began to arrange her hair.

Coby felt suddenly cold, disgusted. The hatred that filled him was more for himself than for her, but it was too violent a reaction to remain unspoken.

"Well, you practically asked for it, didn't you?" He demanded bluntly. He leaned forward and told the driver to return; when he settled back in his seat she was crying softly.

They rode, bumping and squeaking, in silence.

"O, lord, I'm a brute!" said Coby suddenly. "I'm sorry—honest, I am. I didn't mean to be a cad." He took his handkerchief and wiped her eyes, patted her hand encouragingly. "Stop crying, Isabel. It wasn't your fault. I say I'm sorry."

His repentance, his disgust at himself, lasted until they reached her house; then, when she thanked him for an enjoyable evening, his jaw dropped. Girls! Females!

For the next month Coby was a perfect example of the fallacy of the freedom of the will theory. His contempt of girls was no less; rather, even it increased, yet night after night he discovered himself in the company of one or more. He was tired and bored when he reached the office in the morning; the printing business seemed to him to be the least interesting thing in a dull world. A cablegram from his mother said she was returning, and he looked forward to her company almost pathetically.

He was dining with a girl—rather a nice one, and one undeniably pretty—when he saw Wandine. It was the first time he had seen her since the Hendon episode, and his eyes clung to her long after her bow was completed and she had turned her attention back to her own escort. How different she was from the rest of the bunch; what a personality she had, that shone in her gown of silver gray, wreathed about a low waistline with flame colored feathers! The man with her, a stranger to him, was obviously fascinated by her conversation. Wandine could talk! He turned back to the girl beside him, choking an absurd desire to cross the room and take Wandine away from the contented individual in evening dress.

After he had taken the girl to her home he dismissed the waiting cab and walked, again cursing himself for a fool, down Boylston street to the Public Gardens, and swung across towards the golden dome of the State House, with its circlet of lights. From the window of his room he could see the black glimmer of the Charles river winding upwards and passing beneath the bow of lights that was Harvard bridge. Not far from there was Wandine's house—and Wandine.

Wandine . . .

The picture of her at the restaurant flashed again into his mind. What a fool he had been to hurt her, what an unqualified boor he was becoming, anyway. That little Isabel! And today—today at the office, he had almost flirted with his secretary. He had caught himself just in time. She had set a sheaf of papers on his desk, and he had looked up from her hands with their stubby fingers, surprised to discover that her rolled up sleeves disclosed pretty, rounded arms. She had worn a frilly, springlike blouse, and in his surprise at the change the season had wrought in her he had stared, only half seeing, until he had noticed her blush. He had blushed then, too. Fool! Idiot!

He lighted a cigaret and blew a conical cloud of smoke out into the air, where it was caught by little winds and scattered into nothingness. What was the matter with him? Why was he so constantly finding himself in the company of girls he didn't even like? He hadn't liked one of them—not one—yet he realized suddenly that the emotions he had felt in their presence had been real enough.

Something seemed to click in Coby's brain. To say that he was through with girls—it was as absurd as it was obviously untrue. And why should he be through with them, anyway? Why not merely use a little intelligence and pick a girl who at least interested him? If it was his nature to flirt, he might just as well be entertained. His thoughts raced back to Wandine. After all, she was the only girl he had ever really liked. With all her faults, she amused him.

He felt a release, an exhilaration, as he reached that conclusion. It was as though he had been unconsciously striving toward it for months. Wandine couldn't help it if she had acted like a little fool; there was no use in his holding it against her. He would see her the next afternoon.

HIS mother's boat docked in the morning, and Coby spent the hours until after luncheon with her. He hadn't at all intended to talk about Wandine, but for some reason or other he was bursting with it, and, before he realized, he had recounted the whole story—from their first meeting, through the scene at Hendon the summer before, straight up to his decision of the previous night.

Henriette listened without comment until he had finished. "So you're going up to see her today?" she inquired, then.

Coby nodded.

Henriette leaned forward and laid a slim hand on his arm. "Come back and tell me about it. We'll dine together."

Coby was almost bubbling with anticipation, as he hurried toward Wandine's house. It had taken unusual firmness, on his part, over the telephone, to persuade her to see him at all. But that had finally been managed, and now the resuming of their friendship was only a matter of minutes.

Her quietness, a sort of spiritual pallor about her, when they came face to face, checked him for an instant.

"I'm sorry I kidded you last summer," he began. "And I've missed you like the dickens, Wandine. Didn't realize it until just yesterday. Let's call it off, shan't we, and be friends?" He smiled charmingly.

Wandine, in a straight frock of dull red, stood facing him, her face strangely expressionless.

"Why," she said finally, hesitantly, "I don't know that I can call it off, Coby. I mean—O, it's ridiculous to say that you hurt me. I had it coming to me, all right. But—something's broken. I—I don't think I want to be friends."

Coby looked at her thoughtfully. He wasn't sure what her game was, exactly, but he was still confident that he could play it. His voice lowered to the old, sympathetic tone.

"Wandine, you little goose!" She was, for some absurd reason, backing away from him, and he smiled as he followed her. She looked so little and pretty, so thoroughly desirable. "Idiot!" he said, cheerfully, and held out him arms for her.

This time her hand made connections with his cheek; he drew back, angry and startled by the impact.

"Please go away," she said, and indignantly he went.

If that was the way she felt about it. He shrugged. Yet somehow he couldn't shrug away the imprint of her expression on his memory. There were plenty of girls in the world. But more than ever before he wanted Wandine, wanted her companionship, her gayety, her charm. He was still bewildered when he returned to his mother, and his cheek still bore the flush that her slap had left.

"And I've always thought you were old for your age!" was Henriette's comment, when he had finished. She looked at him, smiling gently for a moment, before she spoke again. "You know, Coby," she said finally, "I rather think you're the sort of young man who should marry young. As you so cheerfully admit, you are rather an idiot. And if you're going to enjoy marriage at all, I'd advise it before you're too entirely bored."

"Huh?" said Coby. "What are you talking about?"

"Has it ever occurred to you," Henriette continued smoothly, "that this strange and inexplicable feeling you think you have for Wandine might mean that you had done the really too conventional thing of falling in love with her?" She laughed at his expression, and rose from her chair.

"With those words of wisdom, old son," she said, "I'm going to send you away. I'm frightfully tried. Why don't you drop in on Wandine? Telephone me in the morning."

And Coby, still trying to think of a withering answer for her absurd suggestion, found himself outside her door. By the time he had reached the street, Henriette had succeeded in persuading the Torrey butler that it was really most important for her to speak with Miss Torrey.

Walking along slowly, for a moment Coby's resentment against women included even his mother. In love with Wandine, indeed!

HATRED'S HARVEST

An African Animal Tale

by Guy H. B. Dent

FAR above the forest the hasting flamingoes drew a bar of living gold and crimson against the dawn. A murmurous breeze ruffled the green tree tops as it were a pond, across which a flock of crested ibis scattered with harsh clamor, and it was day.

But far below the buttressed trunks were wrapped in gloom eternal. Only at that magic hour the million throated insect life beat out abruptly a rising diapason like some mighty dynamo, then steadied into a sinister concord.

About and about the strange trees went the mighty form of Tembo and his followers, threading slow way towards their feeding grounds.

Their rounded feet made no echo in that cloistral shadow, for underfoot they trampled the deep mosses which throttle sound.

The lord of all the elephants was palpably uneasy. Ever and anon he swung his huge head in the direction of the cows and younglings, for it was the season in which the bulls of the herd were accustomed to gather by themselves.

With trunk upcurled he sifted the eddies of wet wind which whispered down the aisles.

He was on the point of heading down the steep hillside in the direction of the thinner growth of the plains when a far malignant screaming startled a troop of long haired black and white monkeys from the tree at his side and transformed him into a raging whirlwind.

Very well indeed did Tembo know the origin of that vicious trumpeting. The voice was the voice of Talaka (the One Apart) who had been driven from the herd these many moons past by reason of the savagery of his nature and his continual disobedience.

Ever since his expulsion had Talaka hung upon their flanks, seeking, and finding, opportunity to do them harm.

With the passing of the months his rage had seemed to mount till he included all living creatures in the ban of his virulent displeasure.

Talaka hated life and all that had life. He had become a wanton murderer. His giant strength he employed solely to oppress the weak and the sick. Terrible had been the actions of which he had been guilty. But more terrible by far was to be the manner of his death.

Tembo had decided that the outcast must be exterminated and as he ploughed through the matted creepers he was of the opinion that the time was overripe for the destroying.

Shrewdly Tembo calculated that in the neighborhood of the weaker members of the herd would Talaka be found. Fearful for the safety, he shouted aloud, hoping by this means to scare away the oppressor; behind him a score of brazen lungs took up his message and the forest became a sounding board for their displeasure.

TALAKA had vanished long before Tembo plunged into the clearing where his mate and her sisters instructed the yearlings in the inherited lore of centuries.

Mutely Tembo was shown the trampled body. Swiftly he learned of the treacherous rush at earliest dawn, of the implacable hatred which had driven a way through the ring of bodies to infantile weakness.

Slowly Tembo turned and regarded the forest wall which concealed somewhere beneath its countless leagues of shadow the author of this activity.

There and then he took up the trail. He selected four out of his henchmen and slid in among the packed pillars. The remainder he left as a guard against further outrage.

So began a hunt which was to last for many weary weeks, and which in all covered an area equal to the whole of Wales.

Talaka's spoor was fresh and not difficult to follow. The direction of his flight led deep into the woods, far beyond all usual haunts of elephant, where even the 'Dorobo, sole human inhabitants, had never been.

Ever Tembo followed, now traveling swiftly where the yielding bog land recorded plainly the ponderous passing, now wasting days on a false trail where the sterile slopes of Mount Emin baffled the keenest eye.

Ever Talaka fled, well knowing that vengeance followed after. For the monkeys called out the news to him as he stormed beneath their resting places, and after dark the wailing cries of the tree hyrax apprised him that there could be no long resting.

I would not have you think that Talaka was a coward. I doubt if there be any such among the Gray Ones. Twice at least he circled back and gave battle. But this was no affair of women and children. Each time his approach, though as silent as the shadow of nothing, was heard. Each time the indescribable ferocity of his charge was met by charge as savage. The odds were too heavy, and it was by luck he escaped alive.

In the early days Talaka imagined that amidst the tangle of the deeper forests he would elude pursuit. Also he was of the hopeful opinion that Tembo would abandon the chase were it but difficult enough and of long enough duration.

But Tembo was in no mood to admit defeat. There were many counts to the indictment against the outlaw.

Amongst other crimes was to be included the murder of a hunter who was also a white man.

Now it is an understood thing among the elephants that only and solely in defense of child or wife may a white man be killed.

Better by far to suffer persecution and the necessary change of feeding ground than kill. For the death of one of these white men invariably meant the sudden arrival sooner or later of a crowd of their compatriots who took grim revenge.

Talaka had ignored this rule amongst many others and already the herd had suffered grievously because of his unappeasable lust of killing.

Therefore the pursuit stayed not, though the five were indeed weary.

WHETHER the hunt led down to the rich bottoms where mighty monarchs of the forest towered aloft to an immense height, or up over knifelike ridges where the matted bamboos were a drag even to their steel thews; whether skirting the stunted scrub along the snowline, where the keen air whistled shrill, or buried in the ever drifting gloom of the primeval growths along the river's marge, Tembo and his companions followed surely—till he whom they pursued regretted bitterly the act that had brought him to this pass.

But to regret was not added any attempt at reformation.

It was nigh upon a month since Talaka had commenced his flight when the pursuers came upon him after days of blind wallowing through thigh deep marshes. The whole party bore by now unmistakable traces of their strenuous activity. Even their inexhaustible patience was beginning to wear thin on the trail of this elusive quarry, when they sighted Talaka close at hand, themselves unseen and unsuspected.

Alas! for immediate action a gorge driven far into the crust of the earth by some titanic power lay between them and their desire. Almost could they with outstretched trunks touch the trees upon the farther side, but the width was too great to allow of any attempt at crossing. Only could they stand and watch the peculiar behavior of Talaka as he peered and peeped here and there among the lesser bushes which were all the rocky ground threabouts supported.

Peculiar indeed was Talaka's behavior on this occasion. Not at all did it seem to be inspired by fear of Tembo and those others. Rather it appeared as if he were making ready to grapple with some antagonist, as yet hidden from the watchers, or else to commit some horrible crime against the wild.

Fascinated, those wise eyes watched Talaka as he walked delicately among the undergrowth. They saw him curl his trunk on high, certain signal of a near outburst of frantic endeavor.

They noted the elaborate caution with which he approached a nearby thicket. So close was that other that Tembo clearly discerned the blood lust in his little eyes, and yet Talaka was unaware that he was observed, and yet Tembo could by no means imagine what fearful thing was about to come to pass.

Barring the infrequent bongo and giant bush pig, there were not to Tembo's knowledge any creatures whose presence could by any means be construed as inimical to Talaka. Even these shy beasts were only enemies insomuch as they attracted to the forest lovers of their horns and tusks. As for Sharbel and his like, true they were plentiful and always untrustworthy, but they were not such utter fools as ever to pit themselves against the lords of the forests.

In savage glee Talaka took the body to the edge, and flung it out.

EVEN as Tembo thus pondered, across the dividing canyon broke out a frenzied activity. For Talaka charged suddenly into the thicket, and the great ape which he had been stalking never knew his danger till his death loomed swiftly over him.

It was the action of a mind made mad by disease. There was no slightest justification for the deed. The ape had been grubbing for some hidden delicacy from the taller trees which were his usual resting place. Never was a more inoffensive beast in all Africa.

He had both seen and heard Talaka, though the latter was beyond the power of any human ear. He had anticipated no evil, had borne malice to none, and this crazed mountain of murder had taken him woefully unawares.

Followed a vile and vicious fight in an awful silence, while the trees waved their branches dolefully as if protesting at the obscene happening in their midst.

Even then the ape did not weakly despair. As he looked up, surprised, he perceived the incredible truth. Read death in the gleam of his assailant's eyes. And on the instant he doubled between the great legs and leaped for the shelter of the nearest shrub. But Talaka wheeled in the half of his own length, and gripping the unstable growth snapped the stem a foot from the ground. The ape, shaken out as one jerks an apple from the tree, took the only chance offered and launched himself in an endeavor to use Talaka's broad back as a spring board to safety.

Considering all things, the effort was magnificent. But it was not enough. The upflung trunk touched and gripped the hurtling body and drew it down.

Not yet was the end arrived.

Roaring like a bull, the ape twisted round and strove towards the cruel eyes. His hands beat like trip hammers on the dome like forehead. Now the impact of the least of those blows would have crushed in a man's head as it were the shell of an egg. But Talaka hardly felt them. Shouting till the surrounding woods rang again, the ape gripped Talaka's tusks with his hind feet, and arched his back against the pressure of the trunk which sought to bear him down beneath the kneading knees.

His muscles stood out like wire cables along his arms and thighs. But there is nothing that can for long resist the mightiest of the creatures which walk this earth. Abruptly the matter was at end. Then in savage glee Talaka took the body to the edge, and flung it out so that it spun and dwindled down the depths in a curiously lifelike descent.

Finally Talaka looked across and saw that he had been watched. And looking at the encrimsoned tusks and forehead of the slayer Tembo decided that such a deed merited a similar passing.

Up to the present he had been desirous of either killing his enemy in fair fight, or of driving him over a cliff edge to a clean and sudden ending. But now Tembo remembered the words of his mother, who had the tale from her grandmother, who in turn had received the root of the matter from the all wise Hekimu, the shaven necked mother of all vultures who knew all things and who never met with death.

Now did Tembo make a plan that he might entice Talaka to a dreadful place. Remembering the words of his mother, and knowing now the full devilishness of the other's nature, Tembo's plan was prepared in a second.

So he turned away from the reeking nightmare opposite. And seeing this, Talaka trumpeted his scorn and triumph, for he thought that he had the conquest. Swiftly was to come the time when he should beg for an abrupt death and not be allowed the boon.

NOW there be in Africa five places which are shunned by all things which have life, except by one creature which is very much alive.

Pin pricks on the surface of the veiled continent, these five districts are each the breeding ground and place of departure of a creature beside whose abysmal ferocity the fury of the greater carnivora pales to an ineffectual petulance.

There is nothing in all Africa, no beast of the woods and plains, nor even man who holds the precarious overlordship of those beasts, that can, that would for a moment think to oppose them. For their name is legion and they are ruthless.

The position of one of these hellish spawning grounds was known to Tembo, having been told him by his mother, who had received the information in the manner which I have stated.

Even old Hekimu had not dared to alight within a day's flight of the place. With a thousand feet between her and the tallest tree tops she had hung aloft for half a day watching with her telescopic eyes the ceaseless, organized activity of the inhabitants of that far off region. Then she had departed and had been glad to get away unscathed.

But Tembo, giving certain instructions to his henchmen anent the watching of Talaka, who was henceforth called "The Doomed," and concerning the calling up of the main herd, turned resolutely to a new trail breaking.

Unaccompanied by any of his kind, he forced a broad way afar from those already distant localities which he had reached in his pursuit.

Always his road led down hill till the stagnant air was a torture even to his leather lungs, and always was his journey made in thick shade, because the thing he sought lay in the midst of the far spreading Congo forest where no sun shines and where the lower foliage is bleached by lack of light to an uncanny pallor.

Though he had never before traveled in that quarter, yet he remembered well the sign posts he had been instructed to observe. He passed the mouth of the Victorian Nile, then swung east till Nimule lay three full days' march behind, and be it known that a day's march for an elephant is an incredible distance.

When the Mountain of Fire loomed up on his right hand, the mountain which ever and forever waves its plume of smoke high above the green waves of vegetation which beat upon its slopes, Tembo turned south by east, and early in the morning of the sixth day saw that he was near to his destination.

For two days his all seeing eyes had noted the absence of any tracks of other forms of game. Those last two days had been a difficult progress. The trees were roped, and stayed, and bound each to each by a living network of vines and rank growing creepers. Even Tembo's gigantic strength was nigh exhausted when the last day was over.

But now he was where he would be.

HE noted the huge trees with bare, fleshy limbs that writhed out through the neighboring branches, bearing spare clusters of large frondage. He noted the poisonous nettles which there grew rank and close half way up his sides. There were huge trees with little leaves, and small trees with big leaves. There were trees whose surfaces were corrugated and knotted as if made of bundles of great creepers. And in the middle of this striving plant life, in a tiny opening clear to Heaven's view, Tembo saw what he had come so far to find.

No quiet was there, nor any silence. The air quivered to a sibilant rustling as the sea makes upon a tropic shore when the sky is ablaze with full sun power.

Always as he looked Tembo shifted uneasily from foot to huge foot and beat persistently with his trunk at his back and legs. For the leaves in that spot dripped a deadly dew. It was a melancholy place.

Twenty yards from where he stood a circle of about thirty yards diameter had at some long past period been torn through the vegetation, extending far down into the moist earth.

How deep that well-like excavation might be it was impossible to say, for in the middle upreared a conical hill to within a few yards of the level of the rim—a hill which seemed to be in constant movement, yet ever kept the same height—a hill apparently composed of countless myriads of swarming life, which always moved, yet never changed its shape.

And, indeed, it is not possible to judge of the numbers contained in that pit, because it was one of the five breeding places of the dreaded siafu, the red and black driver ants whose length is nearly the first joint of a man's thumb.

The pit boiled, I say it boiled, with the millions upon millions of the ants. The hiss of their feet was a sinister forewarning of their power. Now and again a viscous wave, as it were, from the central mass, would flow out and lap against the confining wall. And always the pit spewed over the edge its venomous contents—those contents which in miles long ropes of destruction would eventually spread over the whole of Africa, crossing rivers, mountains, and the densest forest, urged on by an awful craving for living food.

Abruptly Tembo turned him about and went. Almost did he think the fate too awful even for Talaka. But at the foot of the Mountain of Fire, where he met the main herd as he had ordered, he learned further news of the outcast which caused him to harden again his heart.

It was told to him that, as they followed in his tracks, one of their number fell by chance into one of the shallow traps dug by the "Dorobo" to catch the younger elephants. Almost had he struggled out to safety, it was said, when Talaka, his vengeful temper unslaked and his arrogance increased by what he considered to be his victory over his chief, rushed in before any could interfere, and had trampled the unfortunate back into the earth, so maiming him that he was unable again to attempt an escape.

Hearing this, Tembo gave the new direction and the herd swung into his footprints. This time it was curious to note that the yearlings were left apparently exposed to any that might wish to hurt them. And as Tembo had expeced, Talaka kept close at hand and many times attempted another murder.

BUT always by seeming chance the chieftain or one of the great bulls was lurking at hand to defeat his purpose. In this way was Talaka kept strung up to the extreme pitch of rage, until a place was reached which Tembo considered near enough for his design.

Here he separated his subjects. The four bulls who had gone with him before he chose again. The cows and their offspring were left with a strong muster of the younger bulls. And then Tembo went out and challenged Talaka to single combat.

Eagerly Talaka answered in his pride. Time after time he drove Tembo before him in panic seeming flight. Not once did the four who watched the fight make a move to interfere.

Soon Tembo broke away, and fled at speed. His opponent followed in hot haste, and behind him came four grim shadows who knew well their different parts in this tragedy of the wilds.

Not till the pursuit halted abruptly by that awful pit did Talaka perceive his danger.

Once he tried to break away around the edge, and there two bulls stopped him and forced him back with iron strength. Once, trumpeting his anguish till the dim woods rang again, Talaka turned and sought a path in the other direction, and again the road was blocked.

Closing in on their victim in silent patience, the five pressed him backwards.

Terribly Talaka fought and at one attempt he even broke away from his assailants. But the undergrowth delayed him till they fell upon him once more. And then he knew his end was upon him.

Now was nothing left of his ferocious courage, but with the panic of utter despair he turned at the rim of the rustling pit and reared far up upon his hind legs, beating at the air titanic, hopeless blows.

Seeing this, Tembo himself charged home, and the shock of his mighty bulk flung the murderer from the edge. Down Talaka crashed, down into that whispering activity, and there was he instantly engulfed.

Thus and thus was the manner of Talaka's death. And thus was peace at last restored to the herd of elephants over which Tembo claimed unrivaled sovereignty.

OR LEAVE 'EM ALONE

In love with her! That was exactly what he wasn't. That—again came that picture of her, as she had looked that afternoon. She hadn't wanted to see him, but when they were finally together there had been an expression in her eyes which died with his first assured word. In love with Wandine!

He had reached her house, and he was surprised at being admitted immediately to her presence. She was wearing a charming gown and she smiled and held out her hand, as he appeared. As he took her hand, Coby suddenly felt himself shrink; he seemed young and inadequate and useless. And he didn't know what to say.

"You're—you're awfully good to let me see you like this," he blurted. "I—O, Wandine!"

"What?" she demanded softly.

"I don't know." All his conversation had fallen from him; he had no line for this situation: he was totally unprepared. "You know," he said slowly, "I've—I've always tried not to put myself into a position I couldn't get out of. I've never wanted anyone to be able to make fun of me, to spoil my exit line. And you did it this afternoon and you're probably going to do it again tonight." He was silent, hardly conscious that she had moved nearer to him. He raised his head suddenly, honestly. "I said once that you were the only girl I've ever liked. But that's not true. I've liked lots of girls. I—I guess I just used that word—thought it—because I didn't have the nerve to say the other. You'd have made fun of me if I'd told you, so quickly, that you were the only girl I'd ever loved. Probably you'll make fun of me now, but——"

"Coby!"

Her voice brought him up like the crack of a whip. Her face was flooded with color, her eyes were luminous, but now that soft light seemed different. The tone of her voice, lowered, vibrating, wasn't like those other voices he had heard. He had never seen a girl look at all as she did.

"I love you," said Coby quietly. "I've been the biggest fool that ever was. I thought I knew all that there was to known about women. Why, I didn't even know the simplest thing until my mother told me. Wandine—will you marry me?"

For a moment he almost resented her delighted giggle.

"Coby, you're an idiot!" she said joyfully. "And O, I'm so glad. Marry you! Coby dear, I'd adopt you if you wanted me to!"

And there was neither skill nor lack of skill, nothing but pure and simple instinct, in the way his arms went out and encircled her.

Elaine at the Gates by W.B. Maxwell

ELAINE FLETCHER, left an orphan by the death of her father, grows to lovely womanhood at the home of an aunt,
MRS. CASTLETON, in beautiful Nun's House at Tudor Green. Her guardian, infatuated with
THE REV. MARK AWDREY, rector of a fashionable church, dies with a broken heart when the clergyman departs for a tour of South America. Elaine is shocked to learn that her aunt had been married to Awdrey on his last day in London. She goes to live with her uncle and aunt,
MR. AND MRS. MARSH. Ever since she can remember, she has been in love with ARNOLD THORNE, last of an old and important family. Arnold returns from the war in the grip of an unappeasable restlessness and, though at heart he loves Elaine, neglects her and plunges into a violent flirtation with PEARL ESDAILE, a brazen coquette. At length he wakes from his madness, returns to Elaine and wins her promise to be his wife. Fate intervenes, however. Pearl learns that she is to become a mother and Arnold extends the protection of marriage. He breaks off the betrothal with Elaine. Prostrated by grief and horror, she lies near death on the day of Arnold's wedding. A flaw in her aunt's will had left her penniless, distant relatives and Awdrey falling heir to the estate. Upon her recovery she is offered a compromise through her aunt's solicitor,
MR. EVANS. She spurns the offer and takes up residence at the home of
MR. AND MRS. SINCLAIR of Bexhill, becoming governess to Basil, a lame boy of 7. Mr. Sinclair is too fond of girls, Mrs. Sinclair too fond of alcohol. The former becomes fascinated with Elaine as she regains health and some measure of beauty, in spite of a hard, reticent apathy which still envelops her. Awdrey, back from his wanderings, offers Elaine the money that came to him from Mrs. Castleton's estate, but she refuses flatly to take it. Then, in a high-handed manner, the rector carries her off to London, where he has been converting a disused factory into a church, and by the sheer force of his voluble insistence persuades her that she can serve humanity by becoming his wife. So they are married—a "marriage in name only"—and Elaine plunges into the drudgery of work among the poor.

Awdrey was quite careless as to the amount of work that she did or to what dark and even dangerous places the work led her.

INSTALLMENT XIII.

Bond of the Spirit.

AWDREY gave Elaine an unlimited freedom, and was quite careless as to the amount of work that she did or to what dark and even dangerous places the work led her.

He had told her to forget herself, and she had obeyed him. She thought of herself if at all only as a part of a movement, a unit of force in a common effort; she felt much as soldiers feel; she was engaged with many others in a great campaign, each day was a battle, and every tomorrow must renew the fight. During these early days of her adventure when difficulties caused by inexperience and want of local knowledge added their weight to all the other difficulties, she lost herself toward the end of long bouts so completely that it was almost as if she had ceased to exist. She went, she was gone, when sheer fatigue stopped the work.

Thus late at night she would stand in the downstairs room, white faced, limp, with arms hanging loose, and look at Mark Awdrey seated at his desk writing. She stood looking at him vaguely, and when she spoke it was automatically.

"Mark, be sure to put out all the lights."

He turned and saw her by the door in her hat and cloak.

"O, is that you, Elaine? Are you going out?"

"No; I have just come in. I am going to bed."

"Quite right," and he turned to his desk again. "Sleep well."

"Yes, but turn out the lights before you come up yourself."

She said it in a far-away voice. Automatically she was performing a last duty as a housekeeper. Once or twice he had forgotten to switch off the electric light and the servant had found lamps burning next day.

"Good-night."

And it was not Elaine that went upstairs, undressed, and lay down in the bed; it was merely a supreme physical lassitude, a numbed mental effort, a something still bearing her outward shape that had temporarily surrendered in obedience to nature's laws. She woke at daylight with a sting of returning strength, some vague sense of wrong doing, and a keen desire to get to work again without delay and make up for lost time. The night's rest had been simply an interruption. Sometimes, but rarely, he gave her a few words of praise, saying, "You are doing grandly, Elaine. Every one says so. That Miss Thing-a-my-bob—you know, your friend with the goggles and the white hair——"

"Miss Twining?"

"Yes. She says you get right at their hearts. That's fine"; and he generally concluded with a "Stick to it."

Perhaps because of their rareness such commendations were sweet to her, seeming to give an impetus, freshened ardor. For the most part, however, he talked only about himself. But she no longer considered this as evidence of egoism. Moreover, she understood that in these long talks he sought and found the solace of companionship which he had craved from her. She gave it to him loyally.

"Am I not right, Elaine? Could I have done otherwise? I put it to you, Elaine."

SHE was loyal to him. It was her loyalty that kept her patient and enabled her to stifle incipient resentment or indignation when he showed her again and again his careless disregard for the suffering that she struggled to alleviate. Although pouring out money for his church, he grudged her every penny that she spent for her poor. He doled out the smallest possible sums in response to her most urgent demands, telling her she ought really to apply to the vicar, reminding her of parish funds and charitable organizations; and, if she spoke eloquently of some pressing case, he would say, "If it is as bad as all that, send them to me and I will talk to them," meaning by this, as usual, that he would offer spiritual comfort and save expenditure on palliative measures that, to his mind, could produce no real effect.

A divergence of views as wide as this lay always between them.

Whatever she felt she refrained from worrying him because at this early period he had so much else with which to be worried.

Sunday congregations were pitifully small; weekday services were altogether neglected; evening organ recitals with free admissions could not successfully compete against the cinema palaces and public house saloons. Awdrey's influence was slow in asserting itself. The new revelation did not dazzle.

"Don't be discouraged," he used to say. "It's slow, but I am capturing them all right. You'll see. I'll capture them soon."

Nothing shook his confidence.

Then suddenly—or with what seemed to be suddenness when one looked back at it—success came. The church began to fill, it became crowded, there was scarcely standing room in it. To use his favorite expression, Mark Awdrey had captured them. They came—the poor toilers, women and girls, and men; the decent work people and the lame and afflicted; well to do little shopkeepers, wanderers from afar in search of fresh sensations, and deserters from a routine that had grown dull in neighboring churches. Ascetic young priests helped him at the innumerable services, orchestral instruments aided the swelling music of the organ, brilliant lady vocalists joined in the singing of the well practiced choir; the whole thing was a prosperous going concern, talked about by thousands of people, written about in newspapers.

But with the success came opposition, calumny. There appeared now a deepening hostility not only on the part of the neighboring clergymen, but among the people themselves. For a little while it seemed that for each person he won over he aroused six other persons to rage and hatred. The worst sort of husbands went about cursing him because their wives had dared to absent themselves for devotional purposes, and young men threatened to band together and "do him in" because their girls, instead of lounging through the streets with them, sometimes went to hear his organ recitals. The police advised him to be careful where he went, to avoid certain streets after nightfall, and on several occasions his wife's humble friends warned her that immediate mischief was intended. He was deaf to advice, he laughed at warnings; and Elaine at this time, frightened and anxious on his behalf, habitually walked with him at night, waiting for him at the church and going out to find him when he stayed late at meeting places and assembly houses. No one ever molested them; nor did he seem to guess why she had begun thus to escort him, although he thanked her for her pleasant company.

THE enmity lessened, the abuse grew faint, the phase had passed. But before it was quite over, his supporters organized a demonstration among the faithful. They hired a temporarily vacant music hall, and held there one night what they described as the largest and most influential meeting that had ever been seen south of the Thames. That perhaps was high-flown and exaggerated language, but in truth the place was packed tight and the enthusiasm great. Everything had been carefully arranged and there was no real disorder. The influential ones sat in two rows upon the stage, backed by a painted cloth that represented woodland glades and distant lakes, with a famous religious nobleman as their chairman; and in the crowded audience that faced them Elaine recognized here and there some special types of devotees among her husband's congregation, queer little hunchbacked women, men with club feet, the disgraced and disfigured, including two ex-soldiers with terrible damaged faces. And she thought of the extreme difference between these followers and the smugly respectable villa residents of Tudor Green. There had been loud cheering when Mark Awdrey took his seat on the stage, and there were more cheers when the chairman began to talk about him. Elaine, with her face flushing, thrilled as she listened to the words of commendation.

Lord Newmarch told them he had first met Mr. Awdrey doing wonders in a poor parish to the north of London, and later it had been his privilege to see the marvelous revival of faith at Portsmouth. He spoke scathingly and unfairly of the jealous misconduct, the narrow minded bigotry of the hidebound clergy who had persistently attempted to thwart Mr. Awdrey; and at this point the senior curate of the parish, rising to protest, was rebuked for his unseemly interruption but promised that he should be heard later. His lordship went on to say he had watched Mr. Awdrey's career with admiration and reverence. He regarded him as a light, a force, a vivifying flame in a too apathetic church; and he adjured all present to follow Mr. Awdrey whither he was leading them.

There were other speakers, with a vote of confidence; and that promise to the curate of a fair hearing was broken not by the noble chairman, but by the excited audience, who grew clamorous and would not listen. The curate tried to say he represented the vicar of Mr. Awdrey's parish, who was neither bigoted nor prejudiced, who saw no reason why a modus viviendi should not be attained, who had always wished for harmony—but it was no good. They would not have it. The interruptions were too many and too loud.

And then, while the turmoil lasted, a man forced his way shouting and waving arms from the floor of the building, and up the steps to the stage. He clamored to be heard instead of the curate, he shouted that he wished to "testify"; he was like a madman, so evident and resolute that he afforded the president but one alternative—either to have him forcibly removed or to let him address the meeting. Lord Newmarch allowed him to speak—and this was plainly what the audience desired.

"I, James Nathan Wright, testify and declare—and if there's any here that knows me, speak to my identity."

There were cries from a gallery. "Yes, we know you, Jemmy . . . Have a drink . . . How's the missus?"

"Order, order," said the chairman. And the speaker went on. "I, James Nathan Wright, testify that I had fallen lower than the brute beasts, that a darkness had obscured my mind and a destroying and degrading crave had taken its seat in my body, when the man who sits there"—and he pointed dramatically to Mark Awdrey—"entered, unexpected by me, into my pigsty of a home, and rent the darkness and hooded me with light. My friends, this is my testimony—this God's truth. I, James Nathan Wright, was lying there unseen by him. I was sleeping off drink—as many here can answer, I was an habitual drunkard—and between waking an' sleeping, I heard his voice speakin' to my wife—to my poor wife whom I had been punishin' with my fists but a few hours before. Yes, my friends, that was my practice—to buy drink with the money that she and the children needed for food, and to beat the life out of her if she complained." With a fierce satisfaction he dwelt upon his domestic failings. "Yes, that's what I was—I, a man of intellect and education, had dropped down to the level of the lower animals." And he related what Mr. Awdrey had accomplished for him—"seeing the lamp still burning behind this forehead, taking me by the hand, raising me, and giving me the secret." No chairman could have stopped him now, many stewards would have been needed to turn him out. The words poured from his lips; in a fervid passionate flow of language he spoke of the war, "the wicked, bloody, senseless war," the failure of civilization, the massed horrors of modern existence. "It amounts to this. Life won't bear thinking about. And, that, my friends, is his great secret. He teaches the mystery of mysteries. And what he gives us is not so much the promise of immortality, but supreme power here, now—and I say it's more than Jesus Christ himself gave us." There were cries and commotion, loud calls to order, but still he went on. "And who does he interfere with? Who counts when weighed in the balance against him? O, don't talk to me about your established church;" and he made a sweeping gesture of contempt with his outstretched arm. "I appeal to Major Pellatt, over there, of the Salvation army. Major Pellatt, testify."

A bearded man wearing the uniform of the Salvation Army rose and said, in a deep firm voice, "We've no quarrel with Mr. Awdrey."

This brought tumultuous applause; and after it Wright, the convert and reformed character, feeling satisfied with the effect he had produced, or exhausted by his strenuous oratory, left the stage. Immediately there were cries for Mr. Awdrey.

HE rose, at the chairman's request, amidst deafening noise. They gave him a tremendous reception; they cheered, stamped their feet, and rattled their sticks; lads in the gallery made piercing whistles, girls lower down threw flowers at him. Elaine watched him with glowing eyes, feeling pride and joy in this triumph of her fighting partner. Indeed in such an atmosphere of wild enthusiasm it was impossible not to be stirred emotionally. But he himself betrayed no signs of elation. On the contrary, he stood looking austerely and gloomily at his audience while he waited for silence, and when he began to speak his voice was hard, although his words conveyed an expression of friendliness if not of gratitude.

He told them he was touched by their presence as indicative of fidelity, but he had never doubted them. This meeting was not of his arranging. In fact, he had disapproved of it and had consented with great reluctance to its being held. "But now I am glad," and his face softened a little, "because I feel nearer to you." They started cheering, but he held up his hand and stopped them. "I feel nearer to you tonight than I have ever felt." He held up his hand again. "I want you to be silent, please. So that the things I say to you might be said in a whisper. Truly they are not things to shout from the housetops, but rather to breathe into a brother's or a sister's ear, to let creep into the heart with no more than a gesture or a sign." It was wonderful how quiet they were already. Scarcely a rustle of a garment or a movement of shoes sounded from the huge, warm, crowded building, in which the electric light seemed now glaringly bright. But Awdrey made them still quieter. "Remain where you are, but come closer to me in the spirit"; and he opened his hands, as if drawing them all to him. "Let your spirits gather round me here where I stand, and listen with your heart, not with your ears. I will give you thoughts as well as words." It was wonderful, incredible; the silence had become painful in its intensity, like an abnormal arrest of sound rather than natural reposefulness, and in the overwhelming lamp light one had a sensation that a great movement was happening behind one, that people were noiselessly leaving their places and pressing forward to the lights upon the stage. One could not look round, because one's eyes dared not leave the speaker's face. One gazed at it—white in the glare, stern and rigid, yet with benignant purpose. It was hypnotic.

"Now listen——"

Elaine caught her breath, but made no sound. This was his hour of triumph—victory. He held them all. And she thought, "If now he will give them some plain message of hope—some simple comforting message that they can take back to their wretched homes with them——"

He went on speaking and his voice, though he raised it only a little, seemed to fill the building, to grow more voluminous with every word. "These chains of matter that appear to bind us down are not unbreakable. Even the men of science are forced to admit that this matter which they used to lean upon for every explanation of the phenomena that surround them has worn so thin that it has failed as a buttress or foundation of their pessimistic arguments. They have fallen back on the dual aspect of a palpable and impalpable universe. But, believe me, we—we who humbly surrender ourselves—can so govern those perishable bodies as to break the envelope of flesh, to smash our chains, and walk free to an appointed goal. Where are we when we sleep and dream? Is the death which nightly overtakes us when we sink into deep sleep. . . ."

BUT Elaine, glowing, excited, hoping, had felt the cold shock of the often repeated disappointment. For her the spell had been cruelly broken. Emotion could not prevent the logical working of her mind. He had nothing to tell them really. He was talking nonsense—gibberish—that old, old stuff that she had disdained when she first heard it, and must always reject for what it was—such stuff as only an unread imperfectly educated man could allow himself to utter. It has become to him a sort of incantation, an abracadabra; and that was why he launched it at all audiences, no matter how different in class and character they might be. There was nothing—nothing behind it but his own sincere indestructible belief.

She turned her head, this way, that way, studying the other faces, and saw that she alone was unmoved, untouched by it. Lord Newmarch had a rapt expression except when he nodded his head and beamed approval, as though saying "Didn't I tell you so? Didn't I promise he would astonish you all?" Elderly men on the stage were quivering, trembling. White haired Miss Twining wept behind her spectacles. And as Awdrey reached the ringing kind of peroration, that wonderful silence came to an end and one heard the hysterical sobbing of girls and women all over the theater. When he ceased there was the sound of an immense long drawn sigh; people moved in their seats as if waking from sleep; and then the roof seemed to be lifted by a frenzy of applause.

A vote of thanks to Lord Newmarch was proposed, seconded, and declared to be carried unanimously without anybody hearing anything. Then, in the continued noise and cheering, Elaine saw that Lord Newmarch was talking to her husband, pointing down at the crowd.

Awdrey came to the foot lights and held up his hand.

"You are asked to go out quietly, please. No talking—and no pressing. Go out in an orderly manner—and in silence."

They obeyed him. Noiselessly the building emptied itself. The stewards had no trouble; those influential visitors were not mobbed; when Elaine and Awdrey left in a few minutes' time the lights of the auditorium had been extinguished, the outer doors were being bolted, and the street was empty.

As they went away he linked his arm in hers and asked an eager question.

"Did it go—my speech? Was I all right?"

"Yes, Mark," she answered after a pause.

DURING their second winter there was great distress throughout the district, and with want and enforced idleness came political discontent. The men who had fought in the war and the men who had stayed at home, till now inimical, joined hands under the pressure of a common grievance; the red flag was raised; shops in Pooley street were raided, the windows of public buildings broken, and respectable passers-by assaulted and robbed. In the poorest neighborhoods rent collectors dared not go their rounds.

Naturally the violence and despair visible out of doors had its darker reflection in the wretched homes, where one was confronted with what a writer had aptly called "the return of the abyss." At this time the nerves of several visiting sisters and voluntary nurses were broken down by the hideous things they saw. The habitually bad husbands were terrible to their wives; in one street alone three women committed suicide; on the top floor of a tenement house there was found by Miss Twining, too late to save, a helpless old man dying of starvation.

Such matters made Elaine indignant, and there resulted the clash, long inevitable, between her own and her husband's views. It seemed to her that some of these abominable tragedies might have been averted for a few pounds—and Mark would not give them to her. She was regularly using about half her modest household allowance for her own purposes, but beyond this she had no resources; and her indignation was set aflame by certain discoveries that she made with regard to his church. Never had the services been conducted in a more magnificent style. There was singing of famous concert artists; sometimes they had a full orchestra of highly trained musicians; and the lovely flowers, high banks of hothouse blooms, not to mention great feathery trees of mimosa, exotic shrubs and palms, decorated the space at each side of the altar—but all this Elaine had supposed to be provided free of cost by Mark's generous supporters. Now she found that Mark was paying for it all—the salaries of singers and musicians, the iniquitously high charges of a well known fashionable florist, who every week spent his fictitious summer through the wintry suffering streets in a hugh automobile van. That van, with the tradesman's name on the side of it in gold letters, appeared to Elaine as evidence of a monstrous indifference, a superhuman heartlessness.

"Yes, I am using flowers," her husband said calmly. "I am pleased about them. Don't you see, to a lot of people with gardens and conservatories of their own, flowers mean little; but here they have a tremendous effect—especially in this horrible cold weather. I believe I am doing more with my flowers than my music. Don't you think I'm right?"

Elaine told him, forcibly, that she thought him wrong. It could not be said that they quarreled, since admittedly it takes two to make a quarrel and Mark Awdrey declined to be one of the two. But for a little while Elaine was in open revolt.

"You and the others must do the best you can yourselves," he said. "Remember, Elaine, that obstacles are meant to be surmounted."

"But not with your aid?" she said bitterly.

"No," he replied gravely. "Not with aid from me, if you mean money—money that I need for other purposes." Then he roused himself. "Elaine—my dear girl—I'm not unsympathetic. I'll give all the aid in my power. . . . Let us think how I can help you. I'm busy at the moment—but, yes, I'll go with you now. Take me to them and I'll say a few words."

"O, words, words, words! Something more than words are required."

"Are they?" He looked at her searchingly. "I think you're mistaken, Elaine." Shrugging his shoulders, he went back to the writing desk in the bay window, and from there he looked at her again. "What did the Redeemer of Mankind offer? Words—and thoughts. What else?"

"He performed miracles."

"And how do you know He isn't performing them here, too?"

ELAINE said no more then. She could not trust herself. But a little later she came and asked if he would allow her to make some attempt to raise money on her own account.

He gave her permission to do so; and with the assistance of Mrs. Lennox Dale she succeeded in arousing the interest of a group of fashionable women at the other end of the town. On her behalf they organized a tea dance at Claridge's, some tableaux at the Ritz hotel, and a matinee at a theater. These kindly charitable efforts resulted in a grand flow of cash.

Mark praised and seemed to respect her for the substantial profits that her fine ladies had brought her; but then he told her genially, yet firmly, that he must henceforth have his share for the church.

She could not at first believe that he was in earnest, and when she found that he really meant what he said she was again indignant. She said that such treatment of her was unjust. This money was hers, to use as she pleased; she had obtained it by her own initiative, her own work.

But he said, smiling, that she was under a delusion. "You are trading on my reputation, Elaine—or on the reputation of the church. Then the injustice would be if you deprived the church of its proper share."

"What do you suggest as a proper share?" she asked, almost crying.

"Half and half. We'll share and share alike."

"O, no."

"O, yes." He insisted, and she was compelled to agree.

"Now you have done well, but don't push it too far. Take it from me, there is no living source beneath these philanthropic fountains that you have set flowing. They will go dry in a minute."

And unfortunately they did. After the successful matinee another tea dance proved a fiasco, and Elaine received a longish bill instead of a cash balance.

Mark Awdrey paid the bill; but he was severe with her, authoritatively telling her to drop all further ventures, expressing a stern hope that it might be a lesson to her, and assuring her that the whole thing had worried him excessively.

AFTER that struggle about dividing the money, the clash was over. Elaine bowed to his law. Throughout the summer things were easier for her, or she was better able to face their difficulties. Her sphere was widening, and yet she seemed to have a firmer grip on the nearer realities.

She drew strength from him. Although he rushed about always in a hurry, the atmosphere he shed was calming and fortifying. She knew whether he was in the house or not, even if she did not see him.

Coming home in the twilight on these summer evenings the external aspect of the house told her if he was there. As soon as she put her hand on the latch of the low garden gate she knew. A sense of solitude and desertion touched her, the shadow of the great blank wall seemed darker and colder, the place was empty; or, on the other hand, it seemed to say that in its poor way it was her shelter, her stronghold, the friendly little place to which she belonged. With this feeling she walked firmly across the gusky gravel, through the dark entrance, and pushing the sitting room door spoke unhesitatingly.

"Mark, don't you want the light?" and she switched on the electric lamps.

"Thank you, Elaine. How goes it?"

"Very well indeed, thank you, Mark."

The summer glided away, and she saw the approach of another winter without dread. Still her sphere of activity widened. She did recklessly brave things, and was sent on such errands of danger as the rest recoiled from. She spent herself in purposeful labor; and still the strength and courage came to meet the call. She helped in the church now, supervising decorative effects, taking charge of extravagantly valuable lace and hangings, and at some of the minor services she played the organ; for Mr. Ord, the organist, and Mr. Laurie, his assistant, had been kinder to her music than was her husband.

At last she was mentally at peace. She took a gentle diffused pleasure from the church itself, and although an outcast and an unbeliever, liked being in it, warmed with sympathy to its appeal, and felt moved intellectually while remaining emotionally cold. For everybody else beneath the high carved roof it worked solely on the emotions.

It had an effect of unnatural lofitness; of severity too, in spite of the richness, the oriental richness of the altar. It was like other churches and yet unlike them; but one could not sit there watching, listening, and fail to realize the strength of its spell. Young and old, men and women, all round her succumbed. They were held, they were made to vibrate, by its sweet, its lacerating swell music; they were lulled to an imagined ease by its mingled perfumes of incense and flowers; they were drawn, drawn, drawn, by the personal magnetism of its high priest.

He stood in its pulpit of colored marble and mosaic, and the marble flashed in the light and the glittering of the gold dazzled them; he cast his eyes upon them, he looked down upon them with a glance that was terrible because of its unflinching benevolence and unpitying kindness; and he gave them—words and more words.

BUT Elaine had ceased to analyze the purport of his teaching, or its lack of purport. She seemed now completely to understand that this did not matter. Its objective effect was undeniable. With it he lifted people, he made them better. She had but to see the look in the faces of her rough factory girls as they came out of the church after listening to it, to be sure of this obvious, irrefutable fact. He no longer had to beg her to send hard cases to him. She sent them of her own accord.

One might describe the condition or state that she had now reached by saying that it was her final acceptance of Mark Awdrey and the submission of herself to his mind without reserve.

She was conscious of something incessantly ennobling, something that unquestionably contained the essence of greatness, in the life that they had successfully led for so long in this narrow house. Nothing usual, common, or base entered into it. It was a bond of the spirit. Sometimes when she was with him during one of their brief hours of leisure she had no impression of any kind from his bodily aspect. He was a spiritual presence, and nothing more—a mind, a heart, call it what you will, that had bound her to it in an amazing but satisfying partnership.

Indeed, there were two Mark Awdreys: the impalpable, enigmatical Mark that governed and controlled her, that she took as guide and leader; and the outward, overwhelming man Mark, the tall shape, the strong, muscular creature that, because either of gross carelessness or some pathological failure of co-ordination between its iron muscles and overcharged nerves, was ready at any minute to push a glass from the edge of the table or knock over a tureen full of hot soup. But she had accepted this secondary Mark as well as the other, the higher one that she meekly obeyed; she had accepted him with all his inexplicable deficiencies, his unkempt locks and untidy habits, his noise, his fretfulness, his childish outbursts. His clumsiness no longer made her jump or wish to scream; she could touch him without reluctance; she had not the slightest fear of him. In fact, to this one she herself could be stern and severe; reversing the roles, she to a certain extent ruled and governed him, and it was he who submitted.

"Mark, stop. You are not going out like that. I must brush you."

"Elaine, I have no time—no time. Honestly, I can't."

But she stopped him on the outer threshold. "I tell you I am not going to let you go out with your coat in that state."

He stood being brushed, quivering, stretching himself, making the melancholy yawning sounds that a large, impatient dog makes in a similar predicament.

"Don't be so silly, Mark. Don't make such a fuss," said Elaine, brushing resolutely. "There!" and, smiling, she let him go.

"Thank you, Elaine." He was gone—outside the house. "Much obliged. You're too good." His voice came faintly—he was in the street.

Her feelings for this man that she took care of were sisterly, motherly, above all, those of a housekeeper—a housekeeper who liked her single gentleman and meant to do her duty by him. At suitable times she used to go with the servant into his bedroom and give it a thorough cleaning. She inspected the room and everything in it, taking away dreadful worn out toothbrushes, nailbrushes, combs, and supplying new ones; she removed ugly gray flannel shirts for mending; she gave out another blanket for his bed because the weather was getting cold, or ordered that he should be deprived of two blankets because it was very warm; and once she burned his horrid, disgraceful old dressing gown. He noticed nothing except the loss of the dressing gown, and about that he complained bitterly.

The servant had thought at the time that Mrs. Awdrey was going too far and had dreaded wrath. "Couldn't it be put on one side, ma'am?" Catherine had said. "Or even given away to some poor person who'd be glad to have it?"

But Elaine had been firm. "No," she said; "burn it." And she was firm to her protesting Mark. "I have asked you again and again to buy yourself a new one."

He submitted grudgingly. After shuffling for weeks between the bath and his room with a tattered mackintosh about his shoulders he showed himself one morning in a freshly purchased dressing gown of the cheapest and gaudiest kind.

CAUDEBEC-EN-CAUX.

RETURNING to a quiet corner of Normandy, after the clamorous excitement of Deauville, we have once again taken up the good old habit of reading books. At Deauville one reads little save the London Daily Mail and the Paris edition of The Chicago Tribune, though we did manage to finish a novel, "Proud Flesh," and found it enormously entertaining. But Deauville, to be quite frank, is a disappointment; one journeys there expecting to find a chic Monte Carlo beside a summer sea—and discovers it to be a bogus Atlantic City. Or a South Haven. Deauville is nouveau. The casino, in the glittering sunlight, looks like a Hollywood movie set, and by day one sees nobody but Americans: North and South Americans. Parading about are squadrons of weighty and wealthy women, bearing marked racial characteristics and wearing much embroidery upon their elaborate clothes. And the one distinguished looking personage, the fellow with the square beard, who resembles Grand Duke Boris, turns out to be the concierge of the Hotel Normandy.

So we were little loath to return to Caudebec, where, instead of top hats and dancing pumps, the natives wear peasant caps and wooden shoes. Moreover, Caudebec has certain literary aspects. Victor Hugo used to dwell in a villa just up the Seine, and his two sons were drowned while rowing here. That is perhaps the only authentic literary tradition about the place; but there is an old man to be seen ambling along the quay who looks startlingly like Ibsen, and each afternoon when there is a wind ruffling the Seine we sail in a rakish craft named the Gustave Flaubert. And no voyage could be more literary than that—unless Joseph Conrad were skipper, with William McFee working the bilge pump.

A famous dramatic critic once warned us against employing the word "significant" in chatting about a book; but this week we are forced to drag in the old word and dust it off, for we have encountered a great novel. It is surprising that more ado is not being made over it, for it is one of the truly big books of the age, "bigger and better" (as the Babbitts say) than Hamsun's "Growth of the Soil." In fact, we doubt if a novel of such depth and scope has come out of Europe in this generation. "The Philosopher's Stone" is its title, and a Scandinavian named J. Anker Larsen is entitled to the laurel to decorate his derby. But already he has been handed a prize more valuable than the acclaim of critics, for this novel won the Danish-Norwegian Gyldendal award, equal to $14,000.

"The Philosopher's Stone" is a book of such extraordinary power that, compared to it, all the other novels of the season are like so many paper pamphlets. Its story presents an amazing sweep of life, and an array of characters, each with a particular relationship to some stratum of Danish existence, that one will never forget. Here is a book more striking than anything the Dreisers and Wassermanns and Sherwood Andersons of the world have ever achieved, a magnificent blend of realism, romance, and philosophy, remarkably written. It is useless to attempt to set down any coherent plan of the story, which carries two boys, from the groping philosophy of childhood, through adolescence to manhood, with its mirages and disappointments. Jens Dahl, the clerk's son, of the little market town in Denmark, believes as a child that he knows God, and later goes to study theology. Christian Barnes, the minister's son, after futile years in the university, goes to America to search for The Philosopher's Stone, and returns, decided to leave the stone where it is. "I'm sure it's not worth having," he tells Dahl. "Perhaps its real philosophy consists in its being so well hidden." Jens Dahl learns at school that theology drives him from Christianity, and in his search for God he samples various creeds and cults, from mysticism to occultism. In the end he walks into the river and the water closes over his head. It is Holger, the brute, who in one of his insane rages has plunged a muck fork through the throat of the girl he loves and gone to prison for the crime, who eventually finds God.

"He is not to be thought but lived," Holger tells the professor at the end of the story. "We are nearer to Him when we scarcely believe He exists, but feel Him within us. Yes, in us—for His place is a poor one. So poor that it may be found everywhere and is every man's property. Yes, truly, God's hidden dwelling lies by the highway, so openly that nobody notices it. But of Him nothing can be said, except that He is. What can be said is this: There is a God for every one who needs Him."

A remarkable and a beautiful novel, "The Philosopher's Stone," and with it Larsen has gained for himself a shining place among the great writers of the day.

We read, with vast enjoyment, Emile Henriot's novel, "Aricie Brun, ou Les Vertus Bourgeoises," which won the French academy prize for 1924. If it has not already been bought for American translation, some wise young publisher should take a two dollar bill, which is worth 17,673 francs, and purchase the rights. That is the way with us in America: not content with the mountainous output of our own books each season, we import the best (and much of the mediocre) from Europe. But try to find an American book in Europe! So far as we can learn, the only American writers known in France are Edgar Allan Poe, Sherwood Anderson, and Irving Berlin.

OUTFITTING THE GIRL FOR COLLEGE

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—One sympathizes with the woman who said her only objection to August was September. For August means to many of us merely a preparation for the duties that await us the next month. Going back to town with its consequent refurbishing of our own wardrobes, getting children ready for school, equipping the older boy or girl for college—all these things frequently convert the latter part of August into a laboratory.

In discussing the problem of clothes for the girl who will next month set off for college one must begin by saying that always the student at Vassar, Smith, or any of the women's colleges introduces a special atmosphere into the modes of the moment. Her modification of fashion is exactly the same as that observed in the attire of the college man. The undercollegiate at Princeton or Yale follows the mode, but he often makes some detours of his own. By the dent of his hat or his way of wearing his socks or some other detail of attire you may recognize that he is a well dressed collegian and not a well dressed broker.

This same disposition to depart from the beaten path of fashion, to run off into some little by-ways of her own, is evident in many of the clothes worn by the modern college woman. Of course, such waywardness is confined usually to sports clothes, for in the selection of more formal attire she deviates in no wise from her sister beyond the campus.

Sweaters and separate skirts, sports frocks of tub silk, English broadcloth and crepe, sports coats—these constitute now, as always, the entrance requirements of the college woman. Sports clothes are the basis of her wardrobe, and other attire stands in the light of so many elective courses.

Let us take up, first of all, the question of suits. For the woman not bound by college walls the tailleur has lost much of its significance. Gone are the little boyish suits which last spring descended upon us in gales. The fury of the storm has been spent, and the only suits now emphasized are those models with the excessively long jacket designed by Patou and O'Rossen.

Long! The jacket of this season is taking a real post-graduate course. Instead of finishing at the hips or the knees, it extends almost to the hem of the skirt. It has taken, in fact, its final degree. It is now doctor of length.

This type of tailleur is shown for the college woman, as well as for all other classes of femininity, but it is at this point that I am compelled to go back to a former observation. The suit with a jacket long as a Macaulay sentence is a smart suit, but to my mind it lacks that special jauntiness and spirit of youth which should distinguish the college woman's clothes. And for this reason I should give the preference in tailleurs to a model with short, belted jacket.

I have said the boyish suit is rapidly going out. This ebb tide, however, has got taken with it a short jacket which is belted. Such coats are combined with skirts which often introduce godets or plaits in the direct front and made up in various mannish mixtures, tailleurs of this character are presented under the term of sports suits. As such they complement the long jacketed types of which I have spoken.

While a suit of this character, maintaining a balance between sports and street wear, is highly advisable for the college woman it is not absolutely essential. The gap between campus and street may be bridged satisfactorily by means of frocks and separate coats. Indeed, when it comes to the latter the fair collegian cannot afford to take a cut.

For some seasons past all our large football games have indicated the close relation between campus and jungle. Sports coats of raccoon, leopard cat, civet cat, and all the other furs of that character have been the college girl's almost unanimous reply to the question, "What shall I wear?" This season the taste for tropical pelts has not cooled, and among the number offered leopard cat in three-quarter length is the one accorded the highest degree of favor.

As to the sports coats for the intermediate season, those of tapestry weave with trimming of Japanese mink are now widely exploited. Allied with these are others in plaid and stripe effect and also some stunning models in homespun and novelty cloth. Some type of rever is the usual accompaniment of these sports coats, but it is interesting to know that, even if winter come, the scarf will not entirely go. Indeed, the scarf collar has a certain message of youth and charm which makes it always consistent with the college girl's outfit.

A coat for autumn days which incorporates the scarf as industriously as did Isolde herself is shown at the right in a gray kasha model trimmed with gray and black braid and lining its scarf with vivid red silk. This has a one button closing, and the application of the braid to the front of the coat is especially interesting.

If any one imagines that the ensemble suit and the thermometer are working together, that the fall of the mercury is going to result in the fall of the costume comprising frock and wrap, that somebody is doomed to disappointment. The ensemble suit in all degrees of elaboration is a feature of all early autumn showings, and its interpretation for the college woman is illustrated second from the left.

Here we have one of the smooth surface cloths in the bronze brown so much stressed for fall. The blouse is of yellow crepe, and the simple coat lined with a printed silk in brown and yellow. The simplicity of this costume makes it an admirable choice for the undergraduate's excursion into town. Incidentally, one may remark that the coat of this costume may be prolonged to the hem of the frock. For the coat of the fashionable autumn tailleur is no more thorough in its efforts than is that accompanying the ensemble. This latter often establishes its novelty by being of equal length with the skirt.

For the frock worn at dinner one thinks immediately of crepe. This, however, does not forestall many afterthoughts. There, for example, are the flowered crepes and chiffons which have helped so many of us pass away the summer. These are being held over for autumn wear and, to alternate with the inevitable crepe model, there are many charming versions of this fabric usually trimmed with bands or flounces, draperies, or gorets of plain material.

Another fashion which lends itself to college service is that of the tunic blouse. Here again we cry, "Pretty flower," and encore often in the flowered chiffon, silk, or crepe. Such tunic blouses, reaching far below the knees, may certainly be numbered among the hand maidens of economy, for through the basic expense of a separate skirt of satin one may produce the effect of a glittering variety of frocks. Thus a tunic blouse of flowered material may be supplemented by several in plain crepe, one embroidered and one beaded, and all differentiated otherwise by minor details of finish.

For the frock of charmeen or twill which the college woman needs, both for classes and excursions from classes, there are infinite possibilities of being puzzled. We see coat dresses buttoning down the front and finished off by revers—inflections of the model which Jenny has made so famous. We see a number of charming variations on the peasant theme, with embroidery taking an active part in carrying out the message of typical peasant sleeves and rounded neck line. There are tunic models and straight line models, belted and unbelted, plaited and embroidered.

A delightful frock which may be developed in either crepe or cloth is found in the center of the page. The original is in the new spinach green crepe, and a vestee of fine tucked white organdy, flanked by crystal beads, extends its sway to a collar of self-material. The apron front is repeated in the apron back, and both panels are edged with bias folds of self-material.

The unbelted silhouette is represented next in a natural kasha cloth, which fulfills the promise made by two effective groups of tucks in front by a back which extends its tucks from neck line to hem. Incidentally, one may remark that natural kasha has scored a triumph among autumn cloth models.

Lucky Hundred to See Vaudeville Show with Sally

By Sally Joy Brown.

WHAT DO YOU LIKE BEST IN VAUDEVILLE?

ARE you wondering what the next party is going to be, boys and girls? It's a splendid one, you'll agree, when I tell you what it is, and you'll want to be in on it—because we are going to see a wonderful vaudeville program at one of Chicago's prettiest theaters, the Majestic, on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 22.

Just look at the program, as the Majestic has arranged it, and you'll start your winning letters immediately. As sample of all the treats we'll have, I'll tell you about a few of the acts we'll see! There is "Nelson's Catland" with wonderfully trained cats performing all sorts of tricks, then Fargo and White give a screamingly funny black faced act called "In a Bit of Africanology." And there is Mildred Andre and six girls with Billy Nelson in "A Symphony of Tone and Color." In this act we have violinists, singing, and dancing. Mahon and Cholet—two boys from Texas—you'll like, I know, because they're funny and they dance and yodel, too.

We'll see many, many more fine acts that I'll tell you about tomorrow.

Now for the letters to win your invitation! Just as before, I want to invite the 100 children whose letters show they will enjoy the party most. So I am asking the question you see above—about what you like in vaudeville best—and your answers to that question will show how much you'll enjoy the party. Then the hundred best letters will win the invitations. It's just a matter, you see, of showing me how much you'll enjoy the show—so start your letters right away. Be sure, also, to give your name, address, and age.

Now for the winners of the circus and the arrangements I've made for meeting you!

I've chosen the winners, and I'm printing their names below; also I shall mail a letter to each of you so you will get it by Tuesday. In the letter I'll give all information about how we'll meet. So if your name is in the winning list, be on the lookout for your invitation.

Below are the 100 lucky winners for the circus

Practical and Fancy Needlework

By CLOTILDE

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang properly, or setting a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago.

HAT FOR A BRIDESMAID.

THE hat shown for the bridesmaid is of violet horsehair or so-called Neapolitan body hat. The short back is about two inches wide, the sides four inches, and the front three and one-half inches. It has a slight droop which is more becoming than the straight brim for semi-dress.

The edge is bound in violet velvet. This takes one-quarter of a yard of velvet cut on the bias. For the binding, or flange, this velvet is cut in half and joined.

Put seam on the right side of brim and pull around to the left side—not too tight or the frame will pull out of shape. Pin the velvet at the left side, then bring from the back to the left side, pinning the velvet at the selvage. Sew on the machine, using a seam about three-eighths inch wide. (Hand sewing does not hold or look so well, but when no machine is available, use a backstitch, sewing closely together and taking a stitch also between the stitches.)

Press all seams well. Press the velvet seams open with your finger, or over the edge of the machine. The velvet is now joined and ready for the hat. Place the center on the edge of the hat and fold in about one-half inch all around. Pin firmly. Then blind-stitch, taking care not to show any stitches. For the under side begin the blindstitching at the center of the back, folding in the velvet one-half inch all round as on upper side. This flange or binding, when finished, will be one and one-half inches wide.

The crown is plain and close fitting —known in millinery parlance as "skull-fitting." The skirts, as illustrated, take one-half yard of georgette on the straight of the material which comes double width. Cut in two at fold and use one-half for each skirt.

Pin from front to back and from side to side in the facing of brim, then pin closely all the way round the edge so that it fits easy. Pin georgette in head size from front to back and side to side. Use silk thread, and baste around the line of head size. Silk thread will not leave holes or mar, especially when basting on soft materials. Using silk thread, baste georgette with a small stitch on the outer edge of brim, all the way round. Then another basting one inch out from the first one—here the hemstitching will be done either in black, purple or violet.

After hemstitching press with a warm iron before cutting the center of the hemstitching to make the picot. This makes a better finish, as the material will not draw or ravel.

Cut the inside of basting in the head size, and always mark the front of hat and skirts to use as a guide when putting bands on the brim. The illustration has a crown sewed on.

Slip the finished skirt down over the crown, keep the markings together, and bring the basting thread to the edge of hat again. Slash material if too small to fit around bottom of crown, but be careful not to cut too deeply, or this will bring too far out on the brim.

The next skirt is put on in the same way, only instead of being flat on the brim it is thrown back on the front of the crown, and falls on the brim at sides and back.

The trimming is silver ribbon four inches wide drawn around the crown, showing between the skirts in front and ending in a flat bow in the back.

F. M. has had a long siege of illness. He needs help. Who can and will give it?

Supporting Father.

"I am trying to support my father and myself on $10 a week, and after the board and room bills are paid there is nothing at all left with which to buy clothes. We are almost destitute for something to wear. Has any one a discarded suit, size 42-44, to give to my father, or anything, size 36-38, for me? I would so like to go to church, but feel that my clothes are too shabby. Is there some one who can help us? L. M. I."

Some masculine readers will come to the front here, I am sure. Any outgrown clothing will be most gratefully received by L. M. I.

Ashe Ocean Box.

"There are many things to buy and little money to spend in our family. I am asking you for a gas oven box for my three burner gas stove. Perhaps some one has one not in use. Then, too, I wish to ask for some boxing gloves for my boys, if it is not too much. I have four boys, 14, 13, 10, and 8, who are much interested in boxing, and I cannot spare the money for gloves for them. Mrs. A. S."

If there is an available gas oven box, you shall have it, Mrs. S. I think too, that some one may have boxing gloves for your boys.

War in Debt.

"I have had a lot of sorrow, losing my two oldest children, and have just come back from the hospital. I am greatly in need of clothes and could use most anything, as I can sew. My size is 38. I have a little girl 3 years old and an infant. My husband is a steady worker when there is work. This is the first time I ever felt as if I had to ask for help, and I wouldn't now, but we are so much in debt that I can't see my way out. Mrs. R. K."

Would Appreciate Suit.

"Repeated sickness of myself and family during the last few months make it impossible for me to make both ends meet, and as I hope to be able to go about my business again shortly, I come to you for help. I need a suit of clothes. I am 55 years old, and if any of your readers could pass on a business suit, I would greatly appreciate it—coat size 37; trousers' waist 35. Will gladly pay express charges. "F. C. G."

Have you a suit to pass on to the head of this family, so that he may make a presentable appearance on his return to work?

Annette Needs Knickers.

"I wonder if you can help me out. Some friends invited me to take a week's motor trip with them to their camp for a three weeks' vacation. I need knickers, but I can't afford them. I wonder if any one has a discarded pair—or a discarded coat that could be made into knickers. We will be leaving the last week in August. Anything you do will be appreciated. I've never had a chance to go on a trip like this before. ANNETTE T."

It would be too bad if Annette weren't able to get the full enjoyment out of her holiday. Knickers will be a comfort to her in camp life, and if you can help her out we will be happy to let her know.

Must Have Clothing.

"I received some baby clothes through you some time ago. Now I need clothing for myself. I have a chance to take my babies to the country for two weeks, but I can't go unless I have some clothing, and can't afford to buy any, as we are so far in debt. My husband had his foot crushed and has just started to work again after many weeks' absence. It takes every cent he can earn to pay our bills. You don't know what it would mean to us to get to the country for a while. My little girl, 20 months old, has rickets, so it would mean much to her.

"Mrs. M. McG."

Who will volunteer to rush some clothing to Mrs. M., so she and her little ones may have that much needed outing without further delay? They are fortunate to have the opportunity. What a pity if they are unable to take advantage of it.

Can't Buy Swing.

"I would appreciate it if some reader has a yard swing to give me. I have two little girls, 4 and 7, and would like to keep them in the yard, and cannot afford to buy a swing for them.

"Mrs. E. U."

Probably you have a lawn swing stored away in your basement. If so, won't you pass it along for the relief of this busy mother and the pleasure of her little girls?

Ill and Out of Work.

"My husband has been ill and out of work. I have three children. The boys wear size 14 and 16 clothing and I wear size 40. My husband is badly in need of clothes. He is about 6 feet, and takes size 16½ shirt, and wears a size 11 shoe. The boys wear 3½ and 7½ shoes. Anything you can give us in clothing or underwear will be greatly appreciated. Mrs. M. S."

Clothing given this family will aid wonderfully in giving the father new courage to face the world after his illness.

Loss by Fire.

"We had the misfortune of losing everything in a fire. My husband and I have not been well for years, and being close to 60 we find it hard to replace our loss. Do you thing one of your readers could help us in our need? We surely would be grateful.

"Mrs. I. M."

To meet such trouble as this couple, late in years and in poor health, is surely unfortunate. They will hardly be able to get back on their feet without your kind help, which I am sure will be graciously given.

They'd Like a Tent.

"If some one has a tent no longer needed I would like to be remembered. My husband's wages are small and we have had extra expense lately. The children have bothered me the last year for a tent to play in, out of the hot sun, and it would take a load off my hands. I will pay express charges and thank you for your kindness.

"Mrs. Wm. S."

Perhaps a camper who has purchased a new tent this season will part with his old one.

Rubber Keys for Typewriter.

"I have a complete set of rubber keys for a standard typewriter. They are like new. I'd be glad to pass them on to some one. H. H."

I would like to hear from any one interested in the offer of H. H.

ANSWER TO WHAT'S WRONG HERE

If you have accomplished a goodly task for your fellowmen, don't spoil it by singing thereof through the streets. Let it be found out or not, as fate wills.

USE CANTHROX Shampoo

WASHING SHINGLE-BOBBED HAIR

Those who luxuriate in the time-saving shingle-bob coiffure especially appreciate the simplicity of a canthrox shampoo.

Enjoy a delightful shampoo at very little effort and for a very trifling cost by getting from your druggist a package of canthrox and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid—enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. Your shampoo is now ready. Just pour a little at a time on the scalp and hair until both are entirely covered by the daintily perfumed preparation that thoroughly dissolves and removes every bit of dandruff, excess oil and dirt. After rinsing, the hair dries quickly with a fluffiness that makes it seem heavier than it is and takes on a rich luster and a softness that makes arranging it a pleasure.

They Had to Laugh.

About three weeks after I was married my husband and I went into the bank with some checks to have indorsed.

The clerk taking the checks said, "Pardon me; I've forgotten your name."

I gave my maiden name and then said, "Er—er—no, Chase."

My husband spoke up: "And to think she's forgotten her name after we've been married three weeks."

Then we all had a good laugh.

Through the Peephole.

Our private offices are divided from each other by low partitions of wood and frosted glass. In one corner of our office is a high file, and behind this file is a little peephole allowing one to look into the next office.

One day when I was alone I heard some unusually boisterous laughing in the neighboring office. I wedged myself in behind the file and squinted through the hole into the next office. So absorbed was I that I did not notice Mr. Smith, the head of our department, stroll in.

In the next office some of the boys were demonstrating the tango. I thought it was funny and chuckled quite loudly.

Of course, Mr. Smith heard me and came to the file and nearly broke his handsome old head trying to discover my whereabouts.

"A pleasant pastime," remarked he, dryly, and stood aside for me to pass him.

I'm not fat by any means, but I had a dreadful time getting out. Did I feel foolish. O, man. S. B.

Call the Cop.

My most embarrassing moment occurred the other morning on my way to work. When I stepped off the street car the traffic cop was holding the north and south traffic. I wanted to get across the boulevard before the traffic changed. I was just about half way across when my purse opened, my powder and other cosmetics falling out.

Imagine my embarrassment when I had to walk back to the middle of the street to pick up my belongings, the cop holding up traffic for me. H. S.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Black crêpe satin ensemble of straight coat and tube dress. | Varicolored chiffon bands deck a lovely beige lace frock. | Parisienne version of the garçonne frock done in alpaca. | Rever and inner sleeves of white sound the feminine note.

SEVERELY SIMPLE IS THE EDICT

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—This is the desultory season. The fashionable world idles on the beach, lazily takes a turn at the wheel in the casino, or listens indifferently to music, with a hand of bridge now and then for the more energetic. There is a kaleidoscopic effect of brilliancy in the shifting groups with their summer costumes, but individually the mode is expressed with a plainness which amounts in many cases to severity.

I observe that the tailleur is little in evidence, being replaced almost entirely by the three piece suit and by the tailored dress. There is a dead line for the tailleur when it does appear, either in Paris or at the resorts, and that line is midday, before luncheon. Even in the morning hours the smartest women prefer a simple frock with a straight coat or the robe tailleur.

Such a three piece as is shown in our first offering is a representation of the perfection of taste and the finest exposition of the smart ensemble. It is as unpretentious as the storied lilies with its straight coat of black satin, guiltless of attachments and hanging straight from the shoulders, with a collar which may be worn high at the back and flaring at the sides or laid flat in boyish fashion. The dress is a straight slip of black crepe satin, with a row of white buttons down the center front, sewed on with black thread, and two inset pockets on both sides of the front piped with white silk braid. This dress was sketched by our artist as the smartest costume seen at Deauville on the first days of the season there, and it illustrates successfully the restraint imposed by women of impeccable taste upon the day time mode.

There are occasional evidences of the period influence to be seen which are exceedingly smart touches, but never more than that—a jabot or a high crowned hat to suggest the directoire, a bouffant skirt and dropped shoulder blouse from the second empire, a Spanish bolero, perhaps, but only one item of the costume betrays the inspiration. They subdue the historic significance to its minimum, leaving a dash of piquant allusion only.

The accepted way to get yourself up is in the narrow slip that is the severest exponent of the summer mode, with infinitesimal sleeves and a neck line which wiggles from one side to the other, exposing alternately the left and right shoulder, and trimming reduced to its lowest rudiments, piping braid and buttons being about the limit. If your dress is beige in color it is a little more than all right, for beige is leading at Deauville, with black and white a close second. For your hat almost any small shape will do, except the cloche, but, so fine are the distinctions the cloche ceases to be a cloche when its fraction of a brim is turned up at any point around the crown, the favorite turning places being sides and front.

It is along toward evening, at the tea hour, or the aperitif hour that fashion relaxes a bit, and then uniforms are put off for the frivolity of laces and chiffon. You never see these delectably filmy gowns before that time of the day, however, any more than you would see a tailleur after dejeuner. They begin to blossom with the waning light, and they carry over into the evening the daytime colors I have told you about—chiefly, that is, black, and white. On these gowns, however, bits of bright color, tulle scarfs, sashes, and bands are allowed. Actually they are encouraged, and they help to make the evenings bright after a neutral sartorial day.

Our second model is one of those filmsy but incontrovertible arguments in favor of the filmy frock on which fashionable Paris continues to smile. It is a Cyber gown, made of lace, with a motif done in black and white on beige net, and with a scarf arrangement of lace lined in green chiffon. The scarf begins at the top of the girdle on one side, passes around the neck in back, and is attached at the lower edge of the girdle on the other side. Beyond this scarf the blouse has no decoration, and the skirt is almost equally single, being one of those wrap around affairs, with but scant fullness. It becomes delicately colorful by means of its bands of chiffon—brown, green, and beige—which edge the bottom and the loose hanging left side. The crush girdle of lace is edged by these varicolored chiffon bands also.

This outbreak of the purely feminine temperament, supposedly suppressed expressed in laces and frills, occurs only in a limited part of the fashionable day, the majority of the hours going to the severe and the garconne types of frock, which may or may not be related. In the latter an interesting variation of French and American taste is apparent. The Parisienne never carries the masculine note to the extreme in her garconne frocks, while the American is frequently accused of being mannish. It is a matter of details, altogether. On the boyish silhouette they agree, but Parisienne will only use these masculine touches to accentuate her femininity, reverting invariably to the contrasting feminine to accentuate this.

You can see what [illegible] is by looking at our third model, a garconne frock from Cyber, which shows the Parisienne's idea of the matter. There is a semi-masculine gilet of white georgette, the collar of which suggests a boy's sport shirt, and the cuffs are a bit of feminine satire on the discomfort of the masculine stiff cuff, the stiff portion here being imposed over a wider and deep cuff of white georgette and attached thereto by double links.

The frock is made of black alpaca, having a line plaid design of white. This material is replaced from a point just below the hip line to the knees by skin black, and a sash of the plain alpaca is knotted loosely on the left hip. The flounce from the knees to the hem has clusters of tiny plaits to give it fulness. It is another feminine touch which the Parisienne takes pleasure in adding to her garconne dress.

Paris is mad about the severely simple frock, but she insists that it shall be essentially feminine, no matter how severe. The plainest of white collars and cuffs are frequently seen, but they are never stiffly masculine, either in material or cut, and often are so made that they form the really feminine note of the costume.

Such an idea is expressed in our fourth figure, which shows a Callot model worn by Mrs. Kemp, a straight line frock of black shantung, absolutely plain, with a wide belt of black leather at the low waist line. It is the flaring inner sleeves of white mousseline de soie and the single rever of white which tell the tale of distinction and feminine charm. The one step of departure from the severity of the ensemble is seen here, and it shows the way in which the taste of the Parisienne goes.

DUTY OR DEVOTION? —by Doris Blake

Love and Understanding Between Parent and Child Will Exclude All Talk of Duty

WHERE finances permit, do the duties of parents toward their children include a college education?

Is it fair for a father to deliver an ultimatum on a girl's eighteenth birthday that henceforth his responsibility toward her ends?

What is your opinion of a man, in good circumstances, who forces his daughter into the business world, for which she is inadequately trained, and expects her to pay five out of her fifteen dollars a week for board?

The girl in question was never given the slightest inkling until her graduation from high school that a college course would not naturally follow. It was the dream of her life to go to college. Instead of taking commercial courses in high school to fit her for business opportunities, she was encouraged to take the college preparatory course.

Then out of a clear sky her father said: "In two weeks you will be 18. You will be of age, legally, and I shall expect you to look after yourself from then on."

Trite but True.

"We hear so much of the child's duty to its parents," protests Marion, of the blighted college career. "But is not the duty of parents to the child fully as great. The statement that children do not ask to be born but are brought into this world through powers over which they, the children, had no control, has been worn threadbare but still remains true. There are thousands of young folk today who are questioning that word 'duty' and its application. And I am one of them.

"You cannot realize how staggered I was when father delivered his ultimatum, for I was in no way equipped to make my living. I had taken the accredited college prep course—higher mathematics instead of bookkeeping, history instead of stenography, languages instead of typing.

"Another thing—my folks are not poor. My father is a successful doctor and drives an expensive car. If it had been necessary I would have gladly done my share. I had the nicest home and probably the best clothes of any of my girl friends, and yet all of them went to college except me.

"I asked father to let me go back to school and take the secretarial course open to graduates. He refused, although there was no tuition concerned. So I went into the business world to compete with girls who had been trained to special work.

"I found no use for my five modern languages, and took a job—not a position—at $15 a week. I was worrying about how I could dress properly on such a sum, after carfare and lunches had gobbled up their share, when I was told I was expected to pay board. My folks finally consented to my paying $5 a week. That left a scant $10 for clothing, for sorority dues, amusements—everything. And the apartment we lived in rented at $175 a month. Even now I can't see the justice of taking that miserable $5 that meant so little to them and so much to me.

Treated Like a Child.

"I tried to be optimistic but as the weeks went by and my things wore out, I found that even though I bought the sleaziest of stockings and the cheapest of hats I could by no means replace things, and I soon grew shabby and threadbare, although I somehow managed a decent appearance.

"These trials were not my only ones, for I had been so gauche as to fall in love at 16, and had stuck faithfully to my sweetheart, growing more in love all the time. My mother had had words with his mother, so with one thing and another a terrible storm broke when we asked, ever so humbly, that she consent to our becoming engaged.

"When it became apparent that it was a serious affair, our parents did everything to break it off. They were too wise to force the issue and forbid our seeing each other, but they made things so unpleasant that it amounted to the same thing. I was past 18 and supporting myself but I was treated like a naughty child.

"Things went from bad to worse, and in January when we were only allowed to see each other in church and nowhere else, we eloped. We have been married a year and a half, and have a 2 months' old baby. We are ideally happy, and the baby is a dear, but somehow I feel cheated of my girlhood. Why could I not have had those happy years in college, an engagement, and then finally a wedding with the trousseau and pretty things every girl dreams of? My hubby had gobbled up their share, when I and I should be enjoying the things our young friends have. I am not complaining, for I am far happier than I ever dreamed of being, even if we haven't much money. But still my parents could have given me far more than they did. Even when I was married I received nothing. I had but one dress—my graduation dress dyed black. It was thin and old, and I was wearing cardboard insoles in my slippers to keep my feet off the pavements in January. I was almost destitute but I kept on working and finally gathered together a sufficient wardrobe before I quit working—which was not until my second month of pregnancy.

"Can't you make people see there are two sides to that question of duty?"

Proves Parental Failure.

One reads into Marion's life story hostilities of another nature than that arising over the college education. The strained relationships of parents and grownup children may break out over some one issue—but the background of years investigated invariably proves parental failure to build up the enduring moral tie, based on spiritual affinity, which excludes all talk of duty either to parent or to child.

When children say they did not ask to be born, the parents could if they choose lay their appearance in the world to a manifestation of that formidable life force which is God's work. The long years of service devoted to them in their infancy and early childhood should not be forgotten by the grown-up child. Yet parental responsibility is the greater, and preparation for adult life is their greatest concern.

If parents do not take advantage of the early years to create a sympathetic understanding and deeply affectionate bond between themselves and their children they fail in their duty. Such problems as Marion's arise, and produce rebellious misery and sadly strained relationship. Undoubtedly the love affair of the young people precipitated the break. But that probably never would have been met had parental interest been more sympathetic and kindly in the beginning.

ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

He Needs Encouragement.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in love with a boy about my own age. I would like to have his attentions. Bold girls who care nothing about him seem to be able to attract him. He is bashful and as I am not bold I do not know how to go about this. Will you please advise me? B. E."

The bold girls may attract for a short time, but they soon lose favor, as after all, it is the refined girl who wins out. Continue to be your own sweet self, but when the opportunity presents itself give the young man a little encouragement. He needs to be encouraged, and particularly so if he is inclined to be bashful. You can do this without making yourself the least bit bold, dear.

You Must Be Firm.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a boy of 17 and in love with a girl the same age. She goes out with a fellow I know and is interested in him. When she sees me alone she is jolly, but when she is with the fellow I mention, I do not get a look from her. I love this girl and will always love her, but I haven't the courage to tell her so. "J. B."

Don't stand for such treatment. Let the girl understand that if she does not wish to recognize you when with her other friends, she need not do so when you are alone. She will have more respect for you if you do, and if you show that you are independent to a certain extent she will be more particular to observe the rules of courtesy when she meets you.

When He's Away.

"Dear Miss Blake: If one of your boy friends goes away on a business trip, intending to stay away for some time, is it proper for the boy to write first, or is it the girl's place? PAL."

Inasmuch as the boy was the one to leave town, he should be the one to write first. If you care to correspond with him during his absence you should answer his letter, dear.

Parents Are Right.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 18 and am in love with a boy three years by senior. He has often expressed his love for me and asked me to go away with him. My parents object to my keeping company with this boy and I received a severe scolding so that I rebelled against it and I am going with him on the sly. Please tell me what to do. UNHAPPY."

Unhappy, dear, why do you want to go and get yourself all mixed up in a thing that is so defiant to parental rule? Father and mother are not exerting parental authority because they want to make you miserable and spoil your life. They want to see you happy and to save you from making the mistake that a reckless young creature like you might make. The boy hardly had a right to ask you to run away with him when you are but of schoolgirl age, and he is certainly not old enough to take care of you well. Please don't be foolish, child! You just listen to mother and father. There is a way of getting on the right side of them and winning their love and true protection, but it is not by rebelling against their orders.

Up to You.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man, 24, fairly good looking, have plenty of money and also own an automobile. My hardest difficulties are to find a young woman who would like to go out with me. I really don't know what the reasons can be. To my knowledge the only bad habits I have are: I do not approve much of dancing, girls who smoke, drink or buy their complexion in a drug store. I am not a fellow that runs around much but like to go to good playhouses and am not afraid to spend a few dollars. "G. G."

It seems to me there must be a hundred girls living within a moderate distance of you who would answer all your requirements. I know scores of them, nice, good, honest, respectable, home loving and just the kind of ones who appreciate the better qualities in a man. But you have to go search them out. You don't find them lolling over soda fountains or walking streets, or going unescorted to dance halls. You must look for them. But if you have made enough money at your age to own a car and a bank account, you have learned that the things worthwhile in this life have to be pursued and you cannot allow yourself to become faint-hearted in the search.

Tell Your Parents.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 18, considered good looking and educated. My parents have picked for me a fellow who lives out of town. I have nothing against this fellow, but do not care much about him. There is one fellow in the city whom I love and who also loves me. My parents know nothing about my friendship with him, and on one occasion met him, and not knowing who he is made fun of him. I don't see any reason why they laughed at him, for he is educated and good looking. What shall I do? "EDITH."

Tell your parents about the whole matter, and ask their permission to have him come to your home. They may learn to care for him when they know him. If they find they do not like him, they may be able to give a good reason for it, and you should be willing to listen to their criticisms if they have any to offer. They should not pick a young man for you, dear. That is something for you to do, but you can be guided by their judgment. It would be unwise to marry a man you did not love, even to please them, as you would not be happy.

Well Rid of Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young chap, 21 years of age, and have been keeping company with a young lady three years my junior. Recently I gave her a ring. I bought the best I could afford, and all my friends admired it, except the girl. She had it appraised and found it didn't come up to her expectations, and she called me a contemptible, malicious creature for presenting her with a ring that was not expensive. I care a lot for this girl, and don't like to lose her, although everybody advises me to give her up. Your opinion will be appreciated. CARROL."

I think, Carrol, you would be wise in getting rid of the girl, and as quickly as possible. If she completely overlooks the significance of the ring and thinks only of its money value, I do not feel she would be the type to bring happiness into your life. And, again, if she really cared for you she would never call you such names, knowing if she did that she would hurt you greatly.

Too Young to Be Serious.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 19 and in love with a young man four years my senior whom I met last year. He says he loves me and of late is getting serious about marriage, but I am not so sure of his love and do not intend to marry at such an early age. Do you think it wise for us to part for a while? PERPLEXED."

It might be a good plan to part for a while, until you have had an opportunity to find out if you really care sufficiently for him to marry him. Or, if he is agreeable, you might continue to go out with him occasionally, but make other friends and go out with them. It is only through meeting and being with others that you will be able to make your decision. Do not be in a hurry about it, as you are still exceedingly young, Perplexed.

How Bobbed Haired Girl Solved Curling Problem

"My worries began after having my hair bobbed. I simply could not keep it in curl, especially on damp days. After reading about Nestle Curlit I decided to give it a trial. I applied it according to directions and the first time my hair left it curly as a lamb's. I was so delighted with the lovely curls in the morn'g and best of all they stay nice all day, regardless of the weather. When my hair gets straight again, instead of giving it a Curlit application, I merely dampen it with water before putting on the Curlit. In so doing, one discovers a specialized hair wave or set does. For one has thanks for this marvelous liquid. Illinois."

This letter from a Pennsylvania enthusiast is one of many which prove that Nestle Silkerine is equally efficacious for bobbed and long hair. This harmless liquid, obtainable at any drug store, is just splendid for keeping any hair beautifully wavy, soft and glossy.

JOLLY JINGLES

THE ADVENTURES OF FUZZY WUZZY

FUZZY WUZZY DECIDES TO WORK.

By Raymond Kelly.

FUZZY WUZZY is a good little bear most of the time, but not quite all of the time, for all of the time is a great deal, as, of course, you already know. One of the times when Fuzzy Wuzzy wasn't good happened on the Saturday before last, which was unfortunate. Mother Bear had been canning peaches and so shouldn't have been annoyed. Canning peaches makes a good many dishes too, and naturally she asked Fuzzy Wuzzy to wipe them for her.

"I don't want to work," said Fuzzy Wuzzy. "I want to play. I hate work."

"Nevertheless," answered Mother Bear, "you must wipe these dishes."

"I've spoon scraped them, and I've licked them, and they're clean enough," answered that bad little bear, and when his mother insisted he lay down on the floor of the den, and kicked, and hollered, and clawed.

"I won't work! I won't work!" he screamed, and then stopped suddenly and sat up on the floor, for Father Bear was standing in the doorway looking at him over the tops of his spectacles. Father Bear didn't say a word, but just kept right on looking and looking until Fuzzy Wuzzy got quietly to his feet and started toward the sink. Then Father Bear spoke.

"Fuzzy," said he, "I'm going to tell you a story and when I finish it, if you are unwilling to wipe those dishes, I'll do it myself."

Then he sat down in the kitchen arm chair with Fuzzy Wuzzy on his knee and began:

"Once upon a time, way up on a tall pine timbered mountain, there lived a wee little, fat little bear. He was as black as he could well be, and his eyes were as shiny as shoe buttons."

"Just like me," said Fuzzy Wuzzy softly.

"Precisely," said Father Bear, and continued. "Now, this little bear was a good little bear, but he didn't like to work."

"Just like me," said Fuzzy Wuzzy evenly more softly.

"Exactly," answered Father Bear, and went on. "So one day when his mother wanted him to help her with the dishes he wouldn't, but had a tantrum, and lay on the floor screaming."

"Just like me," said Fuzzy Wuzzy, so softly you'd have thought he was only breathing.

"Absolutely," said Father Bear, "and then, what do you think happened?"

"I guess his father came in," answered Fuzzy Wuzzy.

"No," said Father Bear, "it was Mother Nature herself who came in.

"'Tubby,' said she, for I guess that was that little bear's name, 'don't you like to work?'

"'I hate it,' said Tubby. 'I just wish there wasn't any work in the whole world.'

"'Very well,' answered Mother Nature. 'Let all work now cease.' And then, what do you think?

"I don't know," said Fuzzy Wuzzy.

"Well, sir," replied Father Bear," the sun quit shining, and the grass quit growing. The water didn't flow any more, and the birds stopped singing right in the middle of the note that they were on. My, but it was dark and quiet then! And that little bear was so scared and so lonesome he just couldn't stand it. He sat there in the dark and listened, but couldn't hear a thing; so he called out, 'Mother Nature,' but Mother Nature didn't answer.

"Then that little bear called and called as loud as he could and finally, when he was all hoarse from calling, Mother Nature answered and said: 'What is it, Tubby?'

"'Please, Mother Nature,' said that wee little, fat little bear, 'let work begin again and I'll gladly do my share.'

"So Mother Nature smiled, and the sun began to shine; the grass began to grow; the water began to flow, and the birds began to sing this song:

For this you may depend upon,
That every bird and beast,
The elephant and cabbage plant,
The greatest and the least,
Has work to do, like me and you,
From dawn till day has ceased.

"It's a nicer song than I thought," said Fuzzy Wuzzy, as he slipped off Father Bear's knee and grabbed the dish towel.

La Verne one day hit her uncle while playing, and her uncle, wishing to scare her, pretended to chase her, but was unable to catch her.

Telling about it later to her father, her uncle said: "You sure can run when you want to."

Thereupon La Verne replied, "You mean I can run when I has to."

Bobby always runs to his grandmother for a petting when he gets hurt.

One day he received quite a bruise, and screamed, "O, dranma, it hurts, it hurts!"

But this time grandma said, "Be a little man and don't cry."

Bobby answered, "But when I'm not being a little man and am just little Bobby, it hurts." E. Z. C.

In a summer resort one invariably comes in contact with others whom they never forget. I am sure that I have met one. She is 4 years old.

Naturally when I first saw her my first question was, "What is your name?"

"O," she answered, "my name's Patty, but they started in with Patricia." F. H. S.

As I was polishing the floors I slipped and fell.

My son came running up and inquired anxiously, "Mama break?" V. V. Z.

Milly enjoyed her visit in the country but did not like the early bedtime which her grandmother insisted on for her.

She wrote her father: "The only thing I don't like at grandma's is that it gets late so early." E. H.

Bobby's mother took him out to luncheon one day. Before going he was given instructions not to leave anything on his plate, as was his usual custom. At table each guest was served with an individual salt dish.

All went well until luncheon was almost over and Bobby was asked, "Have you finished, son?"

He innocently replied, "Yes, mother, but I can't eat all my salt."—M. M. K.

"Teddy," complained Harry, "I heard you was at Billy's party last night, an' only last week you said you'd never go with him any more.'

"Well," returned Teddy, "I didn't know then that he was goin' to have a party, did I?" A. V.

Remembrance.

DEAR—I'm here alone—beneath the stars—thinking of you, as always. Neither time nor place can help me to forget you. I shall never forget, my dear, my dear.

The blue of your eyes makes the sky pale; the murmur of the sea is in the voice I love so well; the raven's wing with the sun upon it is your hair. I rumpled that lovely hair to vex you. Do you remember?

Why did destiny put you in the arms of some one else? You did love me. Fate, life, love—everything is cruel to snatch you from my arms that ache so for you now.

Have you forgotten the first time you told me you cared? It was raining that afternoon, and afterwards there was a beautiful rainbow. You said it was a symbol of our love. Our love! And yours died so quickly.

Do you remember all our rose dreams that were so precious to us—and our glorious peeps into our future together, that made your eyes shine so brightly?

Forgive me for cherishing these memories. They are all I have left of you. I need not sign my name. I am only. A MEMORY.

HAY FEVER

PROMPTLY RELIEVED BY NEW DISCOVERY

Eyes Quit Itching. Nose Stops Running and Burning. Makes Life Worth Living. Money Refunded if It Fails.

At last! Real relief for hay fever. The long search for scientific men for something that would relieve the misery of pollen has resulted in a new discovery. It is now possible to go through the hay fever season and usually know that you even had this terrible affliction.

Dia-pollin is the name of this new compound. It is absolutely harmless, contains no injurious or habit-forming drugs.

Simply speak it in the country, and almost instantly you realize that hay fever has met its master. The nose clears up and stops running. The foreboding sense of breathing becomes easier. The redness and itching of the eyes soon and soon cease almost entirely. A few applications a day enable you to work in comfort and sleep in peace.

Hay fever is caused by pollen from weeds, vegetation, etc., which irritates the mucous lining of the nose. Dia-pollin loses this pollen infection under such control that it does not make you its miserable. It is easy to use and acts like magic.

"Gave Wonderful Relief"

"I carried some Dia-pollin for hay fever last July, and obtained such wonderful relief that I am sending for more. It gave me relief during the hay fever season and enabled me to work with very little of the usual nose and eye troubles. I recommended Dia-pollin to several others and all of them received the same benefit as did."—C. H. Rogers, Mgr. Edgewater Arms Hotel, 34 So. Capitol Ave., Indianapolis.

"My First Real Relief"

"I have found complete relief through Dia-pollin all through the Rose and Hay Fever seasons. My suffering used to be very severe. Dia-pollin cleared me head, stopped the tickling of the nose, made my breathing easy and in fact was the first real relief I ever found. It has been a good night's sleep. It is the first real relief I ever found and I feel so bad about it."—Mrs. Walker, The Beaumont Apts., Indianapolis.

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY

You can try Dia-pollin without risking penny if it fails to please you your money will be promptly refunded. So no risk about it—try Dia-pollin at our risk. At your druggist, or send $2 for package by mail prepaid, with our money-back guaranty, endorsed by a leading Indianapolis bank.

The TRIBUNE Cook Book

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes here have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington, with correct marked materials, and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

SUMMER BEVERAGES.

THERE are a few maxims or axioms that may well be emphasized in this making and partaking of summer drinks:

First, if an ice cold beverage is oversweet, it increases thirst instead of quenching it. Besides, sugar is a powerful and destructive food when taken in quantities, and there is no easier way of getting an excess than in partaking liberally of the summer drinks, ice creams, and the fruits which require sugar and cream. We inside easily burn out our linings so.

The full flavor of fruit juices cannot be appreciated when you taste too much cold, as when you have shaved ice in your glass. And this is not the only reason why you should not use it.

There are a hundred names for what is a lemonade plus. You can try adding almost anything to lemonade and find the experiment more or less of a success. But, consider, does it not seem a bit useless to blend a lot of ingredients and then get a drink that is far less agreeable than some of the ingredients alone? This is frequently done. Lemons and oranges and pineapples season agreeably almost any reasonable addition to them and were quite indispensable in many of the alcoholic combinations. The surest things to add to them, kind for kind, are the small fruits.

Sure fire recipes calling for commercial grapefruit, fruit sirups, soda water, and ginger ale cannot be given because the products vary so widely.

Varieties of Ginger Ale.

There are more varieties of ginger ale on the market, said a grocer to me, than there are kinds of breakfast foods, and he proved to some extent his remark by presenting for my approval and purchase a great variety, some white, some imported, some from famous springs, and so forth, and told me of others and of the efforts of small home manufacturers in putting up this more aristocratic of the "pops."

Since nowadays many of us have to buy our drinking water, it may not seem as unthrifty to buy it with a bit of inexpensive seasoning as it did formerly when ginger ales were thriftily home made. You can find many recipes for making them, in old books, but almost always the directions call for spring water, and that is something not as conveniently procured as formerly.

Just why ginger should be refreshing and cooling it is hard to say, but the haymakers of the country have rejoiced in a mixture of molasses and water, ginger flavored. In looking back into old customs as regards such things we find that this mixture was sometimes livened up with rather strong rum or "black strap" which term we were wont to think referred to molasses, although it generally referred to a rum made from molasses. The old fashioned name for the haymaker's drink seems to have been "switchel," but a faithful pursuit of the recipes for switched only reveals the fact that no two are alike.

Nutmeg, even in lemonade, cinnamon, and cloves in sirups to be used with oranges, lemons, and other fruits, are spices favored by some and despised by others. There are reasons why fruits are more sensibly refreshing without spices. As to nutmeg, it will help with a bit of sugar to make a cool glass of milk more palatable—served in a tall glass and with a sipper—and spices with cider, along with orange and lemon juice, help to make a hot drink of a festive and presumably medicinal order, yet for those who love to get the fruit aromas as a part of the luxury of a fine fruit drink the spices are highly objectionable.

Definition of Punch.

As long as we try to make punches, we may correctly use spices. The word punch has been variously defined, but until lately it has always meant something which contained liquor or strong spirits of some sort, the particular sort often giving it its name. An old definition found says it signifies five, because of its five ingredients: sugar, lemon, spirits, water, spice. There, you see, are in this list the ingredients for a lemonade, and lemonade it is that we find as the basis of hundreds of combinations, plain and fancy, and it is upon lemonade that we fall back when the profusion of fruit juices and other ingredients leads to confusion as to what to make for our summer beverage.

Lemonades.

There are at least a dozen ways of making lemonade. It is economical of sugar to make this with boiling water, but this means making it some hours before it is to be consumed, so that it may be cooled and chilled. The freshly squeezed juice has a flavor all its own, but sugar may be saved in making it by having a plain cold sugar sirup on hand with which to sweeten it. A thick sirup made with two cups of sugar and one-half cup of water keeps well, but when the sirup is to be used at once it may simply represent the water and sugar combined and be thin. On the whole the thin sirup is safer to use. It is boiled as well as sweetened water.

To Finish Lemonades.

There is for daintiness nothing like strawberry juice or strawberry sirup to finish a lemonade; that is, if the strawberry sirup has not been cooked too much. It will soften and harmonize a drink that seemed harsh and raw and besides tint it beautifully. A dash of seltzer, finally, may lift its quality to an agreeable liveliness. Orange juice is always a permissible and acceptable ingredient in lemonade, and when we want to get something approaching the old punches we may use some of the preparations by which the prohibition law is evaded; the sherry jellies, and so forth.

The sherry has long been as much a cooking wine, as one for drinking, and the flavor makers recognizing this have produced a number of things that a little of, say two teaspoons to a glass, will change an insipid drink to something far more palatable. An honest flavor seems to me better than the dishonest liquid that people seem possessed to get now that it is forbidden.

Quickest Lemon Peel Flavor.

There are ways of using lemon peel in lemonades and other drinks that certainly do not improve them. The quickest way to get an acceptable base for a lemonade, a sirup and flavor in one, is to wash the lemon, take off the yellow peel only, and cook it for five minutes with sugar and water. To the skin of two lemons add one-half cup of water and one-fourth cup of sugar, and cook it over the simmering burner for five minutes after it boils. Notice it will be gentle cooking. Strain and cool and then add juice of two lemons and orange juice, strawberry juice, or what you will. This can, and should be, considerably diluted with water, ice cold.

Bad Combination of Lemon and Tea.

Many persons are recommending tea as a base for fruit cups and other drinks. The combination of lemon juice and tea gives some of us a distinct indigestion which suggests that it may not be a perfectly good thing for anybody. Another thing, the aroma of tea of the best sort is rarely so dainty as that of a fruit, and it is a distinct shock as you put a glass of cool beverage to your mouth to get an unagreeable odor of tea. There are recipes calling for only one cup of tea to three of fruit juices. If you think how various are teas, and how chancy, this may seem like a really wicked sort of adulteration. There is one virtue of tea for the drinks that are shaken, and many think all drinks are improved by this treatment, it foams.

No Chopped Ice.

A common direction in recipes for ice cool drinks is to "fill glass half full of shaved or chopped ice." The cold of the ice half destroys delicate flavors, and for more than one reason, with which the combination harmonizes or a plain frozen fruit juice. This recommendation is not only in the interest of refinement but of health. Not all ice is pure and it can be made dirty in the shaving.

Pineapple for Drinks.

Freshly cooked pineapple has a delicious sort of sourness that the raw has not, although there are reasons why the raw pineapple juice may be exceedingly refreshing. In trying to avoid the use of much sugar in drinks the pineapple may be our best help.

Grate or shred a medium sized pineapple, add to it a half cup of sugar, stir well, and put over an exceedingly slack fire to cook for twenty minutes after it comes to the boiling point. Use this with lemon sirup and strawberry juice, diluting mixture to taste, having all well chilled. The rough outer part of the pineapple, if well washed before peeling may be covered with cold water and yield a sort of "tea" that may be used with sugar for a sirup for drinks. As a toner of drinks of many sorts, the pineapple flavor is excellent.

In grating pineapple use an aluminum grater. It takes less time to grate it than to shred it.

Blackberry Sirup.

Thick hot sirups put up in sterile bottles and thoroughly sealed keep well, and in general are better than anything we can buy. To make a blackberry or raspberry sirup, wash, drain and mash the fruit, measure and add to the mashed fruit half its measure of cold water. Let this stand for half an hour, strain off liquid and cook this with an equal measure of sugar to a sirup stage, skimming if necessary. Cold and thinned three-fourths with plain water this makes an excellent drink but a little seltzer may be added.

A second grade sirup may be made by adding to the pulp after the first straining half its measure of cold water, cook it five minutes, strain, and cook with an equal measure of sugar to sirup stage. This will have a more pronounced flavor than the other daintier product. Fill a glass one-fourth full of it, add a few drops of lemon juice, and fill up with cold water. Any of the blackberry drinks are considered good for those who have "summer complaint."

HOW TO ORDER YOUR CLOTILDE PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly on dotted lines, giving number and size of each pattern you want. Inclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Clotilde, THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, Chicago.

How to Use the Patterns

ONE of the printed voiles would be just the thing for a dress made by pattern No. 2185. The dress is in one piece, and the front opening is filled in by a vest. This is attached to the right front of the opening, and the left side of the vest is fastened to the left side of the front by means of small snaps.

There are one piece, flaring sleeves, nearly full length; and the sleeve pattern is perforated for shorter length. The width at the bottom of the skirt, for size 38, is about 1½ yards.

Crêpe would also make up prettily, and either material can be finished with French seams. The neck and front opening of the waist should be finished with a bias facing. The sleeve edges may be finished in the same manner. Ribbon or silk braid will make a pretty trimming on the edges of the sleeves and the front opening; or the dress material—if the printed voile is to be used—will be pretty, choosing one of the colors in the design. The sash should be lined with the same color. A dress of this kind is just the thing to wear shopping on warm days and later on it will be comfortable worn under a long coat.

The sash of this dress should be carefully draped about the low waist line, and tacked at intervals so it will stay in place.

Many dollars can be saved by mothers who make even part of their children's clothes. Take this smart looking little suit—pattern No. 1807—for instance. Every small boy needs several such suits for play and school wear; and with the aid of a good pattern, one can easily manage the work and turn out trim, good loking suits. An old dress or a man's suit, if the material is not too heavy, may be turned into a suit. Of course, in using old materials, the entire garment should be riped apart, threads picked out, and the cloth washed and pressed. It always takes more time and seems more difficult to work with old materials, but if they are worth the trouble, the work is well worth while.

This particular suit consists of a blouse and separate knickerbockers. The blouse in the back is gathered at the top and set on to a yoke—marks on the pattern showing just where the gathers come and just how to attach it to the yoke. There should be two yoke sections cut and the back of the blouse is stitched in a right side seam to the under yoke part. The seam edges should be pressed up towards the yoke, and the outside yoke section laid in place. Turn the edge of this section in across the bottom and lay it in place and baste down. It should be stitched twice—once close to the edge and the second time three-eighths of an inch above. In joining the front and back at the shoulders, the method is the same as in putting the yoke on the back.

Directions given with the pattern tell exactly how to lay and stitch the front hems so they look like a box plait.

Follow all directions carefully in finishing and setting sleeves and in making the knickerbockers.

For a small child a suit of this kind would be pretty and serviceable made of mercerized cotton poplin or gingham; and in the gingham the plain and checked could be used effectively.

Pattern No. 1255 is for children's pajamas, and is just the thing to use for their outing flannel ones for winter. Buy a good quality of outing flannel, and before cutting measure the length in the middle of the back and front to see that there will be ample length. A one piece sleeping garment like this must be made large.

The best finish for the seams is the felled—making it a good half inch. After one side of the seam is trimmed off to a width of about ⅛ inch, baste the seam down from the right side so that the half inch margin on the wrong side will cover the cut edge; and baste the length of the seam close to the stitching. Then turn to the wrong side and, turning in the edge, hem lightly. Now lay the garment in the machine right side up, and stitch right through the hemming. This may sound like much extra work, but it really goes fast, and when finished there are no raw edges sticking out; on the right side the material is smooth—as it will not be unless that right side basting is put in—for you can't crease the seam as in many wash materials. Where material creases—percale, for instance—this basting is not needed.

Will You Still Have Your Good Sound Teeth at 40?

PYORRHEA

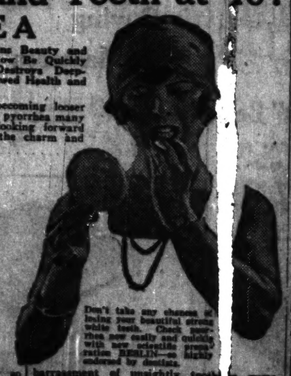
Modern Woman's Worst Enemy—Ruins Beauty and the Charm of Her Smile. Yet Can Now Be Quickly Overcome. Remarkable Preparation Destroys Pus-Hidden Bacteria and Brings Back Restored Health and Vitality to Gums

Hopelessly watching her teeth daily becoming looser and more unsightly from the ravages of pyorrhea many a woman in despair of any relief is looking forward with dismay to toothless middle age, the charm and beauty of her smile gone—her health impaired.

Yet this dread disease may be overcome and quickly—for Science who has long sought in vain for a means of conquering it has at last succeeded in their efforts. This newly discovered method is so simple anyone may use it, yet so effective the foremost specialists prescribe and use it in their daily practice. Under the name of BESLIN it is now being introduced to the public so that if you yourself are a victim of this destroying disease here is your opportunity to rid yourself of it.

Pyorrhea bacteria, as any dentist will tell you, is the most difficult to conquer, so deeply imbedded is it in the gum tissues and root sockets and for this reason ordinary surface treatments are usually of little or no avail. BESLIN, however, due to its peculiar chemical composition, is so penetrative in its action that it is enabled to reach it below the surface and there completely destroy bacteria of all kinds. More wonderful yet is the remarkable manner in which BESLIN promotes the growth of tissue and restores the vitality of the gums. Results from its use are quickly noted. Bleeding stops almost at once, pus is cleared up, soft ulcerated gums heal and become healthy and firm. Even in the most severe state of pyorrhea where it seems almost necessary that the teeth be extracted the use of BESLIN may often save them. What a terrible pity it is for one to lose your sound, perfect teeth and suffer the embarrassment of unsightly tooth or gums, when this can be so easily avoided through the use of this scientific preparation. Get BESLIN today from any of the following reliable drug and department stores:

Bush & Beymer, Public Drug Co., Walgreen Store, Illinois Drug Co., Rexall Drug Co., Economic Drug Co., Rexall Drug Co., Walgreen Store, Illinois Drug Co.



Don't take any chances of losing your beautiful strong white teeth. Check pyorrhea in its early stages with new scientific preparation BESLIN—as highly endorsed by dentists.

GUARANTEE

For your protection there is a printed slip in each package of BESLIN which definitely guarantees to return your money if after using a 30-day (3 bottles) treatment the healing of the gums has not started, checked up and gums healed. Therefore you risk nothing in making a test of BESLIN.

BY A. T. GALLICO.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The fall hat season draws on apace. But up to present writing we have heard of no startling innovations in felt hat styles. No rumors of green derbies or purple soft felts have reached our ears. There is no sign that either two inch brims or ten inch brims will be inaugurated. Men will have to settle down to approximately the same old shapes, with such slight modifications that it will hardly be necessary to hide the old hats for fear of ridicule.

In the show room of one of the prominent hatters we looked over the models for the fall trade. If anything, there is a slight increase in the width of the brims on some of the hats. The average hat has the dimensions of 5¼-2⅜ or 5⅛-2⅜. One model was 5⅛-2⅛. The set of this hat was rather flat.

The flatter hats are the more common now, but there is always the modified version of the old alpine shape, the characteristics of which are much roll at the sides and a dip back and front. There is still the roll and the dip now, but the amount is more in keeping with the flatter tendencies of today's styles.

The turn down brim is still with us, but it is to be remembered that this type of hat, whether turned down in front or all the way around, is not for any occasion but the most informal lounge. It goes with the negligee note, the soft collared shirt; never a stiff turn over or wing collar.

It is also to be remembered that this style is not becoming to all men. Especially is the all around turned down hat unbecoming to the extremely short man, as it detracts from his height.

It must again be borne in mind, if the turn down brim is contemplated, that all hats will not turn down successfully. Hats for this purpose are made with an especially flexible brim, which is unbound.

Otherwise, the hats made for the better trade are made with bound edges, as a rule. This binding matches the hat, and not the hat band, which is more often of a contrasting color or shade.

In the snap brim model the color is, in 90 per cent of cases, a light shade of gray, with sometimes a black band and sometimes a dark blue. Seventy-five per cent of the hats in the regular models are some shade of gray, in the case of the New York trade. What, we rise to query, does this tell in regard to the color of suits and top coats this fall? Is the brown suit going to be in the background, or are men going to be careless in their color schemes and wear a gray hat with any shade of suit? We hope not.

There is nothing more insipid, to our mind, than the combining of a gray hat, be it light or dark, with a brown or tan top coat, unless the gray hat be of one of those warm shades of gray which has almost as much tan in it as gray. But so many of the gray hats are of that cold pearl shade, which looks well only with suits of cold shades of gray, or black, or blue, or green.

The lighter shades of tan will be more popular than the darker browns. We wonder if the college boy will still cling to this seal brown felt hat. We'll have to get an early look on the campuses, and see what hats are favored.

Of the grays, the pearl and dove shades are the biggest sellers. The unfortunate part about the pearl gray hat is that it doesn't take many wearings to become soiled. Therefore, one must have other fish to fry. The pearl gray hat cannot be the only felt in the hat wardrobe, for while it is being cleaned ye citizen must not go unhatted. However, it doesn't hurt to have two or three hats. Then no matter what suit you wear, you will always have the correct hat to go with it.

A hat which will make inroads into popularity this season, probably, is the powder blue hat with dark blue band. This is in keeping and harmony with the blue suits and topcoats of this shade that are being worn. However, don't overdo the powder blue idea and wear suit, topcoat and hat of the same color all at once. Contrast is better. A light gray hat with powder blue coat, or blue hat with gray coat, is more effective than all blue.

A dark blue band on a gray hat casts the hat to blue without making it actually blue. This hat with blue suit or coat is an ideal combination, as one achieves the spirit of blue throughout, without monotony.

How you will dent your hat will depend upon the shape of your face and head. If you have a thin, long face, the full crowned, undented shape of hat with only the center crease will not be for you. With those who can wear it this shape is a popular one among smartly turned out men. Otherwise a slight denting at the sides is the only alteration given the crown.

A general mauling about and pushing and pulling, and indiscriminate creasing or denting is not the well dressed man's idea of the way to treat a soft hat.

The derby remains about the same, with a tendency to a rather low crown, but, as with all that concerns the well dressed man, not exaggerated. The gray derby has only been seen at the race track. Away from the domain of the bookmakers and jockeys, it is conspicuous and therefore not in favor.

A HOME FOR MORE THAN TWO.

WITH the present day tendency of apartment houses to exclude children, the problem of housing for a family with children is becoming increasingly difficult. But here we have a house that is meant to be lived in by just such a family; it is a home where there is ample space for all, and one which, though roomy, is planned with the convenience of the housewife and mother in mind who does the greater part of her housework alone. Or, if this is not necessary, an alternate plan shows how a maid's room and bath can be arranged.

The wider the lot the better, of course, for this house and also for the children. It may, however, be built on an eighty foot lot or, if the enclosed porch is turned to the front and the entrance on the side a fifty foot lot could be utilized.

On the exterior the house has the semiformal appearance of a New England colonial home. The walls are for the most part of gray Indiana limestone of sawed finish, in regular coursed ashlar. In the central portion of the house this is carried up to the main cornice above the second story windows, but in the wings on either side the stone extends only to the second story—above which large white wood shingles are used—an interesting combination of materials. The roof could also be of shingles, or of slate, but in either case it should be of a bluish-green color. With shutters to match, and the remainder of the wood trim of the house, such as the entrance feature, cornice, door, and window frames, painted white, and the front door either white or stained mahogany, a most attractive effect could be obtained. The front windows of the living room and reception hall, which extend almost to the floor line, and the wide dormers in the wings are pleasing features. All windows have small panes in true colonial style.

The front entrance leads into a reception hall which is virtually a room in itself. There is a large coat closet under the stairs, and in the alcove at the foot of the stairs is a conveniently located lavatory. Opening off the hall to the left is the large living room, which is thirteen feet by twenty-five feet six inches, and extends the depth of the house, with one large window at either end. The great colonial fireplace is, of course, the main feature of the living room, for with logs blazing on the hearth it furnishes the gathering place for the family, and is the center of interest in the grouping of furniture. It has a facing of light gray Indiana limestone.

On either side of it are glazed doors opening on to an enclosed porch with long French windows on three sides. The floor of the porch is of gray limestone tile laid in two foot square slabs with a border of the same material a foot wide. This porch, with the sleeping porch above it, constitutes one of the wings of the house.

Glazed doors lead from the living room to the dining room. This is also a good sized room, being twelve feet six inches by eighteen feet. It has the desirable amount of privacy from the front hall, although there is a door opening into it from the hall. The wide bay with three casement windows affording a view of the lawn and garden in the rear is an attractive feature, and one that assumes plenty of light and air. On either side of the bay is a corner china closet.

The kitchen is in the other wing of the house. Between it and the dining room is a serving pantry in which there is a cupboard for dishes, a sink, a cold closet, and the refrigerator, provision being made for icing the latter from the rear entry. The kitchen itself is roomy and well arranged, with windows on two sides. One entire side of the room is taken up by an unusually long counter containing the sink and drain boards, having drawers underneath and cupboards above. There is also space for a gas range, a coal range, table, and kitchen cabinet.

A stairway leads to the basement which extends under the entire house with the exception of the enclosed porch. By the arrangement of the stairs in the front hall, it is possible to ascend to the second story from the kitchen without passing through the main part of the house. This does away with the necessity for a rear staircase. There is also no necessity for a rear porch off the kitchen, so that the house has a good appearance from all sides.

There is great elasticity in the upper portion of this house. In addition to a bathroom, there are four bedrooms, all light and airy and with ample closet space. The sleeping porch in the wing over the enclosed porch is especially roomy and attractive. It has a bed closet which contains two single beds of the modern improved folding type that can be stored out of sight in the day time. It also has two closets, and is reached from two of the bedrooms. The small front bedroom, if not used as such, could be easily utilized as a den or morning room. The large room in the wing over the kitchen could be used as a dormitory for several children, or as a play room, or could be divided into a maid's room in the rear and a nursery or sewing room and a second bathroom in front. There is also a good sized hall upstairs in which a linen closet is conveniently located.

GOOD MORNING!

Have you met your little double yet? Neither have I. Cheerio, though, old things! We'll probably be arrested for murder yet, and then won't it be a grand and glorious feeling to realize that the police are not malicious but only mistaken? (Grand and glorious, ONLY, of course, in the event that the real criminal, who looks just like us, turns up in time for the hanging.)

Of course, in the pictures, he or she would. In real life, however—AH—sunny thought! In real life there aren't any hangings. Nope! For—

To aid the crook in his despair
Come alienists and Teddy bear!
So we shouldn't fret or trouble
Should we get pinched for our double.

In "Changing Husbands" nobody is crooked. Everybody is just mistaken.

The picture was made from a story that appeared in a weekly periodical. Two girls in entirely different walks of life look just alike but have entirely different ideas of what constitutes the joy of living.

LEATRICE JOY, good in both rôles of "Changing Husbands."

Young Mrs. Evert yearns to be an actress. Country air and a placid existence, with an adoring husband who doesn't care a hang for the lights of Broadway—or Lunnon or any other place—give her the willies. She is restlessness personified.

Eva Graham—on the stage—but not likely to stay there long because she hates it and her work gives every indication that she does—longs for peace and quiet. Miss Graham is engaged to a youth whose idea of a perfect existence is to "build a bungalow at 42d and Broadway." They get along like fire and water—every time they meet there's a hiss.

Simple Enough, but——

You have it. The girls discover each other and, thanks to the determination of the peppy young matron who doesn't know what it is to be crossed, swap identities for awhile.

"Are you sure your husband won't come home?" Miss Graham asks as she tremblingly dons the fripperies and jewels—among the last the engagement and wedding rings of the lady, Gwynn.

"Sure," says Evert replies—to ask in turn:

"Are YOU sure I won't be bothered?" Miss Graham feels there isn't a chance. (Picture will tell you why.)

Of course, though, both young men show up at the wrong times and thereby hangs the rest of the story.

As I remember the original tale it didn't depend on slapstick and musical comedy bedroom situations for the work-

HEART AFFAIRS HOLD EAR OF HOLLYWOOD

By Grace Kingsley.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Romance is being just splashed all over the place these days, with two engagements recently announced and others in the air.

Larry Semon goes about constantly with Dorothy Dwan, his new leading lady, and rumor says they are engaged. Larry only grins with a "Don't you wish to know?" expression and says nothing when asked about a possible engagement. And Miss Dwan casts down her eyes, smiles, and blushes. For, while many a picture actress' color comes but doesn't go, Miss Dwan can still do her stuff when a blush is called for. In the meantime Larry is certainly deeply devoted to the lady. They seem to have a perfect café beat. Sunday evening sees them at the Plantation, Tuesday evening at the Cocoanut Grove, Wednesday evening at Montmartre, and Saturday evening at the Biltmore. They can proudly claim to have been neither absent nor tardy at any of these places during the last several weeks. Miss Dwan dresses smartly, usually in white, whether evening clothes or sport togs.

AGNES AYRES engaged now to a Mexican consular attaché.

Agnes Ayres is really and tru[ly] engaged for keeps, it would appear, to Manuel Reachi, att[aché] to the consulate general of Mexico. Ricardo Cortez mea[ns while] is drying his eyes and looking with admiration in the d[irection] of another pretty Hollywood actress, who, however, [denies] she is going to marry him, and—Sh!—doesn't want [her name mentioned. She will tell us, in due time, she a[nd], if anything serious comes of the affair. Miss Ayres is [receiving the congratula]tions of her friends.

Dorothy Devore denies the pu[blished report that her heart has been replevied in the same] [pla]ce by N. W. Mather, theatrical man of San Francisco, to [whom she was formerly] engaged. Especially is she appare[ntly making known her] denial to Harry Edwards, Christie Co[medy director. She even] went so far at the end of her first en[gagement as turning her] head away from the painful sight, t[o return the diamond en]gagement ring set with three large [diamonds surrounded by] ninety-three (93) smaller diamonds.

"Maybe," suggested a friend, "[she] got lonesome for the ring and became engaged again." [But] the ring isn't in evidence.

The mysterious lovely blonde w[hom] whom Monta Blue is seen constantly and to whom he is [rumored engaged turns] out to be a Miss Tove, who former[ly played small parts in] some D. W. Griffith pictures, and [who] doubled for Carol Dempster in several films. She was recently introduced under the name of Dana at the Cocoanut Grove. This affair has been progressing for some time, and during Miss Tove's presence in New York Monte burned up the telephone wires.

Regarding Viola Dana's denial [that she was engaged to] Lefty Flynn when she declared th[ey] "never spoke of love," Estelle Taylor uttered a cla[ss line when she ex]claimed: "No, sire not! Actions spe[ak louder than words!"]

Lois Wilson's mamma continues [to deny that Lois is en]gaged, and promises to let us hear [the truth from Lois' own] lips when she returns home to Holl[ywood from Europe to]morrow.

"Fra Diavolo" to Be Given Revival

By Edward Moore.

OUTSIDE of one tune with the swing of a barcarolle, "On Yonder Rock Reclining," who can recall anything of the story and music of "Fra Diavolo"? Small blame if no one can, for fourteen years and more have passed since the merry old opus was last heard here. In April, 1910, it was sung at the Auditorium by no less an organization than the Metropolitan, with no less an artist than Edmond Clement as the Fra.

GIACOMO LAURI-VOLPI to sing in "Fra Diavolo" at Ravinia on Saturday night.

But now, on another Saturday night, the next one, to speak by the schedule, it will be heard again, and Mr. Eckstein's eager band at Ravinia will be the participants. They will be newcomers in the work, but at this distance and time the cast looks highly favorable.

It is a little strange that the dusty spider web of silence should have gathered over so agreeable a score for so long a time. Yet it is not an unheard of phenomenon. Other good works of great popularity have been dropped from standard répertoires for many reasons. This piece of Auber's, however, classifies as a good bit of a gem among light operas. Since it has been silent so long as to be almost a novelty, let us gather around this Sunday morning while there is time to do it and what it is all about.

It is an old time piece, full of old time romance and adventure, with plenty of old time comedy and old time sparkling tunes. It has as its central figure the Marquis of San Marco, who is generally believed to be a gentleman of high degree, but who really is a rogue and a bandit chieftain, also of high degree. Dragoons are sent to capture him, under the command of Lorenzo, a young officer who is in love with Zerline, the charming daughter of an inn keeper. But Lorenzo's romance is not without its blight, for Zerline has been betrothed by her father, Matteo, to a wealthy peasant.

Lords, Robbers, Duels, and Rewards.

The action begins at Matteo's inn, where two travelers, Lord Cockburn and his wife, Pamela, rush in and declare they have been robbed. The dragoons start in search of the robbers, leaving Lord Cockburn and his wife to settle a family dispute, for his lordship accuses Pamela of having accepted the attentions of their traveling companion, the Marquis San Marco. The marquis, in reality Fra Diavolo, arrives and is given welcome at the inn. Lorenzo returns and, having killed most of the robbers, hopes the reward will be sufficient to enable him to marry Zerline.

This seems about to be accomplished, but that night after everybody at the inn has retired, Fra Diavolo is joined by two of his companions. They plan to rob Lord Cockburn, but are frustrated by Lorenzo. The two robbers escape and the marquis makes himself conspicuous, arousing the jealousy of both Lord Cockburn and Lorenzo. The young officer challenges him to a duel.

Zerline has again returned to her peasant suitor, and their wedding procession is in progress, when the two bandits who have escaped are recognised by Lorenzo and arrested. Lorenzo is elated over this, but disappointed at losing Zerline. However, the bandits are compelled to lure Fra Diavolo into a trap, and he is shot. Explanations follow, Lady Cockburn recognizes the bandit chief as her admirer, and Lorenzo carries Zerline away in triumph.

Giacomo Lauri-Volpi will appear as the bandit, Graziella Pareto as Zerline, and other good reasons for attendance will be furnished by Armand Tokatyan, Ina Bourskaya, Desire

DAUGHTER GOES THE COCKTAIL PACE AGAIN

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The first play of a new season in New York is not much of an event. A lot of tanned folk back from early vacations flock to it, trying to look comfortable in the heat and eager for the play. There is much chatter in the lobbies and the greetings of the regulars are like the meetings of old members of the same club.

But a half hour after the curtain is up the season has settled into the resumption of a familiar routine. The roll has been called and the first group of the drama's puppets have answered. Usually it is much easier to stick to the seats than it is to the show—but it's the beginning and everybody is at least hopeful.

The first play this year is one called "Dancing Mothers." Not an uninteresting discussion, but a bit dated. We had an idea we had settled the affairs of the flip daughter who goes a pace in search of freedom until she is horrified to find mother—her own dear, sweet mother—following after, and then checks herself with a sob and reforms.

But here it is, as vigorously set forth as any new subject could be. Daughter drinks cocktails, and pursues the handsome bachelor to his rooms, where she kisses him full upon the lips and calls him angelkins. Daughter's father is also a bit of a stepper, following meekly in the trail of Irma, a steamer acquaintance, who is alluring and lawless.

So mother steps out, too, and there are startled family meetings at the supper clubs and in the bachelor's rooms. And something of a sane and satisfying twist at the end when mother discovers that what she had intended as a lesson for her child has proved a lesson for herself. She really loves this handsome young gentleman she has deliberately tried to take away from her own child. She is only 40 and life never has seemed as alluring before. So she up and runs away with her young man, who is not as bad as rumor reports and leaves father and daughter tearfully considering the consequences of their folly in driving her to such an unheard of action.

"Mother, you can't leave us," wails the daughter. "You can't leave us—it isn't right."

And mother sets her trembling lips and puts her daughter's arms around her neck.

"I'm doing what I think is best," she says. And walks out of the house.

Not particularly reasonable, but rather a pleasant jolt for an audience that expected the usual family tears of repentance and reunion. Edgar Selwyn and Edmund Goulding, the authors, are to be thanked for that.

The four principal parts are capably played by Mary Young as the mother, Helen Hayes as the daughter, Henry Stephenson the father and John Halliday the bachelor lure. Stephenson is too old and Miss Hayes too young to represent convincingly their respective characters. But their performances are competent.

Why Girls Stay Home.

The chorus girl famine story was due to break about this time. It is as seasonal and sure as the peach crop failure and the first robin's debut. But the lad who brought the news to me had a new angle that was rather interesting.

There are plenty of chorus girls, he agreed. Plenty and to spare. But the engine is unattractive and insufficiently experienced, and the remainder object to travel. At least the attractive regulars. Not why girls leave home, but why girls won't leave home was his theme.

"We can hire carloads of the cheaper type of chorus girl,"

Notes and Such on Things of the Stage

By Frederick Donaghey.

WHATEVER the impending new plays may [prove] to be, well-knowns and somebodies are flocking [back] to perform in them. . . . One notes that [Mary E.] Dixey is of equal importance to Miss [Marie] Collings in the heralding of "Tarnish," and that [Miss H.] Evans shades first-place honors with Miss Jane [Oaker] in the line-up of "Wages for Wives." And, if one be in the mood of the writer at a time in the season when the sustained theme is elusive, one may meditate with or without profit on the circumstance that Mr. Dixey was a defacto star ere Miss Collings was born, and that Mr. Evans possessed an identity in the theater before Miss Oaker was added to the population. . . .

MISS PAULA [illegible] LORD She's bill-topping this week in the [illegible].

Back about the time Mr. Dixey was capering as Adonis in the first revelation of that burlesque in Chicago, Mr. Evans and the late William Hoey were idols in a loose, rude, and costless piece attributed to Hoyt and called "A Parlor Match" with as little reason as any play has been called anything. . . . When the adult playgoer with a memory for what he has seen thinks of Dixey, it is as Adonis: he has played [countless] rôles in the seasons since "Adonis" was new; but [his mind] carries back to his slim, graceful figure as he sto[od on the] pedestal in the beginning and in the "tag" of the [first] frolic, and to his mimicry of Irving, and to his imitations [of the type] and another, and to his singing of "It's English, Y[ou Know," and] his scenes with Miss Amelia Summerville as [Merry] Little Mountain-Maid. . . .

And so with Mr. Evans: mention him, and me[mory runs] to the nights when he was Don Quixote to Hoey [as Sancho,] Macaire to Hoey's Jacques Strop, Mr. Gallagher to [Hoey's Mr.] Shean. His character in "A Parlor Match" was [named J.] McCorker; and that touch, at any rate, was by Hoyt [and had] a gift for the flip, topical naming of the personne in [his pieces.] My elders told me that Evans had carried his chara[cter] of the cheeky book-agent over from the variety-stage, [where] of good-repute, although my clandestine visits thereto [were un-] marked by adventure more impolite than I encount[ered in them] nowadays. . . . And Evans in that part has ever [since] in my vision: he looked like a comic drawing out of Puc[k, Judge] in his plaids and checks—the animate realization of [the storied] "drummer" who was the dubious hero of most [of the for-] bidden anecdotes and "hot ones" which were [current into] whispered mouth-to-mouth circulation. . . .

Just as Mr. Dixey is most fondly recalled for [Adonis, so] also is Mr. Evans remembered for I. McCorker as [devised] this reason and that for not paying to Old Hoss Th[ayer our dol-] lars (or, was it six?) which Mr. Hoey asked for at [every] encounter between 8:15 and 11:00.

Mr. Mencken (or Mr. Nathan) Mentions G[eorge] ago.

This is from the Clinical Notes by Henry Lou[is Mencken] and George Jean Nathan in the American Mercu[ry for the] current month:

CRITICISM IN CHICAGO.—It has been my o[pinion] for some time now that the literary and dr[amatic] critics of Chicago are less concerned with [the] merits of this or that particular specimen [of] ture or drama than with employing it as pre[text] Chicago is superior to New York.

The charm of the paragraph is that it doesn't seem [to mean] anything, although it may mean a great deal wh[ich I don't]

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

A PLAIN STORY IMPLY TOLD ..... XXXV.—THE BEGINNING OF THE INDIVIDUAL

EVERY many celled creature, which reproduces in the ordinary way, starts on the journey of life as a single cell—the fertilized ovum. As we have made clear in a previous article, the usually microscopic fertilized egg cell contains, in some way that we cannot picture, the initiatives or "factors" for the hereditary characters of the living creature in question. But the microscope has begun to reveal the little world within the egg cell, and it has been found possible to map out the way in which the factors for certain characters are disposed in the chromosomes. Thus in the case of the egg of the fruit fly called Drosophila, it is possible to say that the hereditary or germinal factor for, say, red eye or gray wing, lies at such and such a level in one of the four chromosomes. It would be difficult to find a wonder of microscopy greater than this.

Yet this is but an instance of what goes on at a level of visibility which only the microscope can reach. We know much in regard to the permutations and combinations which take place when the germ cell is ripening—shufflings of the hereditary cards which throw some light on the origin of new departures. We know something of the manner in which the paternal and maternal hereditary contributions behave in relation to one another when and after fertilization takes place. We know much in regard to the sequence of events in individual development, wherein the obviously complex emerges from the apparently simple, and the implicit inheritance becomes an explicit individual. In the seventeenth century William Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, wrote in regard to development: "Although it be a known thing subscribed by all, that the fœtus assumes its original and birth from the male and female, and consequently that the eggs is produced by the cock and henne, and the chicken out of the eggs, yet neither the schools of physicians nor Aristotle's discerning brain have disclosed the manner how the cock and its seed doth mint and coine the chicken out of the eggs." But although we do not understand today how the factors of an inheritance are condensed into the dimensions of a pin prick; or how the fertilized egg cell segments into two, and cleavage after cleavage continues, with associated division of labor, until an embryo is built up, we do know why it is that like tends to beget like, why certain hereditary characters are distributed in a particular way among the offspring. And we also know the successive steps by which the process of development is accomplished. It is this kind of knowledge, we think, which must be regarded as the crowning wonder of microscopy. These fundamental questions of heredity and development will be discussed in a separate article, but the point here is that the scientific study of inheritance can as little dispense with microscopy as with breeding experiments and statistics. All three are essential.

Manifold Uses of the Microscope.

EVERY one knows that finger prints are sometimes of critical importance in the identification of a criminal. The details of the pattern of the ridges on the fingers vary from man to man; they are individual. Therefore, if a good impression is available on some surface which has been handled in the course of a burglary, let us say, it can be compared with the collection in the album of criminals' finger prints, and identification may follow. The microscope has even subtler use in the detection of crime. If splashes of blood on the clothes of a suspected murderer are declared by him to be due to the blood of a rabbit which he killed, it is usually possible to test the truth of his statement microscopically. For the dimensions of the minute red blood corpuscles differ in different mammals, and the circular shape in all mammals (except camels) can be distinguished at a glance from the elliptical shape in all the other backboned animals. Moreover, the red blood [pigment of hæmoglobin] can be easily made to assume a cry[stalline form, and it is a] remarkable fact that the blood cry[stals of the horse can be] distinguished microscopically from t[hose of the ass, and even] those of the domestic dog from th[ose of the wild Australian] dingo. Poisons that crystalize m[ay also be detected by] means of the microscope.

THUMB PRINT IN WAX.—The skin [illegible] marked by numerous ridges and intervening valleys, which h[ave individual peculiarities] of pattern, even in the same family. [The illustration labors re]liability. The individuality of the pat[tern is so marked that the] prints are used as sure means of identi[fication.]

The use of the microscope in me[dicine may be illustrated] in reference to the blood. For it is often possible by microscopically examining a film of blood spread on a slide, to tell what is wrong with the patient. Microscopic parasites may be detected, like those of malaria; methods of counting the red blood corpuscles (man has trillions) may show they are far below the proper number, and a change in the normal shape of the hæmoglobin crystals may show that something is amiss. It is unnecessary to dwell on the medical importance of the microscope in determining the presence or absence of certain kinds of microbes and higher parasites in the blood or food canal of the patient. Along with this physiological utilisation of the microscope we may take its use in testing drinking water, which is liable to be fouled by the presence of bacteria and various minute animals. Also of great importance is the microscopic study of milk, for this fluid is peculiarly liable to contamination, and is suitable for the growth of various kinds of [illegible].

For the detection of adulteration [illegible] microscope is also invaluable. The starch grains of [different plants, such as] potato, wheat, rice, maize, are readily distinguished from one another, and a microscopic examination may immediately prove that a commodity sold under the name of, say, particular kinds, e. g. as arrowroot, is not what it professes to be. If a sample of so-called "honey" contains no pollen grains, but a great many starch grains, we may be sure that the honey be was [illegible]. In short, the microscope is a valuable detective of dishonesty. But a use of the microscope more important and more pleasant to think of is in metallurgy, where its utilisation to detect the structural features of the stable and the transient in various metallurgical combinations, such as different kinds of steel, has been of inestimable importance.

A farmer can always make good use of a lens in examining samples of seeds, or in identifying particular kinds of injurious insects, or in detecting the beginnings of rusts and mildews on his crops. But the expert agriculturist must, of course, go much farther, especially in warm countries, where the microscope is necessary for the study of insidious fungi which are always ready to find a weak spot in the plants' defences—in all sorts of plantations from coffee to rubber.

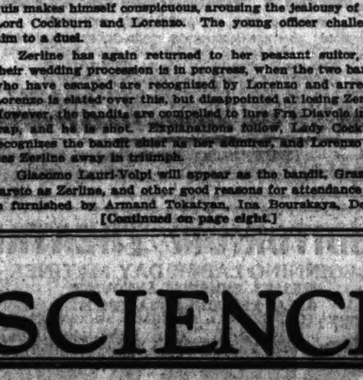
The Ultra Microscope.

EARLY in the twentieth century an ingenious method was described by Siedentopf and Zsigmondy, which is often briefly referred to as the ultra microscope. Every one knows from personal observation that a strong beam of sunlight entering a darkened room reveals a multitude of dust particles, which are not seen at all in ordinary light. The same multitude of particles is often seen in the track of a strong beam from a magic lantern in a darkened room. These dancing particles, whose abundance we scarcely suspected, become visible because they are so strongly illuminated; there is a diffraction of the rays from their surface, and they look much bigger than they really are.

In 1898 Lord Rayleigh pointed out that a particle too small to be seen by the highest power of the microscope under ordinary conditions might be made visible if it received sufficiently intense illuminaton, and the ultra microscope took advantage of this idea. It occurred to Siedentopf and Zsigmondy that if the particles in a solution could be strongly illuminated by a beam coming in, so to speak, sideways, then particles ordinarily invisible might stand out. Their diffraction images, at any rate, would be seen. In ordinary microscopic conditions the beam of light is thrown by the mirror, usually through a substage condenser, directly through the solution or thin transparent section, up into the tube of the microscope, where an image is formed, to be reformed by the eyepiece. In the ultra microscope for examining solutions the beam of light is projected horizontally into the solution and examined from above. The result is that particles ordinarily invisible are seen in a vigorous dance, the so-called Brownian movement. This dance is due to the particles being bombarded by the moving molecules of the fluid in which they are suspended. By accessory devices it becomes possible, in the use of the ultramicroscope, to count the number of particles in a solution and to measure the mass of each. This has formed the basis of exceedingly interesting conclusions which are unfortunately beyond our scope in this article.



CROSS SECTION OF THE SPINE OF A SEA URCHIN (Cidaris Metularia) MAGNIFIED SEVERAL DIAMETERS.—The remarkable feature is the beautiful sieved structure. The spine is a delicate needle to start with, but around this there is a periodic deposition of lime from the skin, on a concentric plan, after another. It is probable that this kind of architecture gives the spine great strength, but it is primarily an illustration of rhythmic orderly growth. It shows that the quality of beauty is not confined to the creations of animals.

A reference should be added, however, to another method called "dark ground illumination" which makes structures visible which are invisible in ordinary conditions of microscopic work. Prof. Bayliss writes: "The central rays of the illuminating beam are cut out by means of a stop, and the peripheral rays are reflected by a parabolic surface so as to meet in a point in the object under examination; they cross at such an angle as to pass outside the field of the objective in use, which only picks up the light reflected, or diffracted, from structures in the preparation." The dark ground illumination brings out features which are invisible in the ordinary direct illumination.

The essential parts of a microscope are, as we have seen (1) the objective for obtaining the first magnified image of the object, (2) the ocular for further enlarging that image and transmitting it to the observer's eye, and (3) the substage condenser for illuminating the object with a cone of light. Now, in modern times, there have been numerous detailed improvements in these parts, e. g. in the quality of the glass used in making the lenses, and a present [microscope] is certainly a very perfect instrument. Ind[eed unless] some new idea is discovered, such as those behind [the] ultra microscope and dark ground illumination, it does [not seem] likely that great advances in technical microscop[y can be] made. The reason for this statement is to be fo[und in the] optical limitations of the instrument. The use of [the micro-] scope is not mainly magnification, but resolution, [or resolu-] lution," says Mr. J. E. Barnard, "it is meant the [power the] objective has of separating and forming correct [images of] fine detail." Unless we see more of the intimate [structure,] the magnification in itself does not greatly avail. [It does] not help us to understand the thing better.

PART OF THE WING OF A WALL BUTTERFLY—Showing how the numerous scales build up its design, not only covering the general surface like the slates on a roof, but arranged in wavy bands of dynamic sense. Each interscopic scale is finely striated longitudinally, and the light falling on these undergoes "interference." This gives the metallic iridescence to the wings of many butterflies, greatly enhancing the coloration due to pigment.

Now there are two factors that determine this [resolving] power of the microscope. The first is what is [called the] "numerical aperture" of the lens, which means, [in a gen-] eral way, the number of divergent rays of light [that the] curvature of the lens will allow to impinge upon [it. Lenses] of high magnifying power are so small that they [admit only] a very small beam of light. Thus what is gained [in magnifi-] fying power may be lost because of deficient [illumination.] A pretty device to increase the income of light in [high] power lenses was the "immersion lens," made [such a] curvature that when the lens was focussed down [on] a drop of oil, or some other liquid, placed over the [object] on the slide, it received light from all sides. The drop [of oil] which the lens is focussed down or immersed greatly [increases] the illumination of a lens with high magnifying [power. This] method has enhanced the value of the microscope [as an in-] strument that analyzes structure, or, in other [words, that] discloses the intimate architecture of things. [But the main] point is that the "numerical aperture" of even [an oil im-] mersion objective has at the present time reached [a practi-] tical limit.

Yet there is a second factor, and that is the [length] of the light rays that impinge from the mirror [and con-] denser on the object on the slide. But here again [there is a] limit, for, as Prof. Bayliss tersely puts it: "[An object] smaller than half the wave length of the light by [which it is] illuminated cannot be seen in its true form and [owing] to diffraction. Hereby is set a limit to microscop[ic observa-] tion." These are difficult matters, but the importa[nt point is] that there are practical limits to what the microsc[ope can do] in the way of magnification and "resolution."

But Mr. J. E. Barnard has recently made an [interesting] step forward by using an illuminant such as [the mercury] vapor lamp, which is rich in blue and violet rays. [It] may also be practicable to utilise invisible radiation[s in the] ultra violet, which would further increase the [microscope's] resolving power. As things are at present, the [limit of use-] ful magnification is somewhere about 800 diameters.

Beauty of Microscopic Structure.

WE cannot close this article without referring to a [different] subject—namely, the extraordinary beauty [of many] microscopic objects. There are endless "beauty [spots" to] be found in the architecture of the shells of diatoms, Foraminifera, and Radiolarians; in the structure of the [outside of] pollen grains and butterflies' eggs; in the sometimes [bilateral] structure of the stems of plants and the spines of sea urchins; in the sculpturing of the scales of butterfly wings and the multitudinous hexagons of their eyes; in the [strange] hairs on many a leaf and the elegant branching of [crystals;] in the intricate section of a rock and the varied [snow] crystals. Of microscopic beauty there is no end.

THEY'VE QUIT CRYING: THEY TRY FOR LA[U]GHS

MISS JANE OAKER MISS MARY BOLAND

MISS OAKER was eager to be emotional on the stage in the nights she acted with James H. Hackett in "Don Cæsar's Return," with Wilton Lackaye in "The Pit" and "Trilby," and when Chicago saw her in "Everywoman." When she acted here as the whining lady-crook in "The Dummy," she made us laugh; and she had us laughing again when she came back, three years ago, in "Lightnin'" as to the two-a-day celebrity who vamped the handsome judge for a Reno divorce, and then became his bride. She originated that rôle in "Lightnin'" six years ago this month in New-York; and she acted it down to a few weeks ago. . . . She will be here tonight as leader of a new cast in "Wages for Wives."

Miss Boland, too, had tearful beginnings in the plays. You may recall her as the girl who loved the Injun athlete when Robert Edeson was so popular in "Strongheart"—a part she acted in London, also. She was with Francis Wilson in "When Knights Were Bold," and for a long time with John Drew, acting with him in "Jack Straw," "Smith," "The Will," "The Perplexed Husband," and a revival of "The Tyranny of Tears," to name plays in which she appeared in Chicago. Those who saw the piece may recall that she made a good job in the difficult variety of rôles in "My Lady's Dress"; and most of us had laughs for her last year when she was in Powers' in "The Torchbearers." . . . She's coming back next Sunday in "Meet the Wife!"

happen to obtain. . . . If I be not wrong, it was Mr. Mencken who wrote not long ago that Chicago was the literary and esthetic center of the world or of the United States or of something; and that was funny enough: why try to better it? . . . And both he and Mr. Nathan have been engaged in writing about things long enough to know that it is not the business of a critic to prove anything,—or, to put it affirmatively, that the critic's verdict, of itself, is the proof of whatever it is that he says.

Not infrequently both Mr. Mencken and Mr. Nathan say things about music, drama, politics, books, and alcohol that have the value of fiat, meaning that I am in agreement with what they say on such occasions. Chicago and New-York have nothing to do with it. If they were inhabitants of Chicago and wrote things not in alignment with my attitude, they would be none the less in error than when they write such things in their present capacity as inhabitants of New-York. . . . It is all so simple that I wonder at their fatuity in the paragraph quoted above!

THIS-AND-THAT

The play by Willard Mack heretofore paragraphed in THE TRIBUNE as "Lingerie Lunacy" is now called "Lace Idols," which, somehow, seems more polite, and just as meaningless. . . . This is the piece wherein Lowell Sherman is to perform; and assisting him will be not only Miss Phoebe Foster, here not so long ago in "Silence," but also Wilton Lackaye, an actor so good in some things as to make inexplicable his failure to achieve and hold a place high in the list of popular favorites.

Miss Madge Kennedy is to go back into the title-rôle of "Poppy," of which she was the star in its long New-York run last season. . . . A way has been found of adjusting black-type honors as between her and W. C. Fields, who was made the pro-forma star on her departure from the cast.

And "Poppy" is to be done in London, although those who have seen it say that it is pungently American in its text and notions. . . . Miss Luella Gear, who made such a hit in a subsidiary rôle that she disturbed not only Miss Kennedy and Mr. Fields but also the authors, is to go over to perform in it there. The London actor of Mr. Fields' part will be W. H. Berry, a fat gag-speaker who is in high favor with the English. . . . As to Miss Gear, Chicagoans who saw "Elsie" last year in the Illinois may identify her as a young woman who danced so well in a comic way that some thought she was just as good as Miss Adèle Astaire.

Word about Miss Astaire and her brother Fred is that they are through with their second London engagement in "Stop Flirting!" [it was "For Goodness Sake!" two years ago in the Garrick], and are coming home to be the stars of something that is to be fixed up to suit them. . . . They're an amusing duo.

The name of the musical piece prepared for the joint-use of Miss Geneviève Tobin, Oscar Shaw, and Walter Catlett is changed from "Vanity Fair" to "Dear Sir!" . . . The management has the odd notion that "Vanity Fair" is an old title.

Samuel Shipman, who makes money from his plays after the critics get weary of kidding them, says he has two new ones ready—"Watched" and "Her Ten Fingers," respectively, he calls them. . . . Also, that he has done the libretti of as many musical comedies, one of which he thinks he may call "The Doll-Girl" and the other "The Kiss-Charm"—two nice, sleazy titles. . . . Furthermore, he talks of sending "Cheaper to Marry," acted last season in New-York, to this city, but doesn't say when or where.

There is talk of a second troupe to tour the minor places in the program of skits and songs current in New-York as André Charlot's Revue. . . . Also, it is said that Nelson Keys, the principal comedian of the revue, will not come to Chicago in it. He's a clever, versatile, brainy little comedian, but not of the type regarded as too funny by American audiences.

Miss Peggy Joyce has been talking of a star in a piece called "A Bed of Roses," by Wilson Collison, recalled for a few that weren't too fragrant; and the chances are said to be that she will go into the new edition of Earl Carroll's Vanities. . . . One of the young woman's ingenuous notions is that she ought to be advertised as the Countess Peggy.

Putting Mistaken Identity to Work

By Mae Tinee.

ing out of the plot. The film does. However, it is rather nicely done—so you don't mind.

Miss Joy is attractive in both roles. Raymond Griffith, always lively as a fop, gets many laughs as the fiancé of the actress. Mr. Varconi as the tender and perturbed young husband does good work.

I'm inclined to think, however, that Zasu Pitts, as Della, the maid of Mrs. Evert, is the best bet of the production. To her falls the lot of chaperoning the masquerading Miss Graham; a duty she performs with fear, goose flesh, and determination. Gee, she's funny!

Well—the ending is one of those "and they all lived happily ever after" odes.

How does "Changing Husbands" listen to you? Think you'd like it? I'm inclined to believe you might find it entertaining. Take a chance on it anyway!

See you tomorrow!

ASK ME! ASK ME!

HELEN K.: Virginia Lee Corbin is declared to be 12 years old.

MRS. C. A.: You win. Zasu Pitts played in "The Goldfish" with Constance Talmadge.

MARGIE: Yes, Shirley Mason and Viola Dana are sisters, we understand, but they've never capitalized the fact. Different types of plays and even different companies.

ANGEL: Sorry, this isn't a matrimonial bureau. Yes, we do think he's good looking—and—better, still, can act.

V. J.: Yes, it's the same Kathlyn Williams you saw in the "Adventures." We admire her because she's growing old gratefully. Splendid in "The Enemy Sex," didn't you think?

A. B. C.: My, my, aren't you ambitious, though! Here's wishing you luck! Address Thomas Meighan, in care of the Lasky studio, Hollywood, Cal., and Percy Marmont at the Lambs' club, New York City. But DON'T expect answers too soon!

JUNE: Yes, Mary Philbin is a Chicago girl—and didn't we do ourselves proud! Brown hair and hazel eyes, we understand. You'll get a review just as soon as her new picture comes along, and we're just as eager for it as you are!

AGNES I MCC.: Here's where you win your bet and get to see a show. Neither Lillian nor Dorothy Gish appeared in "Go And Get It." Agnes Ayres was the lady in the case. Yes I loved "The White Sister." Have a good time.

VOICE OF THE FAN

—And Yes Some More

Dear Miss Tinée: So they want Dorothy the Dumb to play Peter Pan. No wonder people say the movies are no place for children. I think that after what Marion Davies did in "Little Old New York" there could be hardly any doubt as to who comes near the top of the list of candidates. Shirley Mason wouldn't be so worse, either. But Gloria Swanson—words are insufficient. Barbara La Marr or Pola Negri would also fit the rôle as well as Gloria would. I'm not a bred in the bone fan, but even so I've a faint echo of a sense of the eternal fitness of things.

I saw "The Enchanted Cottage," and though I thought it good, it was rather heavy for a H. S. Freshman, which I am. JEANNE.

P. S.—Wasn't Peter Pan a boy?

[Editor's Note: Yes, he was—The Little Boy Who Never Grew Up. What about Jackie Coogan? You may not be a bred in the bone fan, but you've a pretty wide acquaintance with actresses' qualities!]

More of Peter Pan—

Dear Miss Tinée: E. C. U. is perfectly right in thinking that Dorothy MacKaill would be impossible as Peter Pan. Only Marguerite Clark possesses the wistful, elfin charm that Barrie's Peter had.

I suppose it is useless to continue hoping that Miss Clark will make a come-back, but if she does, Peter Pan should be her vehicle.

May MacAvoy is the only other actress who could possibly do the rôle any justice whatever.

Miss Tinée, why do the directors accept miscasts? MARY BEE.

[Editor's note: Why?]

KICK KORNER

Its Object—Objection.

WARNING! If you want to see your kicks in print, write on one side of the paper ONLY!

On the Other Hand.

Dear Miss Tinée: Have enjoyed your column always in the past and take this means to tell you of a few feet of film I saw last night. The subject was a stag hunt in France—the most brutal thing I've seen for a long time. I wonder if you saw it. Anyway, it showed a few deer tracked down by about twenty dogs—and finally one deer took refuge in a stream or pond—then the noble human beings in the hunting stood on the bank and with sticks and stones refused to let the deer land. A great little scene all right. I'm surprised at anything so cruel being shown. Can you imagine how it affects children's minds?

M. C. R.

[Editor's note—Perhaps the picture will teach a lesson. No, I did not see it.]

Pity the Poor Fish.

Dear Miss Tinée: Recently I went to see "Women Who Give," which was a story about fishermen. It surely was an ugly scene where they dug the steel forks into the bodies of those living codfish, in order to ship them from one boat to another.

If those supposed to be brave fishermen were truly brave, they would have used a more humane method for handling the fish.

Bravery is kindness and protection to those who cannot defend themselves, those who are weaker than ourselves; at least, that is what bravery meant in olden times. Tell those fearless men, including Robert Fraser, to pick on some one their size only.

ADELE.

AMBITIOUS CHICAGO WOMEN never let a morning pass without a careful reading of THE TRIBUNE. They know they can't afford to.

Daughter Goes the Cocktail Pace Again

By Burns Mantle.

said he. "But they hurt a good show more than they help it. And the other kind just won't leave home. The really talented attractive girl had rather take $20 and stay in New York, than get $35 and $40 and travel. She'd rather get six weeks here and loaf ten finding another job in the middle of the season, than sign with me for a thirty week season guaranteed."

"That," I said, "is what is known in the higher circles as the New York attitude. Look what she gives up when she leaves home. Her little old hall bedroom, or the sanitary couch in the living room by it. The dear stuffy subway, the fire escape porch, and the gab that goes with it; the thrill of poor old battered Broadway and the game itself—the game of chasing the elusive job, with every day an adventure—a hopeless, wearying, energy-exhausting chase, but still an adventure."

Want Easy Money, Easy Work.

"The thing that gets me," he went on, "is that they don't want to travel even enough to learn the business. They expect to start right off on Broadway and stay there forever. And a lot of them seem to do it. Enough, at least, to encourage others. That's the thing we've got to break down or the road will beat us. We can't go out with 'a typical Broadway chorus' that neither looks nor acts the part."

"And what do you propose to do about it?"

"Well, we're trying a new scheme this year. We're advertising for new girls. We're advertising for girls who are really serious about wanting to go on the stage. You hear a lot about them, but not many of them call when you need them and few get as far as the regular agencies.

"So we're going to advertise and see if we can't fix up an attractive sort of contract for them. If they're the right sort we will give them sufficient training in New York to guarantee their proficiency, pay them the top chorus salary and send them on the road for experience. But they will have to agree to travel for at least two seasons."

Byway Beauties.

Which recalls a scheme with which Earl Carroll met this same problem last season. He carried the advertising idea into each of the towns his "Vanities" played. The agent ahead would advertise for girls with stage longings and work up a kind of local beauty show competition. The lure in this case was a promised appearance with the Carroll show and a probable engagement later.

Purely a press campaign, this one, but it worked surprising results. Out of the corners and the side streets of many towns came really attractive girls. Many of them lacked grace and surprisingly few of them had that sense of rhythm which must be the foundation of every chorus girl's equipment.

But they were a fresh crop, and from them ten or twenty of the more promising were selected and given a chance to come to New York this season for the new "Vanities," which, by the way, is to be produced in the Sam Harris-Irving Berlin Music Box instead of the Carroll theater. This would seem to indicate that there will not be a 1924 Music Box revue—not, at least, before the first of the year. Then Irving Berlin may do one on his own. Hassard Short, who has been the director of the previous Music Box shows, has left the Harris-Berlin management to do a revue of his own at the Ritz theater—the Ritz Revue, he will call it.

Dramatics as a Sport.

Another new idea has popped out of the early season activities. This is an "avocational theater" movement.

"The Manhattan Little Theater club," reads a prospectus at hand, "has been organized to afford an opportunity for those interested in Little theater work to indulge in dramatics as a sport, the same as people indulge in tennis, bridge, polo, golf and other recreational activities."

Rather sane, it seems to me. It at least strips the buncombe from the amateurs' chatter about the need for self-expression and the call of art. This club, according to its founder, Walter Hartwig, who knows more about Little theater activities than any other man I know, and who for two years has conducted successful Little theater tournaments in New York—this club purposes to give its members a chance to play at acting, at stage directing, at scenery painting and setting, even at play writing, if they are so inclined, to their hearts' content and without serious hurt to their pocketbooks.

A professional Little theater game, in other words. The club expects to put six one act plays in rehearsal the first of September. Each of these will have a director, a stage manager, a property man, and a cast picked from the club. And each play will later be produced, with a certain number of performances for subscribers and one or two for the general public.

Much good may come of the avocational theater. At any rate, as a liberal mother told her son when he asked her if he could go to his chum's Sunday school, it is worth trying. "If it doesn't do you any good it won't do you any harm," said she.

Another New Idea.

"Well," announced a friend of mine the other day, "I'm in the theater business now."

"How so?"

"I'm a member of the firm that is to produce—O, some new play. I can't recall the title."

"What did it cost you?"

"Five hundred dollars—BUT, I get two seats to the first performance!"

"And if you escape an assessment the next day they will probably be cheap at the price."

This is how the thing is worked, I learned later. One man with a liking for the theater hears of a play in need of backing. He has a wiser friend of the theater to whom he reads the story. If it seems to have a chance, he then agrees to raise the money for its production.

Then he goes among his friends, books thirty of them for subscriptions of $500 each, promises them nothing but a gambler's chance, takes the $15,000 and produces the play.

If it turns out a success they get their money back, plus an interest in the profits. If it fails it costs them as much of the $500 as has been spent. The man who collects the money saves himself by reserving for himself a share of the motion picture rights, if any there are. And almost any kind of a play sells for something to the movies.

"How has your friend made out so far?" I asked.

"He has backed six plays and five of them have done better than break even," he said. "Personally he is ahead something like $16,000."

Which accounts for the strange names we find among the producers of plays these days.

'TIS SAID SHE'S CLEVER

MISS FLORENCE MILLS

She's known here, as yet, only in reports from Manhattan, where she is a somebody of what there are called the floor-shows, meaning about what is meant in Chicago when they're called cabarets. And she's been to London, too, to perform; and she was the singer of the good song called "Harry" in a day, not so long past, when she, Sissle and Blake, and Miller and Lyles didn't find "Shuffle Along!" too small to hold 'em all. . . . Well, she'll be here tonight in "Dixie to Broadway," which is said to have been cut to fit the dusky Miss Mills.

A Piece for Miss Kosta.

Miss Tessa Kosta, remembered in Chicago as a pretty girl who sang well enough for things of the kind, is mentioned as the star of "Princess April," which Barry Townley and Louis Allen Brown have made from a short story by Frank R. Adams. The tunes are by Carlo and Sanders, who wrote most of those heard last year in "Tangerine." . . . The Mr. Adams of the proceedings used to write his own libretti: he was of the old La Salle-Princess triumvirate of Adams, Hough, and Howard, who wrote many a piece regarded by Chicago as good entertainment.

New Playbills

What Is Due in the Chicago Theaters as Far Ahead as the Managers Know or Care to Tell About.

OPENING TONIGHT:

"Tarnish" in the Playhouse: a play by Gilbert Emery dealing with what is called middle-class life in New York. The piece had a run in that city last season and was classified by report as one of the definite successes. Miss Patricia Collinge and Henry B. Dixey are at the head of the cast for Chicago.

"Wages for Wives" in the Cort: another play, comic in design, dealing with the persons of everyday attributes and adventures. Guy Bolton wrote this one, calling it "Chicken-Feed," by which title it was acted for some weeks last season in New York. The cast for Chicago is new in its important performers; and the roster includes Miss Jane Oakes, Miss Alma Tell, Charles B. Evans, George A. Schiller, Miss Jane Ellison, and Val and Ernest Stanton.

"Dixie to Broadway" in the Garrick: a Negro show said to have been fashioned with the idea of reviewing the social progress of the race from the jungle to—well, to Randolph Street, Chicago. Walter Deleon, Tom Howard, Lew Leslie, Grant Clark, Roy Turk, George W. Meyers, and Arthur Johnston get their names into the playbill as authors, verse-writers, and composers; and which is that. The point is that Miss Florence Mills is the star, and that Charles Gilpin, who acted in "The Emperor Jones," is said to have been added to the company since the try-out, a fortnight ago, in Atlantic City.

SATURDAY NIGHT, AUGUST 23:

"The Shame-Woman" in the Princess: a second play of the Carolina hill-folks by Miss Lula Vollmer, who wrote "Sun-Up." This one, like the first, had a long New-York run in small New-York theaters. Miss Florence Rittenhouse, who had the principal rôle there, is to have it in Chicago.

SUNDAY NIGHT, AUGUST 24:

"Early to Bed" in the La Salle: a comic piece by Dorrance Davis, a new playwright. It is without a big-city history, but is reported to have seemed worth while when tried out. Miss Ada Lewis is at the head of the cast.

"Meet the Wife!" in the Blackstone: a comedy by Lynn Starling which ran through many weeks last season in New-York, where Miss Mary Boland had the rôle she will act here.

MONDAY NIGHT, AUGUST 25:

"Beggar on Horseback" in the Adelphi: a comedy based by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, the authors of "Dulcy," on a German piece, with Roland Young in a part he played through the New-York run.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 31:

"Vogues and Follies" in the Apollo: a revue which was among the Springtime offerings in Manhattan.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 1:

"Blossom-Time" in the Auditorium: the lovely operetta with the score made up wellnigh wholly of Schubert's music.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 7:

"Welcome, Stranger!" in the Central: a revival of the play by the late Aaron Hoffman in which George Sidney acted in Cohan's Grand six seasons ago.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 21:

"The Magic Ring" in the Illinois: a piece put together for Mitzi by Miss Zelda Sears, with tunes by Harold Levey.

NEW PHOTO

MISS GEORGIA O'RAMEY

She's been here through the grateful run of "No! No, Nanette!" as pretty much everybody in Chicago knows; and therein she does about all that may be done with a rôle that hangs on the rim of the plot. . . . A popular clown in Chicago is Miss O'Ramey, who is remembered best, perhaps, for her comic performing in "Leave It to Jane!" when that good make-over of "The College Widow" was in the La Salle, back in war-time.

Vaudeville Wit

RIALTO.

O'Brien and Warren:

"Are you Miss Jones?"

"Yes, I am Miss Jones, the opera singer."

"Are you engaged to a red headed man by the name of Gleason?"

"Yes, I am to marry Mr. Gleason next week."

"Well, I don't want to alarm you, but I've got big news to tell you. The man sent me up from the livery stables to tell you."

"Yes, yes! What is it?"

"Well, the man down at the livery stable around the corner could never keep him out of the stable."

"Yes, yes! Well?"

"I told your gentleman friend, Mr. Gleason, just now not to go into the stables among the horses, but he wouldn't mind me."

"O, dear. What has happened?"

"He said he wanted to see what a mule would do when you tickled him on the heels and——"

"O dear, dear! What has happened to my dear Aleck?"

"So your Aleck got a straw, crept up behind the mule, tickled him on the heels, and——"

"O, this is awful!"

"And the sleepy old mule never lifted a hoof, didn't even switch its tail. But tell me, are you really in love with Mr. Gleason?"

"Yes, and he would be the loveliest man on earth if he'd stop his bad habits."

"What bad habits has he?"

"He smokes too many cigars; he smokes an awful lot."

"Yes, they are awful. He gave me one once, and I almost died."

Fighting "Social" Diseases to Protect Women and Children

Few people know what a vast number of victims "social" diseases have made among innocent womanhood. Few realize how many little ones who should be in glowing health, bubbling over with the happy spirit of childhood, are condemned to physical misery and mental incompetency through the inheritance of these infections from diseased parents.

As Dr. Bundesen, Commissioner of Health for Chicago, has said:

"The pitiable part about these venereal diseases is that they infect not only men but the innocent wife and child in the home with sickening certainty. They scatter misery broadcast and leave in their wake sterility, insanity, paralysis, maimed women, the blinded eyes of little babes, the twisted limbs of deformed children, degradation, physical rot and mental decay."

These people can be helped, they must be helped and in most cases they can be cured. Medical science has found the way to effectively treat even the most severe cases of venereal infection. That more people are not cured is due mainly to the fact that so many suffer in secret through a sense of false modesty or do not obtain proper treatment.

Everyone should realize first—that a vast number of the victims of these diseases are blameless of wrong-doing; and deserve not contempt or censure but sympathy and help—second, that every case should have medical attention as soon as possible.

When the symptoms of a venereal disease are recognized, or if suspicious symptoms appear, it is not a time to hesitate—it is not a time to spend in hopes that "it may be something else." The thing to do is to consult a doctor and find out just what the trouble is so that treatment adapted to the case can be obtained at once.

To take the matter in hand early gives an immense advantage to the doctor, while delay only gives the infection a firmer hold, although even in cases of long standing the progress of the disease can usually be stopped.

Any woman who is suffering from a "social" disease or whose child needs treatment for such a disease can come to the Women's Department of the Public Health Institute at 72 E. Randolph St., and obtain trained and organized medical service at little cost.

All patients are treated as privately as possible as the offices are provided with individual treatment rooms, accessible only to the patient, the doctors and nurses.

That "social" diseases can be cured is now a fact proved in so many thousands of cases that it cannot be disputed—so none need lose hope. The thing to do of course is to take the proper treatment and to obtain it as early as possible.

The service which the Public Health Institute has given and is giving others is also for you if you need it. If you have reason to believe that venereal infection is your trouble, treatment taken now may save you years of suffering.

The fees are small and the same to all. No patient pays more than another for the same service, and nobody needing treatment is turned away because of immediate lack of money.

TWO NEW TYPES OF TUBES MAY IMPROVE GAME

Dr. Pratt Claims Bulb Does Not Radiate.

BY STEPHEN GILCHRIST.
[Radio Editor.]

Two new types of tubes will be placed on the market within the next thirty days—the Pratt tube, the invention of Dr. H. Preston Pratt of Chicago, and the type D-21 sodion detector, manufactured by the Connecticut Telephone and Electric company of Meriden, Conn.

If these bulbs live up to the reputations that have been attached by the manufacturers and disinterested experimenters, each will play a considerable rôle in better radio days.

According to Dr. Pratt much of the radiation interference from which the game has suffered seriously is due to the one-way valve or trigger action of the present type of vacuum tube.

Tube Has Double Grid.

The Pratt tube consists of two disklike anodes, or plates, in parallel, with a double spiral grid inserted between the plates and filament. This, according to the claims of the inventor, gives perfect control over the electrons and other radiant matter contained within the tube, these, when the filament is heated, always having definite directions. By this analysis, Dr. Pratt explains the remarkable clarity of reception obtained with his detector, a fact that was demonstrated in comparative tests made by the writer in the Nameless circuit. The tube gave splendid results on plate voltage varying from 2 to 40, and with and without grid leaks.

The Pratt tube proved to be extremely sensitive to weak signals, and handled great volume with unexpected clearness and lack of distortion. KDKA, WOS, WHB, WLW and several other far stations were logged through locals with fine volume and better musical quality than experienced in a long time.

Low Consumption Bulb.

The tube operates on four dry cells or a six volt storage battery and consumes .25 ampere of current. They are being manufactured by the Pratt Radio Tube company of this city. Amplifiers, both radio and audio, are to follow shortly.

Dr. Pratt has occupied a unique position in the wireless world for a number of years and contends that his vacuum tube experiments antedate those of Fleming and of Marconi. According to Florence Kling, patent attorney, who investigated the claims of Dr. Pratt preparatory to recent applications for patents on the new tube, Dr. Pratt's earliest experiments in this field began in 1876, practical applications to the art now known as radio having begun in 1897.

Sodion Highly Sensitive.

The new sodion detector is a highly sensitive tube which has been designed for use in standard receiving circuits. It combines a sensitivity exceeding the gas detector with the stability and broad adjustments of the hard tube. It is claimed that the receiving range of any set as well as the volume and clarity of all signals will be greatly increased by use of this tube. It is adapted for use in any standard set without requiring the use of accessory parts or alterations of circuit wiring.

The sodion utilizes certain valuable and peculiar properties of an alkali metal and these are entirely responsible for its high sensitivity and uniform operation.

Has Protective Shell.

The structure of the D-21 consists of an assembly of three electrodes; filament, control and anode sealed within a small tube which also contains a small amount of an alkali metal. On the outside of this tube is cemented a short length of resistance wire which is connected in series with the filament. This tube is mounted within a protective outer shell which not only guards the tube itself from mechanical injury but also maintains it at a more constant temperature.

The D-21 requires a current of approximately .256 ampere and a potential of 5 volts. It can be operated on four dry cells or on a 6 volt storage battery. For best regulation of filament current the rheostat should have a resistance of from ten to fifteen ohms. "B" battery potentials of from 22½ to 60 volts are used, depending upon the circuit. Correct adjustment of the filament current is simple since, if the filament is lighted too brightly, a hiss will be audible.

NEARLY EVERY BOY SCOUT HAS RADIO RECEIVER

New York, Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Radio has a large percentage of enthusiastic followers among the Boy Scouts in this country. A recent questionnaire sent out by the official scout magazine to scouts throughout the country revealed that 94 per cent of the boys were interested in radio and that 75 per cent owned sets. Half of them reported that they owned sets which would cover 2,000 or more miles, and 67 per cent of them stated that they had bought parts and built their own sets.

In addition, the national council officers of the Boy Scouts are endeavoring to organize among the scouts a radio relay organization similar to the Amateur Radio Relay league. An organization of this kind would enable the 20,000 troops throughout the country to be in constant communication with each other for all important cooperative occasions.

Engineer Talks to B. L. A. on Home Made Tuner

Malcomb H. Romberg, electrical engineer of the University of Chicago, occupied the center of the stage at the meeting Friday evening of the Broadcast Listeners' association, held in Hamilton park field house, 73d street and Normal avenue. Mr. Romberg entertained 225 listeners with details of the "home rolled" low loss tuner. At the meeting next Friday evening, which will be held in the large hall at the park, radio artists will appear in person and there will be semi-technical addresses.

Announcement will be made in Tuesday morning's TRIBUNE of the time when the W-G-N program conflicting with the political radiocast will be put on the air.

Kenosha, Wis., will today join its voice with the host of radiocasts of the middle west when WOAR goes on the air at 6 o'clock, central daylight saving time.

WOAR, which will utilize a wave of 220 meters, is owned and will be operated by H. P. Lundskow, Burlington road. Radiocasting will be twice weekly: Sunday, from 6 to 8:30, and Wednesday, 8:30 to 10. Programs will be made up in large measure with the best of Kenosha's musical talent.

WGAZ, radiocast of the South Bend, Ind., Tribune, is installing a new station and antenna system, and expects to be on the air shortly with greatly improved transmission.

WTAS, Elgin, Ill., will radiocast the 129th Infantry association reunion program Sept. 27 and 28. Gen. John J. Pershing will be the principal speaker. The veterans will be guests of the city of Elgin and the woman's auxiliary, American Legion.

It is reported that Boston is planning to erect a municipal radiocast. Plans are in the hands of the park commissioners, and should they materialize it is proposed to erect a transmitter near the Parkman band stand on Boston common. Each of the city's sixty-five parks and playgrounds will be linked by receiving apparatus, equipped with public address systems, so that band concerts or any other entertainment or city function may be picked up by the receiving sets in playgrounds and parks.

One by one the radio landmarks are tumbling, if radio may be said to have landmarks. This time it is the bedtime story, and several radiocasts have dropped it from their stories of Indianapolis, who never a wail from grandfather or grandson. The latest to parade the bedtime story over the plank is WJZ, New York. And WJZ was the originator of this feature of other entertainment in the especial interest of the kiddies, young and old, who were supposed to go to sleep with the head phones on or with the horn muffled. Strange to say in the three weeks that WJZ has operated sans bedtime story not one protest has been received.

A radio fan from Larkspur, Marin county, Cal., writes that while listening to the Democratic convention from KDKA, the announcer gave the time as 2.36 a. m., eastern standard time, which corresponded to 10:36 Pacific standard time, so that he had the pleasure of hearing Friday's broadcast on Thursday.

RADIO TALK BACK

If you have any pet complaint regarding any feature of the radio game, or any compliment you feel should be aired, send it in to Radio Talk Back Editor, Tribune Square, Chicago, Ill. Such letters as have general interest will be printed. Manuscript cannot be returned unless accompanied by self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Radio Talk Back Editor—It was with a feeling of genuine depression that I read recently in THE TRIBUNE that the Chicago Civic Opera company had ruled against broadcasting opera this coming season. Granting that the company's viewpoint as to the poor artistic effect and the lack of financial urge is correct, let us consider for a moment the class who never can hope to attend the opera, either because of lack of befitting clothing or funds, and the great class of shut-ins. These generally are able to attend via radio, and to many of these the opera broadcasts of the past have constituted wonderful experiences. Could not some friend of the poor inaugurate some sort of subscription scheme that would bring about a change of heart? Or is it that the opera stars are to be kept from going on the air through phonographic and R. C. A. connections?

S. A. G.

Petersburg, Ill., Aug. 15. — Radio Talk Back Editor: I read with interest the letter in THE TRIBUNE of Sunday, Aug. 3, from W. B. regarding radio announcers. I rather agree to W. H. B.'s suggestion that the various stations' announcers do not repeat the whole program identifying the station as "W-G-N, Chicago," but only or other numbers on the plenty for identification. But I do wish to take issue with W. H. B. about the announcers giving the title of the number given preceding their announcing. Now, I have for over two years not only kept in my radio log the stations received each night and signal strength, but also a very complete list of programs from each station, including individual numbers. I have learned well dozens of new popular pieces by old favorites by hearing them over my radio. I always feel somewhat put out when I hear a piece cannot place its name. It sometimes happens that static or other interference drowns out the announcement of a number to be given; then for convenience it is to have the name of the selection repeated by the announcer. H. E. N.

RADIO TO LINK GERMAN TRAINS TO PHONE LINES

Low Wave Tests Prove Plan Feasible.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—Wireless telephony has developed sufficiently with short wave lengths to warrant installing radio telephone booths on every express train throughout Germany. Plans have been completed to install transmitting and receiving sets in each large city, connecting the present telephone systems with the radio stations.

Experiments on Berlin-Hamburg trains have been carried on secretly for the last few weeks and they have resulted in the government's decision to start the service abqut Sept. 1 with several lines.

The power for sending will be generated by the wheels of the train when moving, or by storage batteries when stopped. The wave length will be eight meters. THE TRIBUNE'S correspondent saw the experimental booths which are constructed so as to be practically soundproof. Conversation from a moving train to a city number is as distinct as over a city system.

The government's program provides for wireless telephone conversation from every express train to any part of Germany by the end of the year.

1,000 MILES ON CRYSTAL

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Aug. 14.—A record was made for reception on a crystal set when the high powered station of the British Broadcasting company at Chelmsford was heard clearly at Algiers, a distance of 1,000 miles. An amateur receiver in Isere, France, declares he hears the new Chelmsford station better than Paris broadcasting, although Paris is 221 miles nearer.

Tenants in Great Britain have the right to place poles for wireless aerials on rented property, and the landlord has nothing to say about it until actual damage is done, according to legal advice received by the National Federation of Property Owners.

Experiments are being made at South End and Leigh-on-Sea with a device by which, it is claimed, electric power can be transmitted by wireless through space. F. Milner Dawson, the inventor, has agreed to develop the idea commercially.

Following the installment of the new Chelmsford station, another British broadcasting station was opened this week at Hull, while Nottingham will start operation next month and Belfast will begin testing in four weeks.

The Moscow soviet government soon will permit installation of private receiving sets, and even begin to manufacture amateur apparatus. There are forty sending stations in Russia, eight of which have a radius of 2,000 miles. When the Khodynka station, near Moscow, is finished, Russia will be able to radiocast bolshevik oratory to the United States. Its sending radius will be 5,000 miles. Moscow listens in on Arlington, Annapolis, and Long Island.

INVENTS "SUPER-CRYSTAL"

BY JOHN CLAYTON.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

VIENNA, Aug. 14.—Dr. Karl Horowits of the University of Vienna, a specialist in crystals, has invented a crystal detector in conjunction with a chemist, Julius Schmidt, which the inventors claim will receive radiocasts on ordinary crystal sets with a loud speaker. The leakage is only one-eighteenth, while the best crystals thus far developed show a leakage of one-eighth.

The crystal has no bad points. With a light touch it rectifies in the characteristic line of the crystal from 100th to 200th in two directions of the current. The characteristic line of this crystal goes steadily through zero point. Rectification is clear and undistorted. It excels over other crystals in that high spots everywhere are not destroyed by moisture, having worked perfectly after being submerged in water two hours and wiped dry. Finger sweat also does not affect its efficiency.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Aug. 14.—The latest French invention in the field of radio telephony is a loud speaker set without tubes, crystal or aerial. It can be built into any small space, such as an ordinary cigar box or even a smaller container. Small circular magnets replace batteries, and a thin steel bar running down the side of the box replaces the aerial.

AUSTRALIA OPENS AIR TO STATIONS UNAIDED BY TAX

All Advertising Must Be Announced.

Australia has removed the prohibition against the use of any but sealed radio sets and open sets may now be used freely, according to a cable to the department of commerce from E. G. Pauly, assistant trade commissioner at Melbourne.

Radiocasts that have been established will remain in operation and licenses of two classes will be issued, namely, "A" license, to persons who receive revenue from users of receiving sets, and "B" licenses, to such persons who radiocast without remuneration from owners of receiving sets. The wave lengths to be assigned range from 250 to 2,000 meters.

Advertising may be radiocast provided it is previously announced as such.

"GET-OUT-VOTE CLUB" INDORSED BY RADIO BODIES

New York, Aug. 16.—[Special.]—The American Radio association, the national association of listens-in, with headquarters at 50 Union square, has joined with the National Association of Manufacturers and other national bodies in an effort to swell the membership of the "Get-Out-the-Vote" club, according to an announcement made today by Alfred M. Caddell, secretary of the A. R. A.

Every member of this national radio association is asked not only to go to the polls and vote on the coming election day but also to influence friends to exercise the privilege of American citizenship.

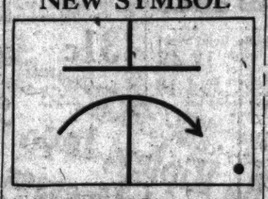
NEW SYMBOL



This new symbol for a variable condenser seems a vast improvement over the style in vogue hitherto, and has been adopted by many radio publications. It has the advantage of showing which side to connect the rotary plates, indicated by the arrow part of the symbol.

SHIP STATIONS, WHITE BILL DUE AT RADIO PARLEY

Conference to Wrestle with Wave Lengths.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Officials of the department of commerce are awaiting the return of Secretary of Commerce Hoover and S. B. Davis, solicitor of the department, before making definite arrangements for a radio conference similar to those held last year and in 1922.

It has been tentatively decided to hold the conference the latter part of September. The date will be definitely set the latter part of the present month, probably.

May Occupy Week.

The conference probably will continue the greater part of a week. In previous conferences discussion related chiefly to commercial broadcasting stations, including such problems as allocation of wave lengths. This time it is expected to cover a broader field, including ship stations and other phases of the radio problem. A questionnaire has been sent by the bureau of navigation to supervisors of the various radio districts seeking suggestions relative to subjects of discussion.

Some attention will be given to the question of legislation. The White radio control bill, which was sponsored by the department of commerce, was reported favorably by the house committee on merchant marine and fisheries in the last session, but failed to pass either house. It is still pending before the house and will be pushed in the winter session. Some suggestions relative to amendments to the bill may be made at the forthcoming conference.

Hopes for Early Action.

Secretary Hoover is understood to be hopeful of obtaining the passage of the legislation before March 4 next, when the present congress comes to an end. Failure to pass it before that time will mean that it will be necessary to start over again before the house committee on merchant marine and fisheries and hold more lengthy hearings. All legislation is swept from the calendars on March 4 next, out during the present recess measures retain the legislative position which they reached in the last session.

Expect Prince of Wales Will Talk Over Radio

The Prince of Wales, who, as Lord Renfrew, sails for America on the S. S. Berengaria the last week in August, is expected to speak to the radio audience from one of the Canadian stations. There is a possibility that he may speak from Col. Green's New England station before he leaves for his ranch in the Calgary district

U. S. TABLE AIDS SHIFTING METERS INTO KILOCYCLES

Covers Whole Range from 30 to 10,000

Washington, D. C., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—A table for converting radio wave lengths in meters to frequencies in kilocycles has just been issued by the bureau of standards.

Values are given in this table for every 10 kilocycles or meters throughout the whole range from 30 to 10,000, thus rendering the table particularly easy to use.

Second Table Issued.

A briefer table of similar character was published in the radio service bulletin for August, 1923, and was accompanied with a discussion of the use of kilocycles in radio. It was based on the accurate factor 299,820.

The tendency of radio engineering practice now is to use and express frequency kilocycles rather than wave length in meters. "Kilo" means thousand, and a "cycle" is one complete alternation of the current in the circuit. This term is familiar in alternating current practice, where a 60-cycle current is one that alternates 60 times per second. As radio frequencies run to many thousands of cycles per second the kilocycle, or thousand cyles, is used as the unit.

Easy to Arrive At.

The numerial relation between the two is very simple. The product of wave length times frequency is the velocity of the radio waves, 299,820,000 meters per second, or approximately 300,000,000. Thus 300,000 divided by the wave length in meters gives the number of kilocycles. 300,000 divided by kilocycles gives the wave length in meters. For example: 100 meters equals approximately 3,000 kilocycles; 200 meters equals 1,000 kilocycles; 1,000 meters, 300 kilocycles and 2,000 meters 100 kilocycles.

Radio Central's Selective Antenna System in Use

New York, Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Development of the central receiving station at Riverhead, L. I., has already reached the point where the signals from Europe are received on an antenna system thirty miles long and the signals from South America on another antenna system twenty miles long. The antenna consists of two telegraph wires mounted on telegraph poles.

The basic element of this receiving station is the so-called wave antenna, or "beverage antenna" in its simplest form.

MARCONI HOLDS BEAM REDUCES WIRELESS COSTS

Sums Up Advances at Company Meeting.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 15.—Forecasting a world wireless service, Senator Marconi summed up radio wonders today before the twenty-seventh ordinary general meeting of the Marconi company.

"Speed in transmission is limited only by mechanical devices employed, which today means 200 or 300 words a minute," said Senator Marconi. "However, this does not represent necessarily the limit of a station constructed under the new system, because several messages can be transmitted simultaneously on the same aerial.

"The beam system increases secrecy in wireless communication, eliminates largely atmospheric disturbances, and reduced the capital costs and operating charges which were obtained under the old system. Super-statics working on long wave lengths are given greater rapidity in communication. Steadiness and reliability are achieved with one-fortieth the power."

ARGENTINA WORKS FRANCE.

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 16.—The low power beam ray has been used successfully for the last two weeks for night transmission of regular commercial radio messages between France and Argentina, says an announcement issued today. The station at Saint Assize, France, using only ten kilowatts power and a wave length of 15 to 90 meters, sent messages which were received at Villa Elisa, Argentina, by means of a small receiving set in the offices of the Transatlantic International's high power station.

Local engineers consider the success this far achieved with low power, low wave transmission may revolutionize the radio business, and that after further experiments it may be possible to do away with high power stations. It is understood here that engineers of American, British, French and German radio companies met recently in Paris to consider the effect of this new development and that it was decided that each company should conduct experiments and make reports.

This Might Come Under Law of Compensation

There are many complaints that WNYC, the station of the city of New York, drowns out WEAF, the station of the American Telephone and Telegraph company. This must be a source of satisfaction to Grover Whalen, who fought WEAF for the right to have a city owned station and won.

"Fra Diavolo" to Be Given Revival

By Edward Moore.

Defrere, Virgilio Lazzari, and several more.

Also, for Ravinia continues to ride down the adventurous path of new performances rather than the smooth pavement of routine. "Lohengrin" will be sung on Wednesday night. Here Forrest Lamont will sing the name part, Florence Easton that of Elsa, and Mr. Defrere, Miss Alcock, Mr. Ballester, and Mr. D'Angelo will be importantly cast. For various reasons the performance will be in English, among them the facts that a good translation exists and that German operas turn into English with better effect than those of the French and Italian wings. The remainder of the week's offerings will be found in another section of this department.

A Few Impressions of Bayreuth.

Alfred V. Frankenstein of Chicago is in Europe this summer, and has been visiting the revived Wagnerian activities at Bayreuth. He writes this department under date of July 12 a few points that do not get into the customary musical criticism. Here they are:

In the park in back of Wahnfried, Richard Wagner's house in Bayreuth, the composer lies buried. The grave is covered by a nameless granite slab, and is marked only by a small marble bust of Wagner some fifty feet away.

Wahnfried itself is more remarkable for its grounds than for the house. In a town almost without open grassy spaces, there is a big garden and a small park on either side of Wagner's home. Siegfried Wagner, who is directing the festival here, lives there now. Directly in front of the house is his bust as a young man.

Haus Wahnfried is on the Richard Wagner strasse, which is a wide street for Bayreuth, and which is lined on either side with stores. In every store in the town are queer and curious souvenirs of Wagner to be bought. One may have the composer's silhouette on a cigaret case, a dinner plate, or a beer mug. One may buy pictures of semi-nude Norns, and more than semi-nude flower maidens, and there is also on sale a huge glass pitcher in the form of a boot, with part of Hans Sachs' monolog written on it.

The town of Bayreuth is a typically Bavarian one, and that means one of the most delightful places in the world, with narrow and winding streets, old and creaking houses, cobble stone pavements, and few sidewalks. The place is not big enough to have lost its peasant character, so one sees ox carts here, and women carrying big baskets of fruit into the market place of the town.

One is supposed to hear leit motives floating out of windows here, as the intelligent Wagnerites study their scores. The only thing I heard in five days here was the Good Friday Spell so badly played on a cornet that it sounded like Paul Whiteman practicing for his next attack on the classics.

The festival playhouse, built by Wagner, is on a hill approached by a long drive, shaded by huge trees. Before the theater is a park. The theater is built of light brown brick, and looks not much different from any other big playhouse, from the outside, except that it has an extremely high stage.

The theater inside is about as wide as the Chicago Auditorium, but not nearly so high. It is severely decorated with Greek pillars jutting into the house. There are no aisles down the center; one enters the end of the row and crawls over every one else to his seat in the middle. The orchestra is under the stage. All that is to be seen of the pit is a big slot along the proscenium.

The audience inside the Festspielhaus is predominantly German. They are all perfect Wagnerites, and hear Wagner with all the solesinity of a religious ritual. The most perfect of the Wagnerites (for in this "perfect" can be qualified) are to be seen during the half hour intermissions wearing capes, and shaving brushes in their hats. There are two restaurants next to the theater, one in the shed where the scenery is stored, and one eats bratwurst and drinks beer while walking between the pillars of Montsalvat and the Valkyrie rock.

But soon the brass choir sounds a leit motif, and one goes back to his seat, in the hush and quiet which is a tradition of the Festspielhaus in Bayreuth.

Mr. Carpenter's New Ballet.

John Alden Carpenter is back from Europe with the news that Sergi de Diaghileff has accepted the music for ballet upon which he has been working for the last year. It will be performed for the first time at Monte Carlo about March 1. After that, the work will be open for hearing by American audiences.

Mr. Carpenter has given his new piece the tentative name of "The Jungle," meaning the jungle of American life, but this title stands a good chance of being changed, since its translation into French brings different connotations. Being a sketch of American life, it begins and ends with the theme of work, varied midway with play.

Here is where one of Mr. Carpenter's interesting ideas on music came into being. For the germ of the work theme was suggested by a battery of pneumatic riveters that resounded around his studio last summer, a theme that might well have inserted itself into the labors of any member of THE TRIBUNE'S staff the last few months. To most of us, of course, the drum fire of a riveter would be likely to suggest a Gargantuan dentist excavating into a gigantic nerve, but to Mr. Carpenter it suggested the rhythm of music. With an unceasing change of pulse and pace, it is probably going to annoy considerably the conductor who is directing it, to say nothing of the men who are playing it, but it ought to be effective.

The play theme is jazz, a subject that more and more is interesting American composers of modern themes. Mr. Carpenter admits that jazz does not cover all musical life, not even all American musical life, but neither does any other single item in music, not the Bach polyphony, nor the Wagner leit motif nor the modernistic slewed harmonization. Incidentally, the Chicago health department has contributed something on jazz. In one of its comparatively recent bulletins, it says: "The mild emotional excitement brought about by the stimulating effect of jazz rhythm is beneficial to normal processes of the body and has the additional advantage of promoting physical exercise in the form of dancing."

So there it is in its briefest terms. American life begun and ended by a riveter, contrasted by jazz put into terms of a great orchestra, and visualized by the Diaghileff dancers. This department hopes for the opportunity of sometime hearing and seeing it.

Music Notes

Alfred Piccaver, the tenor, having finished his Vienna season and given six performances at Covent Garden, London, has gone to Italy for the rest of the summer, where he will study some rôles with coaches of that country. Early in the fall he will buy transportation to this place, where he will sing during the Civic opera season.

Just what Geraldine Farrar's "modernized" version of "Carmen" will turn out to be is not entirely evident, but a publicity agent rushes a communication to the desk to the effect that she has completely severed it from all operatic tradition. Interest is to be concentrated on the three principal characters, and the chorus will be eliminated so that the story may proceed "without futile interruption." This last gesture deserves to be set to music by itself.

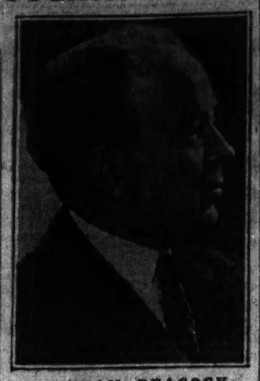
Former artists of the old Boston English Opera company have reorganized and, adding the word artists to the former title, are to start touring Sept. 1, with "Il Trovatore" and "The Bohemian Girl" as the leading items. The organization will number about fifty members, the principals being Hazel Eden, soprano, Ruth Betzner, contralto, William Mitchell, tenor, William Rufus Northway, baritone and artistic director, and Bertram Goltra, basso and stage manager.

Alessandro Bonci, in his time one of the most noted of Italian lyric tenors, is coming back to this country in October for a concert tour. His last appearances hereabouts were with the Chicago Opera.

Elena Gerhardt, who has as good ideas about singing lieder as any of them and a better voice than most lieder interpreters, is in the Adirondacks resting and inhaling country air. Which means that she, too, will start out on a concert tour before many months have gone by.

Atlanta plans a summer opera season next year largely modeled on the ideas of the St. Louis Municipal opera. A local chorus will be trained this winter, a local orchestra will play, the singers and comedians will come from Broadway, and the répertoire will be of light operas and operettas.

FOURTH SEASON



BERTRAM PEACOCK.

He was put into the part of Franz Schubert in the first American cast of the operetta known in this country as "Blossom-Time"; and he is still in it. He headed the cast when the piece was sung last year in the Apollo and the Great Northern; and he will head it when "Blossom-Time" is brought back, two weeks hence, in the Auditorium. . . . Try, from the list of all the acting-baritones you recall, to think of one who might be better in the part,—keeping in mind that it is desirable to look as much like the pictures of Schubert as possible.

Heart Affairs Hold Ear of Hollywood

By Grace Kingsley.

coat of soft white silk striped with pale blue made in straight lines. Mrs. Ray looked charming in a flowered silk of dark blue.

A bathing party in the pool and a garden party in the big walled garden at the rear of the Ray home followed the luncheon. Mrs. Ray doesn't care particularly for swimming, so she let Betty, Jackie, Mrs. Ramsey Wallace, and her husband steal the swimming and bathing suit honors. Mrs. Ray confided that she does not go in much for athletics except to please her husband, but he enjoys so much having her play tennis with him that she is brushing up her golfing.

Charlie never looked better in his life. He looks like the Charlie of old, who first won us with his boyish grin. Charlie, following the making of "Smith," is having the first real vacation he has ever had, and is spending most of it at home with his wife and friends who drop in. That lovely garden is the real living room of the Rays during the summer days. It is furnished with swinging seats, garden chairs, and shady nooks galore, not to mention the large veranda at the back of the house where the Rays always breakfast. But Ray's vacation is soon to end, as he returns almost at once to the Ince studios for work on his new picture, "The Desert Fiddler."

Mostly of Playtime.

Antonio Moreno's informal Sunday afternoons, presided over by Mrs. Tony at the Moreno Italian mansion built on top of a Hollywood hill, remain charming social features of Hollywood film colony life.

Here in the big drawing rooms, on the wide verandas, and in the fountained and flowered patio you meet everybody worth knowing in pictures. It only runs on another. The Cecil de Milles are frequent visitors, when their own hospitable Sunday afternoon occasions permit, while others who often drop in are May McAvoy, Alice Calhoun, Noah Beery and his wife, Petty Compson, James Cruze, Charlie Chaplin, and formerly Will Rogers and his wife, besides scores of others.

"We entertain only on Sundays when Tony is working in a picture," explained Mrs. Moreno. "When he is working we keep early hours."

Norma Talmadge is absorbed outside of working hours in the redecorating and furnishing of her new home, which Joseph Schenck has bought for her. This formerly belonged to John Cudahy, and its garden and grounds are among the loveliest in Hollywood. When the house is finished Miss Talmadge plans a big fancy dress ball. This will take place probably about the middle of September.

Up amid the sylvan loveliness of Laurel canyon, which isn't as wild, of course, speaking from a nature standpoint, as some other canyons, Norman Kerry recently staged a party. Present also were Clara Bow and Mildred Harris and one or two others. They performed the feat well known to literature as making the welkin ring. At any rate, some of the neighbors objected to the noise, and the party had to be turned off long before the spirits of the participants were exhausted.

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks are having a real vacation. They went down to their hidden camp on the beach between Oceanside and San Diego. There they will live in their bathing suits and Mary will become a simple fisher maid, while Doug will emulate the leaping tuna out in the surf.

Mabel Normand has taken a trip back to a quiet spot in Minnesota, where she will meet her mother and take a rest from all the storm and strife incident to the Dines shooting affair. She expects to be gone only a fortnight or so. Mack Sennett and his attorney both deny empahtically that Mabel is out of the Sennett organization.

City of Refuge.

The train came to a grinding stop at a small town in the south, and a head protruded from a window at the end of a car.

"Does yo' knows a cullod pusson by de name o' Jim Brown what lives here?" he asked of a station lounger.

"Ain' never heered o' no Jim Brown nyah, an' Ah lived in dis town lo' tan years."

"Is you' right sush dey ain't nevah been no Jim Brown aroun' hyah?"

"Positutely."

"Den," announced the new arrival, reaching for a suitcase, "dis is whah his new son-in-law gits off." J. B.

Anything to Please Her.

"Don't move or I'll shoot."

"All right, my friend," replied Mr. Dubwaite, who was surprised by a burglar in his house. "Would you mind if I called my wife downstairs?"

"Trying to spring something on me?"

"No. You see, she's been expecting a visit from a burglar for the last twenty years and I just want her to see what one looks like." J. D.

Above Rubies.

"Won't you buy this rose?" said the charming flower vender at a shortly hereafter. "I only ask one guinea."

"I am sorry," said her victim with a courtly bow, "but the price is a little too high."

The lady kissed the flower—"and later," she suggested, "perhaps you will buy it."

"Madam," said the courtly one, "the rose is now priceless." H. K.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

On the Wisdom of Making the Most of the Present

By Mme. X.

THE little red apples are gleaming each day more cheerfully through the dull green leaves of the apple tree outside my window, and the village boys have taken to walking through the garden on their way to nowhere. As their walk takes them right under these same apple trees, the little worms who make their homes and raise their families in these same apples are often disturbed and their family life interfered with by these same peripatetic little boys.

All of which reinforces the sad realization that summer is drawing to an end and that soon the days will begin to shorten with that relentless fatality which marks the rolling of the earth around the sun. Whether Coolidge and Dawes or Davis and Bryan be elected; whether Germany and France fall in or out; whether the two lads who murdered little Robert Franks be hanged or merely imprisoned; whether the American aviators succeed or fail in their world flight tour; whether bobbed hair stays in or goes out of fashion, this earth of ours just goes on its way circling around and around the sun. Fix your thoughts on that fact, and many anxieties that perhaps now occupy your mind will grow less troublesome. That whirling motion is soothing if you take it the right way, which is slowly, evenly, without pace or pause.

A sense of contentment with the present moment is a rare gift among us Americans. We are usually looking ahead and making plans for future realization and achievement. More and more is the lure of travel taking hold of us, and, in time, if we keep on, the Wandering Jew will look like a stationary object compared to the average American.

Going or Coming.

There is that extremely attractive and popular couple, the Barney Goodspeeds, for instance, who are always either planning or taking a trip to some remote and inaccessible spot. This coming winter they are arranging a trip to the south sea isles, taking in Australia and New Zealand on the way. Not content with the variety and spice offered by this tour of palm-shaded atolls and volcanically made lands inhabited by cannibals and head hunters, they also propose to explore the Gobi desert, if the bandits and lamas permit it, and possibly go from there up to Siberia and return by the great railway that still continues to throb through that vast territory in spite of wars and revolutions.

Last year the Goodspeeds circumnavigated South America, traversing it from north to south and from east to west. The year before that they explored south and central Africa, bagging much big game by the way and having a really unique and wonderful experience. The year before that it was the far east and the Indian ocean that they toured. For them the earth will soon shrink up and become a too small planet and they will sigh as did—was it Pharaoh or Alexander the Great?—for more lands to conquer. But it certainly is a pleasant outlook for them. A winter in the region made famous by Frederick O'Brien, Joseph Conrad, Robert Louis Stevenson, et al. certainly offers opportunities for recreation of a rare and choice order.

Setting Forth to China.

One of the most energetic of our local Sir John Mandevilles (or perhaps we should call her Lady Joanna Mandeville) is Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, who is setting forth on Sept. 11 for China and Mongolia. She has leased her house on Lake View avenue to Senator and Mrs. Medill McCormick for the winter. She will have as escort her son, John Borie Ryerson, who, when he gets over there, may join the expedition being organized by Roy Chapman Andrews to go after dinosaur eggs and the remains of primitive man which, Mr. Andrews thinks, are to be found in the slate deposits in parts of the Gobi desert. The Ryersons expect to return by India, the Red sea, and Europe, thus circumnavigating the globe, which it is the secret desire of most of us to accomplish before we pass on.

By the way, and speaking of travel, word has recently been received from Mr. and Mrs. Howard Shaw, who are junketing about England greatly to their delight. This communication was dated from "Ye Old Ho[illegible] of God Begot." How's that for a name of an inn? Pretty neat, I'm thinking. It is at Winchester, and must have been founded and named by one of those old Covenanters who fought under Cromwell and who adopted the Old Testament as their guide both in conduct and nomenclature. English inns are quaint and well kept, even if you are not likely to grow fat on the almost inevitable fare, boiled mutton, boiled potatoes, boiled vegetable marrow, escorted by past bread and finished by apple tart, with either ale or stout to help it down and a glass of rich old port to top it off.

The Cape Cod Colony.

Other wanderers from this part of the world at the moment are the George A. McKinlocks who with Miss Muriel McCormick are visiting the Lawrence Vlleses at Hyannisport, Mass. This is a favorite rendezvous for Chicagoites, many of whom can be found there enjoying the so-called simple life of Cape Cod. Simple life in that charming region includes much entertaining and being entertained. It includes much extremely good food, and (low be it spoken) something to drink with it; it includes much bridge and mah jongg at stakes that are not low (though the term is, of course, relative and what may be high for you and me may be low for the other man); it includes pretty and cozy houses and good service; it includes smart frocks and modish hats.

The difference between it and, for example, Newport, is that there is little or no thought of display or show off among the well to do folk who gather in this ancient and picturesque region where our ancestors settled in order to work out what were then considered some new and strange ideas and ideals.

These ancestors built them little homely houses, with small, low ceilinged rooms and steep and narrow stairways leading up to the still lower ceilinged upper story. They let the salt sea breezes, of which there were a-plenty, tint the unpainted exteriors that delicious soft, pearl gray which paint cannot reproduce and which today gives individuality and beauty to those little old houses and makes those who have enough money to put up or buy palaces nevertheless prefer to live in these dwellings of a long dead

MISS FRANCES R. COONLEY.
[Koehne Photo.]

ALTHOUGH at present their paths are far from home, these three attractive young members of society will wend their way Chicagoward when September brings the first intimations of the unusually crowded season ahead, to take their places in the numerous activities of the winter.

Miss Frances R. Coonley, who has been abroad for the last two months with her mother, Mrs. John Stuart Coonley of 1245 Astor street, is now in London. Mrs. Coonley and her daughter are to sail on Aug. 23 for this country.

More than usual interest is attached to the forthcoming debut on Dec. 20 of Miss Edith Fairbanks, owing to the fact that she is the granddaughter of the late Charles Warren Fairbanks, vice president in the Roosevelt administration, and she has the additional distinction of having been presented at the Court of St. James in June, following her graduation from Miss Nixon's school at Florence. Miss Fairbanks and her mother, Mrs. Warren C. Fairbanks of 66 Cedar street, are returning next month from Europe and will go to their summer place at Watch Hill, R. I.

Miss Elizabeth Van Hagen and her mother, Mrs. George E. Van Hagen of 1505 Dearborn parkway, are spending August at White Sulphur Springs.

Miss Van Hagen's engagement to Thomas Belknap, son of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Belknap of 17 East Division street, is of recent announcement.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

people. And today Cape Cod is, though still demure and puritanical in aspect, quite fashionable and sought after by pleasure seeking, comfort loving mortals from all parts of the country.

Among the Chicago colony there are Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Spoor who have a charming house just outside of Hyannisport on a small peninsula which stretches out into the sea. It is shaded with a fragrant grove of pines and its beach is lapped by gentle sea waves. Mr. Spoor, who was seriously ill in the spring and underwent a dangerous operation is, say those who have seen him lately, on the high road to health, and looks younger and more vigorous than he has in a long time. He is one of the most energetic pedestrians to be met on a winter's afternoon on the Lake Shore drive. He always walks with a long, swift tread, and many a friend who has joined him on his homeward walk up that pleasant way has, after a few blocks of panting hurry, made an excuse to turn off on a side street unable to keep up with his relentless pace.

The Spoors' daughter, Mrs. Thornhill Broome, and her three children, are also occupying a house for the summer at Hyannisport. In fact, it was because she preferred the seashore to the Berkshires that the Spoors sold their beautiful place near Pittsfield, Mass., this spring and settled on Cape Cod for the season. The town of Pittsfield bought the Spoor estate. Just what they propose to do with it the city fathers of Pittsfield have not yet divulged.

Thirty Years Ago.

Pioneers among Chicagoans on Cape Cod were Mr. and Mrs. George S. Payson who first went to Hyannisport as much as thirty years ago where they built them a simple cottage on the top of the highest bit of land, a gentle hill, overlooking the harbor there. At that time there was hardly a tree anywhere around. The strong sea winds that scattered salt spray over the coast thereabouts discouraged any but the short, harsh grass that grows near the sea. The village roads were deep in sand. The houses were the simplest of their kind. There was a postoffice and a general store, and but little else in the way of urban attributes. Except for the wide stretches of sea and the nearby salt marshes across which the sunsets were a joy to behold, it was rather a desolate spot and only attractive to the Paysons and their summer neighbors because of the excellent harbor which afforded shelter for a fleet of smart little schooner yachts, in which the Paysons and others used to go up and down the New England coast.

Today that same windswept village has well paved and delightfully shaded streets. Lovely gardens surround most of the still simple and unpretentious cottages. The Paysons' house on the top of its little hill has grown into a charming and roomy mansion set in a really lovely garden, a bit of landscape work wherein two mirroring pools reflect the flowers, the sky, and the colors of that same sunset which is such a marked feature of Hyannisport.

Other Chicagoites in that part of the world are the William Secor Cunninghams, the Ralph Shaws and the Lawrence Vilzes; while at Centerville, which is only a few miles to the west, Mrs. William O. Goodspeed, who was visiting her at the moment her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Turney Goodspeed. Still farther westward on the shore of Buzzard's bay Mr. and Mrs. J. Allen Haines have an attractive cottage where they are spending the summer. They have likewise a yacht, of not majestic proportions, but adequate to "sleep" and "eat" them and give them quite extended tours in the neighboring waters of Long Island sound.

Just Around the Corner.

Mrs. John M. Clark, her daughter, Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis, and Mrs. Clark's sister, Mrs. Stewart Clarke, all three only recently of Chicago [and we claim ex-Chicagoans long after they leave us] live just around the corner from the Haineses in a comfortable old-fashioned house which they have occupied for many years and which is surrounded by soft lawns, a lovely garden and a thick and fragrant pine grove.

Up at the other end of Cape Cod still another of our fellow citizens, Mrs. Arthur Aldis, is domiciled in an ancient ex-fisher cottage, the center of an ardent band of Thespians with and for whom she is working ardently to produce high class drama. She has a workshop next the Bandbox studio. Among other things at which she is working is a dramatization of John T. McCutcheon's famous "Heir at Large," which for so many, many months made Monday the important day of the week for the W. G. N.'s readers.

Provincetown is the haven of several different flocks of devotees of various cults. Art, drama, literature, music all find lodging in those extremely simple fishers' cots on that sandy spit of land with the sea beating its diapason on all sides and the gulls jeering and swooping overhead, while motorists and tourists from all over the country flock to see what is probably the most picturesque and interesting colony in New England. It is a collection of our fellow mortals who do not measure success by a money standard. Display in the vulgar sense of the word is quite absent. Competition is along lines quite apart from those in our cities. Mammon and all his works are viewed askance and the gods of ideals receive the incense and worship.

As Others See Us.

Speaking of Mammon, we in Chicago don't realise quite how we look to outsiders. Sometimes we get to fancy ourselves not a little until pulled up with a jerk to a contemplation of our features as seen by others. Such a jerk did a fellow-citizen of ours get at meeting in London last spring Lady Cynthia Moseley, a daughter of Lord Curzon of Kedleston and, by the same token, a granddaughter of the late Levi Z. Leiter of Chicago.

Said the Chicago tourist to Lady Cynthia pleasantly and more to pass the time of day than for any more ardent motive:

"I'm so glad to meet you! I used to know your mother when she was a girl in Chicago, and she was so lovely!"

"You mean in Washington, don't you? My family came from Washington."

"No, I mean in Chicago, where your grandfather was one of the prominent men and where your mother and her sisters and brothers were born and brought up."

The smile vanished; Lady Cynthia looked nervously around as if afraid that some one might overhear the disgrace that had befallen her, and muttering, "I think you must be mistaken. I never heard that we came from Chicago," she moved hastily away.

I suppose that much of the money that gives Lady Cynthia her food, shelter, and clothing, the three primal requisites for us perishable mortals, must come out of Chicago by one or the other of the several channels by which the interest on the Leiter millions finds its way out of this community and into other more fragrant centers of population.

Oswald Moseley, Lady Cynthia's husband, is of another mold, I fancy. His departure from the Conservative party to the ranks of the Labor ites made a great stir in England when it happened some months ago. His father-in-law, the Hon. Earl, was considerably put out at him and for some time had little or nothing to do with him. But the young man seems of an independent attitude and appeared to be bearing up quite well under the in-law displeasure last April. He will make a name for himself yet, or prophecies among his contemporaries are mistaken. He is youthful in appearance, of medium height, slender, dark, and with a manner more animated than that of the generality of his class and kind in England.

Lady Cynthia is of quite an English type, not at all resembling her mother in feature, though her coloring is somewhat the same. She has a delicious complexion, soft, mouse hued hair, blue eyes, and is rather tall and built neither plump nor slender, just with softly curved outlines and a svelte look. But Chicago makes her shudder.

Citizens of the World.

Two interesting visitors have just left here after making a stay of several weeks. I mention them in this connection, as they made such nice comments on us and our dear and dirty old town. They are Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner Hale. He was originally of Chicago, his father having been a well known and much liked member of the faculty of the University of Chicago not many decades ago, Prof. William G. Hale. Mrs. William G. Hale was also a well known woman in university and social circles here. Their son is an artist, his specialty being mural painting, in which he has won more than local fame. The writer saw some of his work in the Albert Spalding house in Florence two years ago and found it delightful both in technique and design.

Mural painting is different from any other in that it is done on the wet plaster as soon as the plaster is put on and before it has time to dry. It is therefore necessary to put on only as much plaster as this artist can handle at a time. He also has to have a complete knowledge of the actions of color wet and dry, because all hues are different under these conditions. This is by no means easy to do. To brush on a wet tint and anticipate just how they are going to dry out tests a man's courage not a little. But this is real mural painting. Anything else is merely shaping and cutting canvas to fit a certain wall space and painting it before setting it in place.

Mr. Hale's visit to Chicago was in order to fill a commission given him for a set of frescoes for the new Illinois

MRS. CHARLES H. SABIN.

Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, Republican national committeewoman from New York state and president of the Woman's National Republican club of New York City, will arrive in Chicago tomorrow to attend the notification ceremonies of Charles G. Dawes, to be held at the vice presidential nominee's residence in Evanston on Tuesday evening. Several luncheons and dinners are being planned for Mrs. Sabin and other prominent Republican women who are coming on for the notification.

MRS. LOUIS M. WEISS.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Newman announce the marriage on June 29 of their daughter, Irma Louise, to Louis Mitchell Weiss.

Merchants Loan and Trust bank, which is being put up on the corner of La Salle street and Jackson boulevard. He is depicting in these panels various scenes in the long history of banking. The Hales live in Paris. They also have an apartment and studio in New York and are now arranging a domicile in Florence. Which shows them as citizens of the world, as most artists are or should be. Mrs. Hale is a writer and under her previous name of Bunea-Varilla has published several books.

Mr. Hale is a striking and noticeable figure in any crowd. He is extra tall, slender, with extraordinarily beautiful and clear cut features for a man. These, with his short, pointed beard and deep set, luminous eyes, give him a marked resemblance to the traditional pictures of Christ.

Walking about the gardens with him in an intermission at the Ravinia opera lately made one conscious of the provincial manners of our fellow citizens. Most of the people there frankly stared at him, turning about the better to see him and nudging neighbors to call attention to his appearance. In Paris or London or any other world metropolis such a thing would have been impossible. Over there they are so accustomed to passersby who fail to look tint from the same pattern that even a two headed man walking up the Champs Elysées would not attract much attention. The Hales have gone back to New York, whence they sail soon for France.

Evenings at Ravinia.

The opera at Ravinia is giving us increasingly delicious evenings with the melodious operas of this and former epochs. The longer they sing together the better does this summer company "fill the bill" and the greater delight does it give to its habitues. It is the height of indiscretion for this p. p. p. to give its preferences, but Florence Easton in "Fedora," Mme. Graziella Pareto in "La Traviata," Mlle. Bori in "Manon" (I didn't see her in "The Love of Three Kings"), Martinelli in "Lakme," and Lauri-Volpi in "Martha" have all given this scribe a quite special brand of unforgettable pleasure during the last eight weeks. And the fact that two weeks from tomorrow night will see the close of this year's season at Ravinia is one to cause a real pang in the hearts of its devotees.

But hardly will the echoes of Ravinia die on the air before the Chicago Civic Opera company will knock at our doors for attention. All summer have its agents and directors been ransacking Europe, and, in fact, the entire globe, for new talent to add to its already splendid roster of artists to make the coming season perfect. Well known favorites like Mme. Ralsa, the world's greatest dramatic soprano; Ansseau, the Belgian tenor, and Charles Hackett, the lyric tenor, are already turning their faces this way. The powers that be promise us a great surprise in a brand new soprano from Italy, that land of song birds, in the person of a lyric soprano bearing the singular name of Toti Del Monte. We discovered Galli Curci. Perhaps we are go-

Gathering of the Clans.

There is a grand assembling of the Republican clans in Chicago today and tomorrow, the occasion being the notification on Tuesday evening of Gen. Dawes that he is the vice presidential candidate on the Republican ticket. (We suspect he has had an inkling of this nomination before this, however.) The Republican women are flocking here in larger numbers than ever before. Mrs. Alvin T. Hert of Kentucky, vice chairman on the Republican national committee and chairman of women's activities during the coming campaign, arrives today from Kentucky. Mrs. Charles H. Sabin of New York also gets here today or tomorrow.

Others hurrying here to be present on Tuesday evening at what will probably be a historic occasion are Mrs. Edgar B. Tenmey of Nebraska, Mrs. John Gordon Batelle of Columbus, O., Mrs. Anna Wolcott Valle of Denver, Colo., Mrs. W. C. Reid of Albuquerque, N. M., Mrs. W. A. Price of Nebraska, Miss Maryha McClure of Iowa, Mrs. E. C. Smith of Vermont, and Mrs. Ralph D. Cole of Ohio. In all, at this writing, at least seventeen are expected. The headquarters for the Republican women are established in the New Wrigley building, on the second floor, in a suite of six rooms, and are said to be most attractive.

THE REAL INSIDE DOPE ON THE MOVIE STARS

Two-Gun Hero of Films Knows What Sorrow Is

By Julia Harpman

BIG BILL HART, cowboy hero of the films, the iron jawed, rugged, two gun man of the badlands who has rescued more maidens in distress, righted more wrongs and punished more villains with hot lead than any other actor of the screen, could sing his own particular song of sorrows—if he would.

Bill is a tall, roughly hewn man, with a long, lean face, curiously resembling a horse—perhaps that is one reason why he loves his pinto pony more than anything in the world, except his young son, William S. Hart Jr. His eyes are blue and kind and sad. They squint from between his lashes, as if he were forever looking at the far horizon over his favorite western plains. He has thin, straight lips, which fold together in a long, grim line. Life is all drama to Bill.

It is recorded in various volumes that William S. Hart was born in Newburgh, N. Y.; that when he was quite young he worked as a postal clerk in the general postoffice in Park row, New York, and at the age of 19 went on the stage. His stage debut was in the old Bowery theater with Mme. Modjeska, one of the numerous stars he supported during his stage career.

Fought with Custer.

Between the date of his birth and his term of service at the postoffice, however, Bill led an adventurous life in the old west. He says he can recall Custer's last stand vividly. When he was 7 he is reputed to have defended himself, alone and with the sole protection of a knife, against a warring Indian.

Custer's last fight was in 1876. If Bill were 7 at that time, the film star must now be 55. Bill doesn't claim to be too young to vote, but age is one of the subjects which he doesn't think important enough to discuss.

He much prefers to have you believe he was born on a ranch in Dakota, where he claims to have learned to ride bareback almost before he could walk, and that his parents moved to New York when he was 15. At any rate, his family did live in New York for a while and when Bill joined a troupe of actors, the rest of the family, which included Bill's parents and his dearly beloved sister, Mary—whom Bill calls Mamie—removed to the state of Washington.

The stock company with which Bill was playing was stranded in Chicago. The manager reported A. W. O. L. The actor's trunks, with their pitifully few belongings, were seized by the rooming house keeper, in true paper back novel style.

Bill spent his last few cents for food and wandered about, looking for a comfortable park bench on which to spend the night. But it was cold and a thin drizzle made the park most unpleasant. He walked until he came to the railroad sheds.

On some boxes, protected from the rain by the shed roof, lay two bums snoring. Bill crawled in between them. But the bums hadn't bathed lately and Bill had always been meticulous about his bedfellows. He climbed out again and started to walk off.

Down and Out.

"Hey, you!"

Bill was jerked by his coat collar and a policeman dragged him back to the bums under the shed. The cop kicked the sleepers on the soles of their shoes and, when they sat up, he held Bill until they searched their ragged clothes to see if Bill had taken anything from them. They didn't appear to have anything more than their tatters, Bill says.

At last the cop let Bill go. Bill then turned to him and asked: "Do you ever say your prayers?"

"What d'y' mean? Git t'll out o' here!" Bill dodged his nightstick.

"When you get home," said Bill, "you better get down on your knees and thank God, for if I'd had a gun I'd have killed you."

Bill had walked half a block when he heard the shout of the officer.

"Say, kid," he called. Bill waited. "You're a regular guy," said the policeman, and he handed Bill $5.

Bill got a room for the rest of the night and the next day he returned to the theater where his company had stranded. He asked the name of the most influential theatrical man in Chicago.

Bill told that man his story of misfortune.

"Well, I guess if a policeman could give you $5 I can afford to pay your way back to New York," the millionaire said.

One of the First.

So Bill returned to New York. When moving picture producers began looking about among actors of the legitimate stage for material for the screen, Bill Hart was one of the first of those to be starred in the films.

His ability to ride any horse that ran, his 6 feet 1 inch of raw-boned manhood, his sad, serious face, and the ease with which he could fondle a six-shooter with either hand, naturally fitted him for the rôle of cowboy and the lone gunman of the plains. He became as great an idol of American boyhood as Babe Ruth.

At the beginning of his movie career Bill was unwise as to finance. An accounting at the end of his first long contract showed that his pictures had earned $4,000,000 for the producers, while Bill had a bank account of only $8,000. However, he learned, and soon he was rated as one of the Big Four of the movies, the other members being Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, and Charlie Chaplin. Each made considerably more than a million a year.

Perhaps because of the rôles he portrayed—of the strong, silent man, the sacrificing bad man with a heart of gold—Hart was thought of as a confirmed bachelor. But to thousands of women fans throughout the country Bill Hart, known to them only on the screen, meant manhood, strength, and honor. They wrote to him. Some wrote simple, healthy letters of admiration for the rôles he played. Others wrote impassioned letters of love for the man they had never seen. Most of the letters were answered by Bill's secretary or his sister, Mamie, a soft voiced, charming, unsophisticated woman, with hair like sunlight.

There came letters from Elizabeth MacCauley, a spinster lady of 40, who taught school in Boston. Miss MacCauley had never been in love until she read Bill Hart looking out at her from the darkness of a moving picture theater. All the pentup emotions of her twoscore years burst like a spring freshet. She poured out her love in primly written notes to her hero in the west. And when she received only a formal acknowledgment from Bill's sister the teacher from Boston followed her letters to Bill's home in the Hollywood hills.

She met Bill's sister and impressed Miss Hart with her air of refinement and intelligence. She was invited to dinner to meet her hero. Miss Hart has wept bitter tears over that invitation which was to bring tragedy to Bill.

That was in 1916. If the story of Bill's life were being written for the movies, the scenarist probably would write next the scene where Bill met the girl he was to marry.

His Secret Hope.

It was while he was playing in "John Petticoats" in 1918 that Bill, no longer as young as he once was, but in his prime, nevertheless, met a beautiful blonde almost a foot shorter than himself, who played in his supporting cast. She was known to the moving picture world as Winifred Westover; although her real name was Heide, her father being Thomas C. Heide, a San Francisco engineer, from whom her mother was divorced.

Winifred had played opposite Charles Ray, Douglas Fairbanks, and De Wolf Hopper, but she herself had never ranked among the stars. While Hart had amassed a considerable fortune, Winifred had just managed to get along comfortably on what she made.

Her mother had married Claude Westover, a scenario writer and newspaperman, following her divorce from Heide, and Winifred had taken her stepfather's name.

Hart was attracted by the flaxen-haired beauty. All his life he had cherished the secret hope that some day he would have a son—a tall, blue-eyed boy whom he would teach to ride, even as he rode. He had bought a beautiful home in Beverley Hills, next to the salmon pink house where lives Wallie Reid's widow and her two children. Hart's home sits on a flower carpeted hill, from here, at night, one looks out over a sea of lights to the edge of the ocean. Way back in the hills at Newhall, Cal., is his 219 acre ranch, with its luxurious ranch house and Bill's horses, dogs, and cattle.

Bill began to think favorably of matrimony. There was some talk of his attention to Jane Novak. Mary Garden, who is still a great friend of Bill's, said she thought marriage might be a pleasant thing, were Bill to become the other party thereto. Bill was charming, in a big brother sort of way, to several women friends. But he thought of marriage only where Winifred was concerned.

Meanwhile, Miss Westover had gone to Sweden, where she played in several European pictures. She came back to New York and Bill, too shy to propose in person, wrote and asked her to marry him. They were married in Los Angeles, Dec. 7, 1921.

Bill took his bride to his big house on the hill. The floors are covered with Indian rugs. Indian pipes and tomahawks, guns and paintings of western scenes adorn the walls.

When Bill married, he set aside $5,000 for his mother-in-law and of that fund Mrs. Westover received $100 a week until long after Bill had been separated from his wife.

Dreams End in Quarrel.

Before long, Bill learned that his lifelong dream was to be fulfilled. His son was to be born. But Bill and his bride did not await the advent of their son in beautiful companionship. They quarreled about money. There was much talk of Winifred's youth. She was 28. Always there was talk of money—more money.

Miss MacCauley declared that Hart was the father of a son, born to her in a New York hospital on Sept. 3, 1917. She said she had never asked or expected marriage, but she demanded $100 monthly for the child's maintenance. She told—and in this she was corroborated by attaches of the district attorneys' office at Los Angeles—that Hart, at the time of the child's birth, had agreed to pay $50 a month for its support.

Hart, denying parenthood of any child except the son born to his wife, declared that the $50 monthly payments had been furnished by some well meaning motion picture people who had Hart's interests in mind. This provision, he said, had been agreed to without his knowledge and merely to avoid notoriety.

Confesses Fraud.

Hart retired from the screen and started an investigation. Miss MacCauley finally made a confession exonerating Hart. She admitted that she had wronged Hart by lying about him for years. Not only was it untrue that Hart was the father of the child she had produced, but she admitted the child was not her own. She had borrowed it for the occasion.

Psychiatrists, psychoanalysts, and other students of mind and matter then voiced many opinions as to the "mother complex," etc., of the school teacher who, they thought, wanted a man such as Bill Hart to become the father of her child. Bill Hart, to her, epitomized manhood. Which was all very well for every one except Big Bill.

Five months after their marriage, Winifred Hart left Bill's house and went to live with her mother. She has obtained a separation agreement.

"Cream puff," Winifred had called Bill in the days of their honeymoon. But now she called him by harsher names.

"I will stand on the summit of Mount Hollywood," declared Bill, "and defy the world to prove that I have ever done a wrong to any man or woman."

By the terms of his settlement with his wife, Bill gave Mrs. Hart $103,000, in a trust fund of which she has control. She also receives $1,200 a month. A separate trust fund of $100,000 Hart settled upon his unborn son.

Idolizes Bill Jr.

William S. Hart Jr. was born Sept. 6, 1922. But, contrary to the belief expressed at that time, Hart and his wife did not become reconciled. Hart visited his son when little Bill was a week old. He came away with tears in his eyes and tales of the "most wonderful boy that ever was born." Big Bill idolizes his son. He seldom sees him, for the baby lives with his mother.

One of the terms of the separation settlement was that Mrs. Hart agreed never to use Hart's name on the screen and to devote herself to the rearing of little Bill. Recently Mrs. Hart started court proceeding in an effort to return to the screen under the name of Winifred Westover Hart.

After Hart and his wife had separated William S. Hart was suddenly branded as the father of an illegitimate child. The accuser was Miss Elizabeth MacCauley, the spinster schoolma'am from Boston, of whom he first heard back in 1916.

From Winifred Westover's past emerged her father, Thomas C. Heide, to say a word of good for Bill Hart. Mr. Heide said Bill Hart's case, like his own, "was a case of too much mother-in-law. It began with me," he said. "It runs in the family—too much mother-in-law."

Bill Hart returned to the screen after Miss MacCauley made her confession. And then he allowed the series of three books, which he had written for boys of America, to be released for publication. This he had refused to do until his name was again clean. He has recently published another book, "A Fighter of Flames," which centers around the figure of Patrick Henry.

Bill lives with his sister in his house on the hill, which is filled with relics from the old west that is gone.

He is a lonely, unhappy man, who wants his son. He is a good friend and a strong enemy. He will show you the silver studded saddle on which he had ridden his good hoss, the pinto pony, whose name, before the war, was Fritz. He has put the saddle away now, in a place of honor on the landing of his staircase. There it is to remain until Little Bill is ready to use it.

"When I think of my boy I nearly go dippy," he drawls.

And most likely you find a lump in your throat.

WILLIAM S. HART, HERO OF THE WESTERNS.

Bill Hart's Waiting for His Son to Grow Up

A sad, silent man lives in a big hilltop house decked with Indian relics and paraphernalia of the wild west. He is Bill Hart, two-gun man of the films.

Bill is waiting for his son to grow up. His wrecked marriage has left him lonely and unhappy. The cowboy hero idolized by so many women could sing his own song of sorrows if he would.

Actually Bill isn't a wild westerner at all. He was born in Newburgh, N. Y., but spent adventurous years in the old west.

ART AND ARTISTS

Wealth of Beauty in the Institute's Loan Collections

By Eleanor Jewett.

THERE was never a summer as rich in valuable loan collections as is this, in the galleries of the Art Institute. The new Hutchinson wing has its remarkable anonymous collection consisting of eight masterpieces, a Corot, a Cuyp, a Frans Hals, a Botticelli and the rest, described at length in last week's column. The east wing galleries on the second floor of the museum have their wealth of gorgeous paintings, too. The modern French water colors lent by Mr. Ryerson are a poem in themselves, and a greater volume of interest and beauty is read in the loan collections of Cyrus H. McCormick Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Francis Neilson, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan.

The paintings from the Logan collection are for the most part large canvases, impressive even before the signature of the painter is read. There is the "Man with Ruff" by Anthony Van Dyck, a portrait that is one of the rarest and most valuable to be found in any collection. The qualities in painting that made Van Dyck famous are evidenced in this canvas. Note the wonderful ruff, the marvelous hands—no need to ask why Van Dyck is one of the old masters.

The "Vaches au Patyrage" by Troyon is a magnificent landscape, restful and lovely. Splendid is the "Dutch Sailors Wading to Shore" by Israels. The sea and sky are a stormy gray, two burly sailors fight the hard running tide, carrying the huge anchor of the ship, glimpsed behind them, to its anchorage on the sand. There are —having happened upon Israels' name the fact may as well be inserted here as later—more splendid paintings by this master in the assembled summer exhibits than are generally to be seen together. They afford an excellent opportunity to study him at his best.

The adjacent wall has an interior, "Churchwarden," by him that shows to the greatest advantage his power of depicting the Dutch character. It is a fascinating room he ushers us into, and a fascinating couple who wait us there. The elderly man is smoking thoughtfully on a long, clay pipe, busily writing the while in a huge volume with a goose quill pen. The old wife knits on her side of the table, looking prim and precise with her unwrinkled dress and close drawn cap.

Then, in the Neilson collection, there are to be seen the familiar child study, "Wading," the little boy carrying his little sister on his back, and another type of painting by Israels, "The Study of a Dog," a wide awake study, and a large canvas, "Old Age," a remarkable portrait of an old man, staff in hand, sitting, rather feeble, in his chair.

To return to the Logan collection, th "Landscape with Windmills" by J. h. Weissenbruch is a lovely, melancholy thing. The "Farm Scene," by Dupre is a dark, romantic, French countryside, the cottages with thatched roofs. Another romantic landscape is the "La Mare aux Fees" by Diaz, but the sunkissed, rough white trunks of the trees mark it for his without chance of mistake.

A handsome, spoiled boy is seen in the portrait of "Henry Clive" by John Opie. Can he be the Clive who in India, as written of in the much beloved Henry of our youth, was such an adventurous soldier and great leader?

A splendid example of the emotionless painting of Anton Mauve is found in "Man Plowing." The gray day, the gray fields, the suppressed, flattened horse and stocky peasant—you can fairly feel the sense of "what's the use?" exude from the canvas. The monotony of the daily round that has been one of the curses of the country is forcefully shown to you here.

A modern marine, "Gloucester" by Frederick Waugh, brings a welcome salt breath of freedom to your nostrils, and shows you again the rugged embraces forced upon the Maine coast by the turbulant Atlantic.

A lovely Rousseau, though a trifle dark, is the "Clearing, Fontainebleau Forest." More to our taste is the neighboring "Landscape with Cattle" by Van Marcke. This is really a splendid canvas. The cattle are fine outstanding animals, and the introduction of the boy on his pony, the guardian dog, and a petulant, bearded goat add to the interest of the group in its setting of wild, rather lonely, country.

The "Flock of Sheep with Shepherd" by Jacque is not to be easily forgotten. The shepherd is a young peasant woman who knits busily at a sock as she stands in the center of her flock of white charges that crop the grass lingeringly as they move aimlessly on. The sheep dog stands a little away from the flock, looking ahead from a bit of high ground for possible danger.

Making another dash into /times more modern, there is the portrait of "Mrs. Munroe" by Louis Betts, a decorative portrait with, after a fashion, all its good points on the surface.

Four little, in point of size, masterpieces grouped along one wall are "Man with Steel Gorget" by Rembrandt, "Landscape" by Corot, "Landscape" by Daubigny [and one I was forgetting by Weissenbruch], and "Cattle Fording Stream" by Dupré.

In the Mr. and Mrs. Francis Neilson collection there are possibly a few more American painters represented. The "Landscape in Connecticut," by A. H. Wyant is a fascinating lovely bit of painting. Near it is "Rain" by J. Francis Murphy and another Murphy, "Autumnal Notes," does not do anything to contradict the effect of sentiment in his landscape. Both are exquisite pieces of painting, but the country is seen with the eye of a doting parent who has no fault to find with his solitary offspring.

"Capri" by John Singer Sargent keeps us still at home, as does his effective charcoal portrait of Eleanora Duse. Frank Duveneck, American sculptured figure "Age of Bronze" —Fantin-Latour with two drawings of nude figures—these account for France. Then, of course, there are the three already mentioned Israels and, besides, a marvelous Jan Steen, "The Love Sick Woman."

This, after a fashion, does justice to the paintings. In addition there is a case filled with small original marbles of the Greek period—a standing Aphrodite, a torso of Venus, head of Young Dionysus, a life size female head, a standing courtesan, and a small Greek vase. Modern sculpture is represented in the collection by a sun dial and cycle of life by Paul Manship, two statuettes by Mario Korbel, "Baroness Ruth Von Scholly" by Isabel Neilson, and the "Age of Bronze" by Rodin.

In the print rooms of the Art Institute, the summer exhibits of eighteenth and early nineteenth century English mezzotints are claiming serious attention. The most famous examples of the best known engravers in this medium may be found there, including the work of Green, McArdle, the Wards, Smith, and others. About sixty mezzotints are in the group.

Prints of Ornament of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, of the Italian and Northern schools, lent by Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer, are also on view. These prints were made use of in their profession by goldsmiths, silversmiths and metal workers of that period.

Leon Kroll, the well known New York painter, has been engaged to teach life and portrait painting in the Art Institute Art school this coming season. The school year opens Sept. 29.

"Man with Steel Gorget" by Rembrandt is in the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan loan collection of famous paintings, to be seen in the east wing galleries of the Art institute during the summer months. These summer exhibits close Sept. 2.

O, Don't You Remember—

O, don't you remember the barn loft, Ben Bolt,
Where the beams stretched invitin' and high?
To get our necks broke seemed to us but a joke
And at least we would all have a try.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

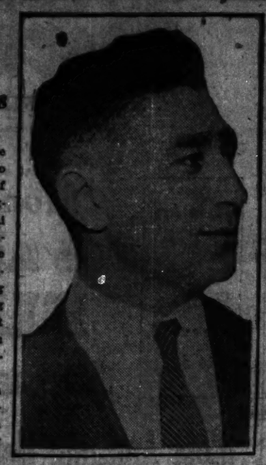
North Side Jewish Temple to Begin Sunday Services

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

AN innovation among north side Jewish congregations in Chicago is announced by the trustees of Immanuel temple, 701 Buckingham place. Following the lead of Sinai congregation on the south side, Immanuel temple will soon inaugurate services on Sunday morning, in addition to the regular Friday evening services. The exact date of beginning the Sunday services is not fixed, but it is thought that the date will be in connection with or soon after the Jewish holidays, which begin Sept. 29.

Dr. Felix A. Levy, who has been rabbi of Immanuel temple for seventeen years, is in hearty accord with the trustees in the Sunday opening plan. He has received assurances from many Jews that a Sunday morning Jewish service on the north side would be appreciated.

The officers of Immanuel temple are: President, Samuel Welsberg; vice president, Morris R. Jacob; recording secretary, Louis Sternheim; financial secretary, J. Harold Selz; treasurer, Hugo Munzer.



REV. SOLOMON B. FREEHOF, D. D.

Dr. Solomon B. Freehof is the new rabbi of the Kehilath Anshe Mayriv congregation who will serve as the associate rabbi with Dr. Tobias Schanfarber, who has been sole rabbi for twenty-four years and was elected rabbi for life at the same meeting of the congregation which elected Dr. Freehof. Dr. Schanfarber has not been made rabbi emeritus, nor is Dr. Freehof assistant rabbi, but both rabbis are associates, active, and will devote all their time to the service of the congregation which will dedicate its new temple at 50th street and Drexel boulevard Sept. 5-7.

Dr. Freehof will preach his initial sermon on Saturday morning, Sept. 6. The temple is of white stone fronted with massive pillars, and cost $350,000. The congregation is the oldest Jewish congregation in Chicago, having been organized on the site of the present federal and postoffice building in 1847.

Dr. Freehof was born in London, Eng., in 1892. He graduated with Phi Beta Kappa honors and A. B. degree from the University of Cincinnati in 1914. He graduated from the Hebrew Union college, Cincinnati, in 1915, and received the degree of doctor of divinity from the same institution in 1922. He served as professor of liturgy at the Hebrew Union college from his graduation until the present time. He served in France as lieutenant chaplain in 1918-1919. The congregation has adopted the union prayer book, which is regarded by them as a step of progress.

The Rev. W. J. Weaver has become priest in charge at St. Andrew's Episcopal church, Evanston. He succeeds the Rev. H. B. Browne.

Tabernacle Baptist church, 3309 West Monroe street, has called the Rev. Harold L. Proppe as assistant pastor. The appointment indicates the successful expansion of a church that was regarded for several years as a field of peculiar difficulty. The congregation has doubled and the Sunday school membership trebled in the last eight months since Dr. S. J. Reid became pastor.

The thirtieth annual Bible conference at Winona Lake, Ind., will begin next Friday and close on Aug. 31. There will be speakers from England, Scotland, all sections of America, representing the Baptist, Disciples, Methodist Episcopal, Methodist Episcopal, South; Methodist Protestant, Presbyterian, and independent churches.

The Fundamentals ministers' camp meeting will be held at Cedar Lake, Ind., beginning Aug. 25 and continuing to Sept. 1. The Rev. William McCarrel, president of the Chicago Fundamentals Ministers' union, the Rev. Isaac Page, China Inland mission, and Thomas E. Stephens, Chicago, will be the speakers on the evening day. The Rev. Charles F. Fields, president of the Illinois Fundamentals' association, will speak on Sunday, Aug. 31. The closing address, Monday evening, Sept. 1, will be by Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, Winona Lake, Ind.

Dr. Duncan C. Miller, associate minister of the Ravenswood Presbyterian church, will speak at the Ravenswood Outdoor church at the Wilson Avenue Y. M. C. A., 1725 Wilson avenue, on the subject, "An Old Soldier's Message on War." The service is from 7 to 8 p. m. Dr. Milner was wounded at the battle of Chickamauga in the civil war.

The Seventh Day Adventists of the Chicago conference will hold a conference and camp meeting on the Broadview college campus on Twenty-second street beginning next Thursday and closing on Aug. 31. Tents have been erected for residence and meeting purposes. Elder John W. Christian is president of the Chicago conference.

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of the Chicago area of the Methodist Episcopal church will hold his first annual conference at Brilliant, Wis., beginning next Wednesday. He will be in Chicago on Aug. 26, and will hold the northwest German conference at Le Mars, Ia., beginning Aug. 27. Bishop Hughes will hold the central Illinois conference at Normal, Ill., and Bishop W. F. McDowell of Washington, D. C., formerly of Chicago, will hold the Illinois conference at Bloomington, Ill., both on the same date, Sept. 10, and in closely adjoining cities. Bishop Hughes will be the principal speaker at the first union ministers' meeting in Chicago on Sept. 29, and will hold the Rock River conference at Sterling, Ill., beginning Wednesday, Oct. 1.

The children's crusade of mercy for the relief of the orphans of the near east will continue the selling of the life saving bonds at $1 each until the relief ship sails from New York on Sept. 6 with Jackie Coogan and party aboard. The prize winners among the Illinois children in selling bonds will be given a free trip to New York City to see Jackie and the ship start on their errand of relief.

The corner stone of Redeemer Lutheran church, at 53d avenue and 23d street, will be laid this afternoon at 2:30. The church will cost $80,000. The Rev. Louis Millies, the pastor, will be assisted at the corner stone ceremony by the Rev. Leo Schmidke and the Rev. Paul Kluender.

The corner stone of St. Gregory's Catholic church, at Gregory and North Paulina streets, will be laid today at 4 o'clock. The Rt. Rev. E. F. Hoban, auxiliary bishop of Chicago, will officiate. Preceding the ceremony there will be a parade by members of the parish, headed by St. Mary's Training School band, starting at Bryn Mawr avenue, at North Paulina street, and acting as escort to the bishop. The pastor is the Rev. M. Klasen, who organized the parish in 1904. The ground for the new church was broken on April 8. It will be a brick edifice, with stone trimmings, of English Gothic design. The interior will have solid stone pillars and six shrines.

His eminence Cardinal Mundelein will dedicate the new All Saints cemetery at Des Plaines, Ill., at 10:30 a. m., on Labor day, Sept. 1. The cardinal will preach, and mass will be celebrated. The cemetery is designed to take the place of Calvary cemetery, which is now fully occupied except for those already in possession of lots.

Changes in the appointments of Catholic clergy are announced by the chancery office as follows: The Rev. Francis J. Shea from Our Lady of Lourdes to St. Thomas of Aquinas; the Rev. W. A. Mahoney, from St. Anne's to Our Lady of Lourdes, the Rev. Richard Byrne from St. Thomas of Aquinas to St. Bridget's; the Rev. T. A. Sychowski, from Holy Rosary, North Chicago, to Holy Innocent's; the Rev. T. Kendziora from St. Joseph's, Argo, Ill., to Holy Rosary, North Chicago; the Rev. F. Kachnowski, from Holy Innocent's to St. Stanislaus, Posen, Ill.

The Rev. James S. Ainslie, pastor of Argyle Community church, 5018, Kenmore avenue, has returned from his vacation on the Pacific coast, and will preach today on the subject, "Keynotes for Returning Activities."

The Rev. Alfred D. Kolkebeck, priest in charge of three churches in Illinois, has accepted the appointment as assistant at the Church of the Atonement, Episcopal, Kenmore and Ardmore avenues, and will begin his duties on Sept. 1. The Rev. F. S. Fleming is rector.

Your Favorite Pen in a Gay Jacket

Put the drab but most useful fountain pen into an attractive garment, and you have something that is ornamental to the pocketbook or to one's pet secretary or spinet desk. And that is just what has been accomplished.

Of course, there have been expensive gold and silver pens on the market for some time, but there is now obtainable your favorite model in a gayly decorated jacket. The pen remains the same, but its black or brown surface is painted in the prettiest and brightest of designs and colors. It is even possible to find them with cigaret holders and cases to match, so that one has an artistic little set of smoking and writing utensils.

Bee-keeping is an ideal occupation for women, according to Mrs. Sheba C. Hargreaves, who has attained wonderful success with the honeymakers.

Using a spinning wheel more than a century old, Mrs. John D. Cole of Anniston, Ala., plants, hoes, gathers, spins and makes her own cotton into clothes.

Mrs. Mary McCabe, mother of Bill McCabe, of the Atlanta (Ga.) baseball team, is generally referred to as the "mother of baseball," because of her proud record of not having missed a ball game in five years.

The Daughters of the American Revolution now claim a membership of nearly 150,000.

Unlike many women voters in the United States, the women of Hawaii do not favor prohibition.

In New Guinea wives are paid for with pigs, the husband making the payments in annual installments.

As plumbing inspector of the village of Kenilworth, Ill., Mrs. Julia E. McKenna holds a unique position.

THINK—

Is it the first cost or length of service?

WHAT good is any article if it does not wear or give the service expected of it? Yet, how can you know, unless you have a positive knowledge of the materials and workmanship of that article, whether it will give long service or not?

The responsibility of buying only good, dependable home-needs is ours. We have the knowledge gained during the experience of 59 years. We know how furniture should be built—we know woods and finishes.

Our knowledge is your safeguard. And to convince you that we do know furniture—that we offer for sale only dependable home-needs, we attach to every article a metal guarantee tag, illustration of which appears immediately below.

Surely you can feel free of any doubt. The length of service of any article purchased from us is our responsibility.

It is self-evident that the value of any article depends not on price but on service. Isn't the knowledge of guaranteed quality a big factor in our appeal for your patronage? Think—is it the first cost or length of service?

MAKE MONEY
SELLING REAL ESTATE.

HERE IS A JOB THAT WOULD SATISFY ANY MAN.
I know what you are looking for: I know how hard it is for a man to find just what he wants in the way of a selling position—and the kind of pay that he wants to go with it. The position that I want to tell you about has everything that is necessary to make a man perfectly comfortable and happy. The pay is big and the position is of the work is tremendously appealing; and we count our prospects by the thousands. You will command a handsome income, which, of course, you will require if you consider yourself even a fairly good salesman. The firm you will be connected with is very large, doing millions in volume annually. The position is not mechanical. You have plenty of freedom, and you are practically your own boss. Lack of experience in our line will not disqualify you for the position if you can show that you have had general business experience. The man who owns this business is a wealthy Chicagoan. He has a reputation for being a livewire and is a good man to work for. He spends money and I will arrange an appointment so that you will see the right man. MR. WARNER, Rm. 1101, 116 S. FISHERMEN & HUNTERS,

Read this: Three friends roamed the country for a good hunting and fishing spot. We found the spot, a paradise for hunting and fishing, on a lake one mile long, without a shanty or boat, and the finest beach ever! Lake makes three arms with large mouth bass and pickerel. We have been going there a few years, and desired to buy a spot for ourselves. Owner would not sell any except to us. We purchased this spot, but it is too much for us and have decided to plat a few lots on the lake, with its fine beach; see plot; 40 miles in Michigan just a pleasant night's ride from Chicago; a day's drive by auto over fine roads. If you want to get away from it all, write or call. McCabe, Room 803, 11 S. La Salle-st., Chicago.

FACTORY SAMPLES OR Furniture and Rugs of the Better Grades at Prices
25% TO 30%
LESS THAN RETAIL

Factories we represent have instructed us to immediately dispose of all our samples displayed at the new Furniture Mart.

Ordinarily, we do not cater to retail trade, but in order to move our goods rapidly we find it necessary to open our display rooms to the public.

These goods that are displayed before retail dealers are, obviously, of better construction and finish than the average stock.

Among the living room furniture is everything that could be desired in the latest designs in coverings of mohairs, tapestries and damasks.

Exquisite dining room and bedroom furniture in walnut and mahogany and many odd pieces too numerous to mention that would beautify the home.

We will appreciate an opportunity to show what we have to offer. You will be under no obligation whatever to buy anything.

Our prices, we know, will surprise you. Considering the quality of the merchandise, they are exceptionally low.

Rarely does a person see our stock and leave without making a purchase, which is conclusive proof that our merchandise is as represented.

An early visit will be to your advantage. We are sure to discover of our samples quickly at these prices.

TAXES, TARIFF CHIEF ISSUES IN CAMPAIGN

BY ARTHUR W. CRAWFORD.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 16.—[Special.]—Acceptance speeches of President Coolidge and John W. Davis, the presidential candidates of the two major parties, have served to center campaign discussions on half a dozen principal issues.

Domestic issues overshadow those concerning international relations, although both aspirants had a good deal to say in their initial addresses on American relations with Europe.

The domestic issues revolve around the tariff, taxation, economy, and honesty in government and the plight of agriculture.

Both Ignore Prohibition.

Prohibition is not an issue so far as the two leading candidates are concerned, both having declared for enforcement of the law as it now stands.

Neither President Coolidge nor Mr. Davis concerned himself with what Senator Robert M. La Follette, the independent aspirant for the presidency, holds to be the one big issue before the American people, namely, far reaching control by private monopoly.

The honesty in government issue will be made much of by Mr. Davis and the other Democratic orators. President Coolidge will yield nothing to the Democrats in his determination to "resist corruption in office," as he phrases it, but with the Republicans now in office and responsible for those officials who were the targets in the investigations by senate committees, the G. O. P. is on the defensive.

Differ on Tax Schedules.

Both President Coolidge and Mr. Davis declared for further tax reduction and tax reform. The President indicated his intention not to recede from his advocacy of the Mellon plan, including a greater reduction in surtaxes on large incomes.

While Mr. Davis did not go into this phase of the tax problem in his opening speech, Senator Walsh [Dem., Mont.], in his speech at the notification ceremonies, showed that the Democrats propose to stress their successful sponsorship of the Simmons normal and surtax schedules, which were framed on the theory of giving the greatest reductions to those least able to pay and the least to those with large incomes. In urging a further reduction in surtax rates, President Coolidge went beyond the declarations of the Republican platform, which dealt with the subject in general terms.

Those Republicans who were not entirely in accord with the policy of President Coolidge and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon in attempting to force through the original Mellon tax plan without modification have taken considerable satisfaction in noting that the President refrained from voicing some of his previous criticisms of the tax bill as passed, and took credit for a saving of $1,000,000 a day to the people through "the bill which I signed."

Views on Tariff.

The Coolidge and Davis speeches have sharply defined the tariff issue, the President defending the Fordney-McCumber law and championing the policy of protection of American industries, and the Democratic candidate denouncing its "exorbitant rates and discriminatory provisions."

Both candidates emphasized their purpose to do everything possible for agriculture, but it was noteworthy that neither advocated measures designed to bring about an artificial control of prices, such as the McNary-Haugen bill. More organization, cooperation and diversification were held by President Coolidge to be the chief needs of agriculture, which will obtain its fundamental relief, according to his view, from the working out of economic laws in a natural way. Mr. Davis declared for development of cooperative marketing and reasonable transportation rates, and especially attacked the present tariff law as working to the injury of the farmer.

In attempting to win the farmer vote the Republicans will be in the position of pointing with pride to high duties on farm products imposed by the Fordney-McCumber law, while the Democrats will attempt to prove that the efforts to help the farmer by the tariff are as Mr. Davis declared, "the baldest political false pretense."

Cal Hits La Follette Ideas.

President Coolidge, in opposing any general extension of government ownership and control, hit on one question on which he will join issues particularly with the La Follette forces.

By nominating Mr. Davis the Democrats have a standard bearer who espouses the Wilsonian league of nations in a much more enthusiastic manner than is relished by many members of the party.

Mr. Davis, in asserting his refusal to consider the league of nations a closed incident, showed that he probably will take occasion many times during the campaign to discuss the subject, although realizing that there is no possibility of favorable action on the league by the senate until the personnel of that body is radically changed.

President Coolidge's position as reiterated in his speech is that the nation must proceed on the principle of cooperation with Europe to such extent as is possible, without becoming involved in its political controversies and entanglements.

Advocacy of American adhesion to the world court by both candidates might give an impression of a greater degree of unanimity among members of the two old parties than actually is the case. That the Democrats will try to show that the Republicans are not as strongly for the proposition as might appear on the surface was evident from Mr. Davis' statement that he favors the world court "not merely for campaign purposes or as an avenue of escape from consideration of larger questions."

The Coolidge foreign policy involved continued unofficial participation by the United States in attempts to solve European problems, while Mr. Davis would have this country officially taking part.

OAK PARK PLANS WORLD'S FINEST GRAMMARSCHOOL

Famous Old Lowell to Be Torn Down.

BY AL CHASE.

Oak Park's famous old Lowell school, one of its most ancient educational edifices, on Park place, with grounds extending from Lake street to North boulevard, is gradually to be replaced by what is expected will be one of the finest and most modern grammar schools in the world.

Although work already has started on the new $450,000 group of buildings, the old school will not be demolished for some time. In fact the new structures will be built around two sides of the old building and put into operation before it is torn down.

'Will Face on Lake Street.

The new Lowell school was designed by Holmes & Flynn, Chicago architects, whose educational architectural work is internationally known. They have turned the new school around so the main entrance will be on Lake street instead of on Park place.

The new school will have an elaborate kindergarten department with a fireplace, a fish pool, and juvenile decorations; an 800 seat assembly hall, twenty-five class rooms, domestic science rooms, manual training rooms, an art gallery, and a gymnasium.

Aw! Gee! That's Tuff!

Although swimming is one of the important things that every boy and girl should learn, for some reason the school board has failed to provide for a swimming pool. This seems especially unfortunate in view of the fact that Oak Park is miles from any Lake Michigan bathing beach. There is plenty of space, however, if the school board changes its mind later on.

It is understood that the building is being laid out so that in the event Oak Park adopts the junior high school idea, which so far has been frowned on in that suburb, it readily can be put into operation at the Lowell.

The new school at the south end will have space for the administrative offices of the board of education, as well as an office for the superintendent of schools.

START ON CAR LINE FROM 112TH TO FORD PLANT

Bloom Township High Buys 11 Acre Athletic Field

The Bloom Township High school has acquired approximately eleven acres at 15th and Chicago road, in Chicago Heights, for $19,348, to be used for an athletic field.

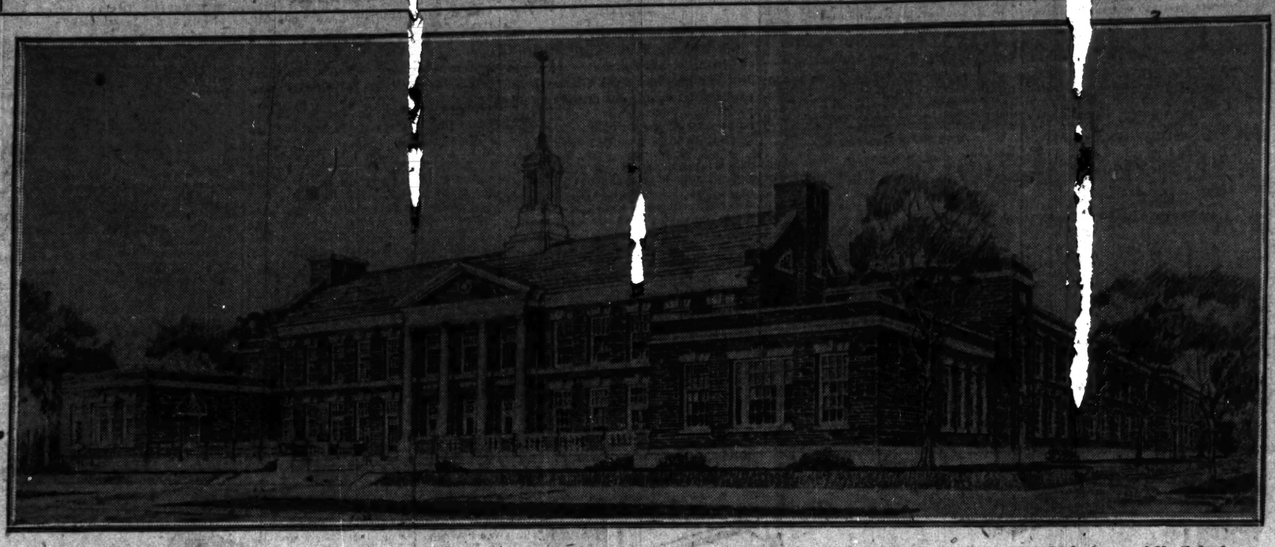
STATE STREET LEASE.

The London Shoe company has sold its lease on the store at 217 South State to Wolock & Bauer, shoe dealers, through Hetter, Wells & Beatty, Inc.

New $450,000 Lowell Grammar School—To Replace Oak Park Landmark



Holmes & Flynn designed the above new Lowell grammar school now being erected in Oak Park to replace the famous old Lowell at Lake street, Park place, and North boulevard. It is in the New England colonial style of architecture and will be of tapestry brick of various shades, with artificial stone trim and slate roof, and will be fireproof. All the cement beams in corridors will be stained so that a wooden beamed ceiling effect will be obtained. The corridor walls will be of brick. Completion date is set for September, 1925. More is told in another column.

STRAUS SURVEY FINDS SKILLED WAGE SCALE FIRM

Building Materials Also Steady.

Wage scales for skilled craftsmen in the building trades have held generally firm during the last three months according to the national building survey of S. W. Straus & Co., made public last night. In many cities advances have been accorded the workers since spring, the survey states. There are, of course, isolated cases where reductions have been made, but these have been confined largely to small centers where operations have been light.

"The building material market showed a firmer tone during July than at any time during the last three months," the survey continues. "Most grades of lumber were stabilized at June prices, although many classes of southern pine registered material advances. While the decline in structural steel continued, it was not so marked as in June. Common brick was slightly lower in some middle Atlantic cities. Other starting materials were unchanged except in Atlanta, where some advances were recorded.

Bonuses Largely Eliminated.

"The payment of bonuses has been quite largely eliminated, although this does not indicate a reduction in labor costs, as the bonuses have been absorbed in the advancing wage scales.

"During the last three months there have been wage increases ranging from 2½ to 12½ cents per hour granted to the principal building trades in Kansas City, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Baltimore, Buffalo, Louisville, and Des Moines. Other cities in which certain wage increases have been granted, mostly to plasterers, bricklayers, painters, electricians, and carpenters, were Chicago, Dayton, Columbus, Milwaukee, Atlanta, Shreveport, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Youngstown, New Haven, Johnstown, Pa.; Erie, Cleveland, Houston, Birmingham, and Sharon, Pa. In Chicago steamfitters announced a raise to $1.87½ an hour, effective July 1.

Common Labor Rate Higher.

"The common labor rate for the nation, as applied to pick and shovel men, was 58 cents for July, as against 54 cents for the same month last year.

"Bricklayers in the leading cities are receiving from $1 to $1.75; carpenters, 70 cents to $1.60; plasterers, 90 cents to $1.75; hodcarriers, 50 cents to $1.25; structural ironworkers, 65 cents to $1.87½; plumbers, 70 cents to $1.50; electricians, 70 cents to $1.50; hoisting engineers, 62½ cents to $1.87½; common laborers, 25 cents to $1.10."

$164,000 FLAT DEAL.

The store and flat building at the southeast corner of Garfield and Ashland, lot 100x145, was leased by Thomas Carey to Miss Justine Cornell for an indicated $164,000. A. C. Cronheim, secretary of the Bellmore State bank, was attorney for the buyer.

SYNDICATE BUYS 80 ACRES.

Attorney Frank G. Marshall took title for a syndicate to ninety acres at the southeast corner of Roosevelt and Manheim roads, two miles west of Hines hospital, at an indicated $102,500, from Ralph Adams. George F. Nixon & Co. were brokers.

Mancel T. Clark Residence—Near Indian Hill Club

Above is the $75,000 residence being built for Mancel T. Clark on Locust street, directly west of the Indian Hill Golf club, from plans by Edwin H. Clark. It will be of red brick, with slate roof, and will have seventeen rooms. The property in the locality of this home is controlled by a syndicate formed of the present owners in that vicinity, who sell only in tracts of eight or ten acres or more, with restrictions.

PLAN FIVE STORY FURNITURE BLDG. ON MILWAUKEE

Barnett and Joseph Farell have bought the southeast corner of Milwaukee and Spaulding avenues, 118x125, from John C. Ruetinger and Alex S. Schulman, for a reported $116,000, through Michael Flichel & Co. It is understood they will erect a five story building to be leased to a furniture company. Charles P. Schwartz was attorney for the sellers.

KARLTON FARM SOLD: $75,000.

The Karlton farm, one mile west of Wadsworth, and one of the show places of Lake county, has been sold by William R. Linzie of Flint, Mich., to Graves Whitmire for a reported $75,000, subject to $46,000. S. S. Berry represented both parties.

LOUIS DEUTSCH PLANS NEW CAFE ON DEARBORN

REALTORS TO HOLD ANNUAL OUTING AT GRAND BEACH, MICH.

James W. Belanger of Chicago and Glen Ellyn, the intellectual looking gentleman directly to the right of these words of wisdom, announces that after long and studious search throughout practically the entire middle west—at least that part which lies within a hundred miles of Chicago—he has come to the decision that Grand Beach, Mich., will be the most delectable, salubrious and satisfying place for realtors to whang the little white ball, splash through the gladsome waves and tuck away a big dinner.

JAMES W. BELANGER.

Mr. Belanger's committee, on which are Buckingham Chandler and W. P. Heyn, also announces that the invasion of Michigan will take place on Tuesday, Sept. 16. Grand Beach, which is sixty miles from Chicago, was visited by several hundred realtors on their annual outings in 1923 and 1923.

AT THIRTY-FIVE MILES AN HOUR, the photographer solemnly avers, this stirring stunt was staged on Lake Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, as an incident of Coeur d'Alene's annual regatta. The water nymph in the case is Miss Mirth McArthur, who officiated as princess of the festival, and the gentleman so favorably situated for playing her a mean trick if he lets go is Bert Tardy. The contraption on which they are poised looks more like a tub than a surf board, doesn't it?

VICTOR AND VANQUISHED—Miss Helen Wills (at the left), the youthful California tennis marvel, smiles in her moment of greatest triumph—the winning of the Olympic women's singles championship at Colombes, France. Also, smiling, though a bit languid, seemingly, in the matter of handclasp, is Mlle. Emmenne Viasto, the French girl of Greek parentage who was Miss Wills' opponent in the finals.

SECRETARY HUGHES IN LONDON—Various dignitaries, royal and otherwise, assembled to honor the head of the American state department at a dinner given him by the Pilgrims during the meeting in England of the American and British Bar associations. Seated behind the table, beginning at the extreme left, are Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon, the Prince of Wales, Secretary Hughes, the Duke of Connaught, Frank B. Kellogg, United States ambassador to Great Britain; John R. Clynes, Lord Privy Seal in Britain's labor government, and, next but one, Owen D. Young, much talked of as "agent-general of reparations" for Europe. (Photograph from Keystone)

ROYALTY OUT FOR A RIDE—The Princesses Beatrice and Marie Christine, daughters of the king and queen of Spain, dropped over to London recently to see the sights. Among the allurements that diverted them were the elephants at the zoo—uncommonly amiable monsters which have been organized into a regular transportation system, with loading platforms and everything. Here are the princesses embarking.

GARIBALDIS STILL MARCH IN ITALY—These are men of the third generation, grandsons of the Giuseppe Garibaldi who was one of the nation's most illustrious patriots. They are seen here following the coffin of their father, Gen. Ricciotti Garibaldi, who died last month and was buried with full military honors in Rome.

The Modern Electric Home built by Ryan Brothers and Sather in River Forest, Illinois

Careful laboratory tests make sure that every carload of slate flakes from the Richardson quarries is not only permanent in color but also proportioned in size so as to seal the roof securely against weather and fire hazards

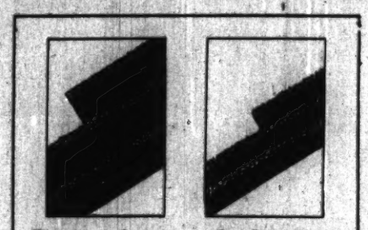
Carefully tested gems of slate give your roof this lasting beauty

A wholly new roofing color in slate, found only in the Richardson quarries of Georgia, makes possible for your home a new and lasting beauty.

This new color, weathered brown, gives you the mellow richness of November meadows, permanently fixed in flakes of slate. Careful laboratory tests make sure that these flakes of slate not only are permanent in color but also are proportioned in size so as to seal the shingle securely against weather and fire hazards.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof

This, however, is but one example of the beauty secured in the Richardson Multicrome Roof. Wholly new, for instance, is the opal effect secured from shingles on which weathered brown and jade green slate flakes are combined in endless variety. And a bronze mosaic effect, similarly formed with weathered brown and tile red. Many other effects are possible—one to please every taste.



The 50% greater thickness of Richardson Multicrome Roofs adds beauty of texture and years of endurance. Closely overlapping slate flakes further protect the sturdy Viskalt-saturated base against weather and fire hazards

The Multicrome Roof is built of Richardson Super-Giant Shingles, extra large, extra heavy—to give greater beauty, longer endurance. The high quality of its inner materials, too, assures lasting beauty for this roof. Its base is sturdy Richardson felt, for fifty years recognized as the best. And the waterproofing is Viskalt—unusually durable because 99.8% bitumen, especially vacuum-processed.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof represents the maximum roof value at a moderate price. It is economical to lay and equally good for new or over-the-old-roof jobs.

Prove the facts yourself

Go to your nearest dealer in lumber, hardware or building material and ask to see the color combinations in Richardson Multicrome Roofs. Also ask him to show you the reasons for their unusual endurance.

Meanwhile send for our beautiful new booklet, Roofs of Distinction, showing the exclusive color combinations of Richardson slate surfacing. Or ask for our booklet, Roofing on the Farm. Mail the coupon now.

STATELIEST of towering crags, in the opinion of many wanderers, is the Matterhorn, shown herewith in a new photographic study made from the outskirts of one of the many villages which lie in the valleys round about. This great peak, 14,780 feet high, stands guard over the dismayingly beautiful borderland between Switzerland and Italy.
(Photograph copyright by Burton Holmes, from Ewing Galloway.)

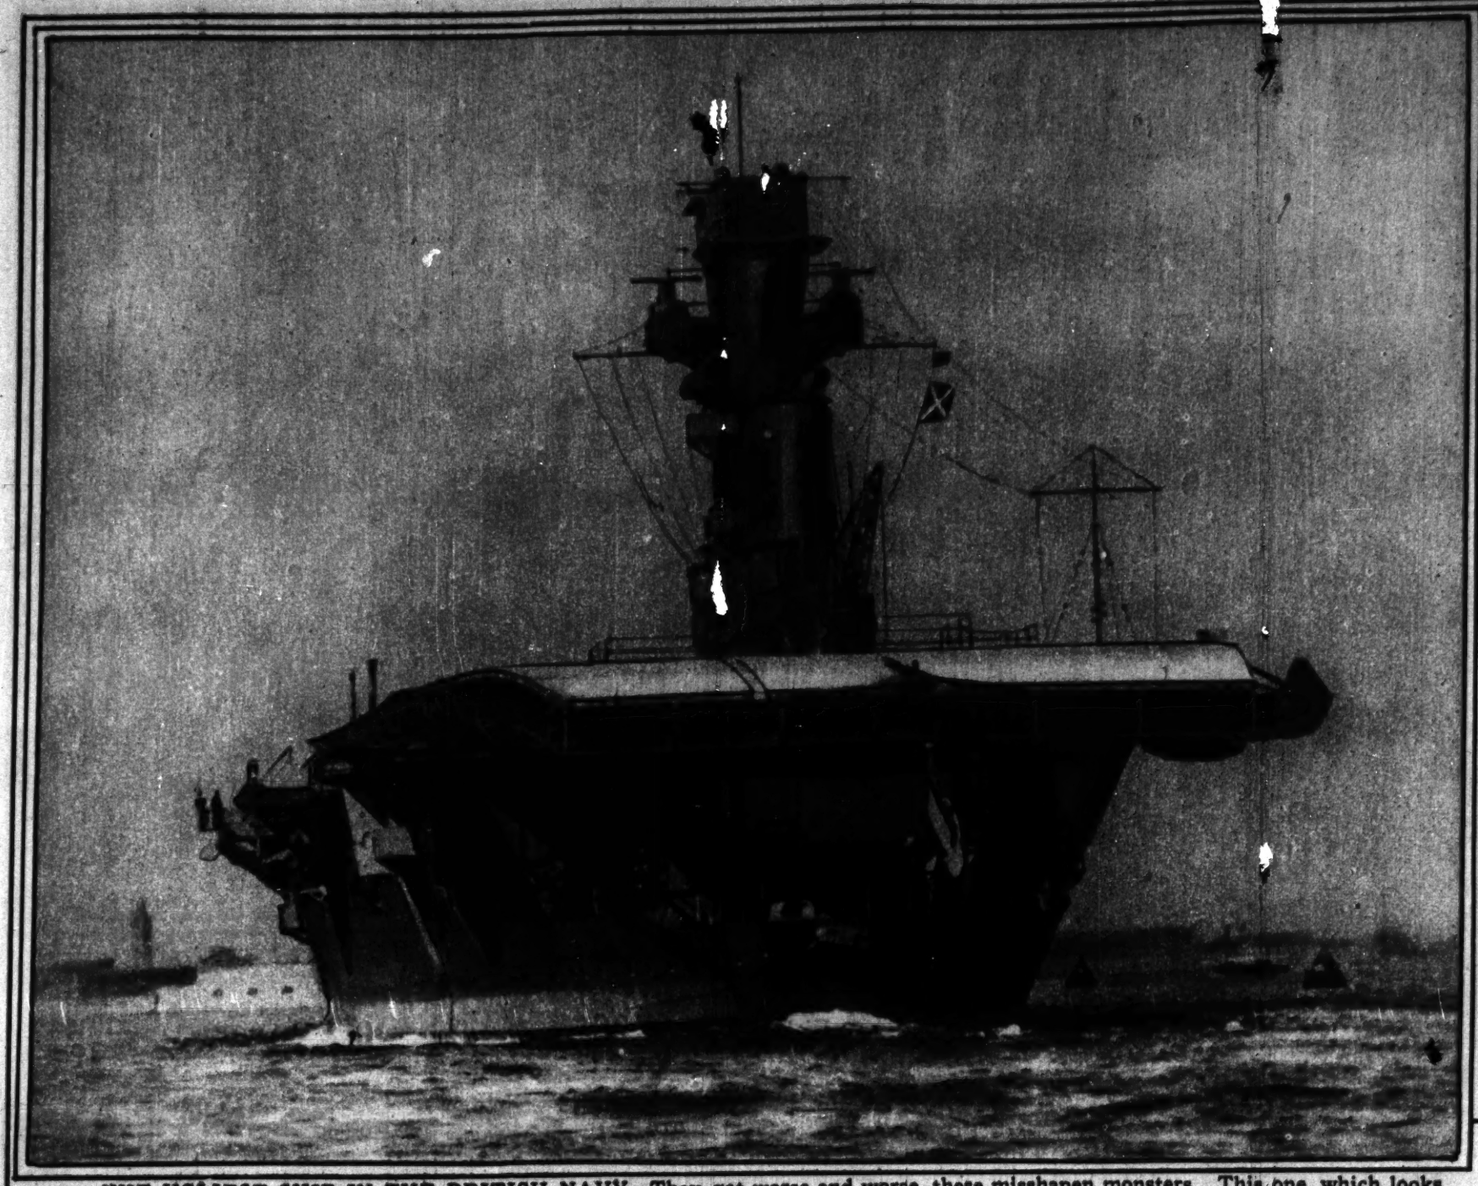
AT DEAUVILLE—Chill winds have interfered somewhat with this summer's festivities at the famous French watering place, but they did not prevent the dancing Dolly sisters from getting, betimes, in front of a camera. Here they are in conventional Deauville garb, amplified with the riotous "jazz wraps" now so much in favor. (Photograph from Kadel & Herbert.)

UNBREAKABLE HEARTS, this lady solemnly vows, can be supplied, if you wish, for the dolls she makes. They are a new kind, fashioned in all shapes and colors of a quite indestructible California clay, and hand painted with unremovable complexions. Mrs. H. T. Epperson is the artist.
(Photograph from Keystone.)

A BIRTHDAY PORTRAIT, THIS, proudly posed, with dog and umbrella and everything, on the day that the young man at the right attained his majority. He is Olaf, crown prince of Norway, born and educated, as it happens, in England. With him in the picture, taken at the royal summer residence at Bygdoe, Norway, are his father and mother, King Haakon and Queen Maude. (Photograph from Kadel & Herbert.)

MAXINE ELLIOTT TODAY—Ungallant perhaps, but interesting, it is to note that the famous actress is now past fifty. She is reported to be planning a queenly wedding gift for her niece and namesake, Maxine Forbes-Robertson, daughter of Gertrude Elliott and Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, who is to marry the Hon. Inigo Brassey in England. (Photograph from Keystone.)

YOU CAN'T DISCOURAGE THE PRINCE OF WALES—He took a long chance during his recent visit to France, and went in for a game of polo on the Bagatelle field outside Paris. And stayed on his horse! He is galloping along serenely at the left in the picture, veering about toward his brother, Prince Henry, who appears at the right. There were girls in the game, too, as you'll note in the background.
(Photograph from Wide World.)



THE UGLIEST SHIP IN THE BRITISH NAVY—They get worse and worse, these misshapen monsters. This one, which looks as though a discouraged omelet had fallen on it, is H. M. S. Hermes, the aircraft carrier. You are looking at the stern, though, as in the case of Hendrik Hudson's Half Moon, which Washington Irving describes as having sailed majestically sideways up the Hudson, it doesn't seem to make any difference.
(Photograph from International)

SHE JUST FITS A SUITCASE—And so Princess Jean, 18 years old, 26 inches high, and 28 pounds in weight, finds it no trouble at all to get about unobserved. Especially when her friend, Mme. Landy Wagner, helps, as in this instance at Luna Park, N. Y. Mme. Landy is 7 feet 6 inches tall, and rather husky.

ADD STILL GREATER CHARM TO THE LOVELIEST FACES

New Joys await you when you fight film on teeth

There is a way to prettier teeth, and millions of people have found it. This is to urge that you try it for the benefit of all in your home.

Combats the film

This method combats the film on teeth—their greatest enemy. No ordinary method does that effectively.

Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, becomes discolored, then forms dingy coats. That is why teeth grow cloudy.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Under old methods, few escaped those troubles. So dental science sought ways to fight film, and eventually found two. One disintegrates the film, one removes it without harmful scouring.

These methods have been proved by many careful tests. A new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent. Today careful people the world over employ it, largely by dental advice.

Amazing benefits

Pepsodent does other things essential. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, also the starch digestant. Those are great tooth-protecting agents.

Send the coupon for a test. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

You will always be glad you know this method

The Gift Shop

By W. E. HILL
Copyright 1924 by Chicago Tribune.

Miss Lilyan Fenerbush is clerking this summer at the Novelty Art Shop, one of those swell seaside emporiums just off the boardwalk. There are all sorts of gifts for the folks back home: Kewpie doll lamps, bathing beauty lamps, mottoes ("No parking around this office"), and a fine assortment of souvenir postcards with tender messages thereon, such as "Kissing is no crime at Long Beach."

"I don't see what Carrie wants with that junk!" The waiting husband knows that before long the little wife will rush out crying: "O, Harry! Can you let me have ten dollars? I've found such a lovely pair of candlesticks!"

The lovely lady who runs the "Peter Pan Shop" deals in very early American stuff. Nothing but maple and apple wood furniture. When a prospective buyer asks for mahogany she waxes very grand and haughty.

Aunt Rose is looking for a little inexpensive gift to take home from "Ye Olde Time Gifte Shoppe" and the little hawthorn ginger jar seems to fill the bill. Aunt Rose, bless her dear, generous heart, is yet to learn that the price is seventeen dollars including a packet of Tansey bloom incense. "I don't think I quite like this pattern," Aunt Rose will say. "I'll come back tomorrow or next day."

Mrs. Watkins is the cheery manageress of the "Polly-Eliza Gift Shop." "The Polly-Eliza" is one of those cute shops where for a mere fraction above the department store price one can procure unheard of bargains in painted door stops, tea cozies, pink or blue coat hangers, pink or blue slippertrees, and the famous "Polly-Eliza Fudge."

This is the beautiful creature in charge of the department store gift shop. The stock includes all those articles which can not be rightly classified under the regular departments. (The smock gives her the air of just having been called away from a masterpiece, doesn't it?) Her job is to stand among the idols and the little shrines and the lacquer telephone stands, in the oriental section.

The gift shop specializing in antiques is haunted on pleasant afternoons by motorists who ask, O, so politely: "How much is this, please, and this, and this?" The proprietress is not unbending one little bit. She knows from long experience that they are "just looking."

"Now, my dear, I simply won't let you buy me a thing! Not a thing! I won't hear of you getting me this piece of Chelsea!" By and by they will compromise on a pair of little grass mats, and that's the

This is Miss Thorpe, the young lady who manages the "Bide-a-Wee" tearoom and gift shop combined. In the dual role of waitress and dealer in pale blue coat hangers and papier mache beads, Miss Thorpe causes no end of consternation at tea hour. The passing motorists don't know whether to insult her with a tip or not and settle things by shoving five cents under the saucer before leaving.

Champion Divers in Diverse Dives

THE PERFECT SWAN DIVE, by which Miss Caroline Smith won first place for the United States in the plain dive at the Olympic games. The graceful "swan" is merely another term for the plain dive. Miss Smith is pictured soaring into space from a forty foot platform.

A TWISTER, this one, a plain front dive with a half twist. This is one of various optional dives which contestants are allowed to select in championship contests. Al White of the U. S. Olympic team is the flying merman pictured here.

A CHAMPION'S "PLAIN FRONT," also called the swan dive by swimming enthusiasts. E. Halvorsen of the Chicago Athletic association pictured in one of the trials which made his Central A. A. U. championship last season.

THE ONE-AND-ONE-HALF SOMERSAULT, one of the difficult stunts which are made voluntary efforts in championship competition. W. P. Heyn of the Chicago Athletic association is shown at a critical point in this hazardous exhibition. Heyn's diving skill has won many points for the Cherry Circle club.

ON GUARD FOR UNCLE SAM IN THE MID-PACIFIC—This orderly establishment, pictured as seen from an airplane, is Schofield barracks, on the island of Oahu, not far from Honolulu—headquarters of the Hawaiian division of the army, and one of the United States' most important western outposts. If the long sheds at the left seem a bit barren and businesslike for a homesick soldier's peace of mind, consider the neat rows of bungalows at the right. And the little park, and the glimpse of some of Oahu's famous new motor roads. (Photograph by Signal Corps, U. S. Army, from Pacific and Atlantic)

THE RICHEST BACHELOR GIRL in England, they say, is the determined-looking Miss Yoskyl Pearson, daughter of the Hon. Harold Pearson and granddaughter of Lord Cowdray, known as the "British oil king." When they call one a bachelor girl in England it seems to mean that hopeful suitors' prospects are not of the best.

OUT OF THE DEAD DAYS when Sir Knight broke a lance for Milady, the pleasant sport of jousting has been quaintly revived in Baltimore. Now, instead of impaling an adversary, they impale a ring, which is considerably more difficult. Here is Benjamin Watkins doing it.
(Photograph from Wide World)

ANOTHER DEMPSEY, and one you don't so often see, is Miss Elsie, sister of the redoubtable Jack, who appears to be about to embark for somewhere with the champion. Matter of fact, she isn't. The picture was taken on a "set" in the movie lot where Jack has been acting for the films.

HERE'S THE "SNOW BABY" whose birth in the frozen north interested the whole world some years back. Now she is Mrs. Edward Stafford of Washington, D. C. Her father was the late Admiral Peary, who discovered the north pole. Vauv

PRONOUNCED VŌVE

Summer– without a shiny nose!

It is possible to look fresh and lovely—in spite of summer heat and dust! But not with the old, futile dabbing and fussing. Particular women have found a better way.

Over nose and chin and forehead, they smooth a cool, delicate cream. In a twinkling that hot shine has disappeared—that unsightly oiliness and moisture, too. Then just the lightest dusting of powder—it will cling, you may be sure.

A new effectiveness

An alluring finish, fresh and dainty, exquisitely soft and smooth! And best of all, it lasts—for hours and hours. A new effectiveness, for Vauv—unlike anything else—actually prevents shine by absorbing excess oil and moisture.

Try Vauv for yourself—just a touch of it in the morning before you go out. You'll like it especially as a summer cream, not only to protect you from sun exposure, but to cover up freckles, tan, sunburn, and all the little roughnesses that prove so aggravating.

When used regularly, it is an increasing benefit, "toning up" the pores and gradually refining them. It does not clog the pores in the least, but helps to cleanse them. In every way, it is absolutely harmless.

Send for a sample tube

You will find Vauv at all drug and department stores, price 50c. Or send us 10c (to cover packing and postage) and we will mail you a sample tube that will last a week.

THE VAUV COMPANY (for Jane Morgan)
208-C Blair Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

"I wouldn't be without it"

"Vauv is very effective in preventing shiny nose. It is easy to apply, makes a fine base for powder, and has no unpleasant effects. I wouldn't be without it.

"My skin has rather large pores and most creams make it sweat. That's why I am especially glad to find Vauv."

Mrs. M. P.
Madison, Wis.

"Only cream that stops shine"

"I bought a tube of Vauv a couple of weeks ago, and I find it is the only cream I have ever used that eliminates shine on the face."

Mrs. E. F. G.
Peoria, Ill.

"A life saver"

"Vauv is a life-saver. It is absorbed in the skin so quickly and makes a very good base for powder. I used it the night of our college prom and it lasted all evening."

Miss V. B. B.
Madison, Wis.

"Perfectly delighted"

"I am perfectly delighted with Vauv. It keeps the face from getting shiny even after a hard day's work in hot weather."

Miss H. N. P.
Sumter, S. C.

"Excellent for large pores"

"Excellent for large pores and blackheads. More effective than similar creams."

She was his wife, and he had sentenced her to death! ~ To be shot down by a firing squad! A Weekly for Everybody

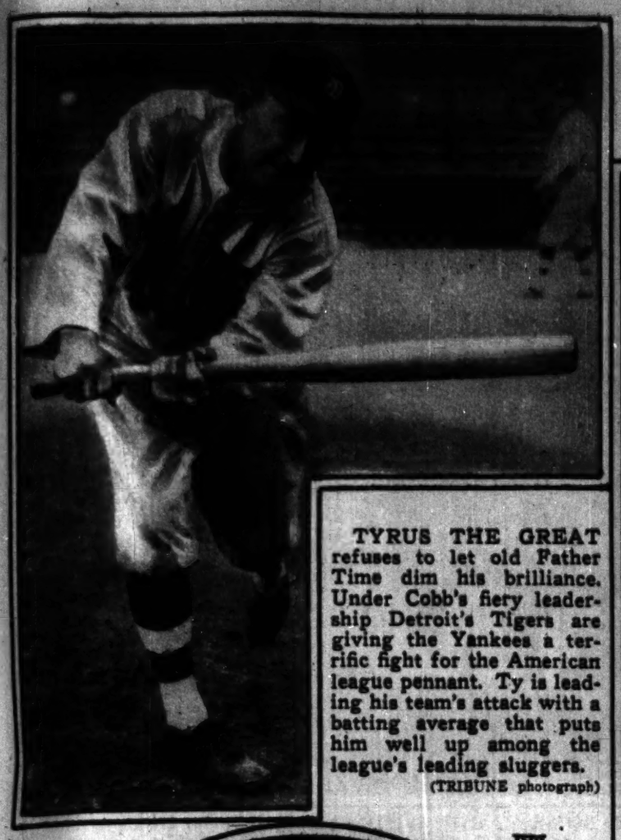
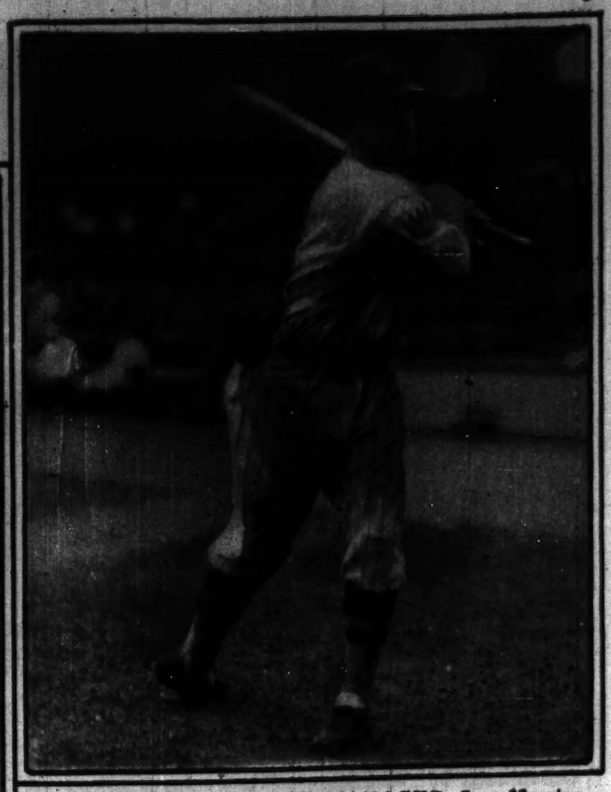
Diamond Stars of 1924



TYRUS THE GREAT refuses to let old Father Time dim his brilliance. Under Cobb's fiery leadership Detroit's Tigers are giving the Yankees a terrific fight for the American league pennant. Ty is leading his team's attack with a batting average that puts him well up among the league's leading sluggers.
(TRIBUNE photograph)

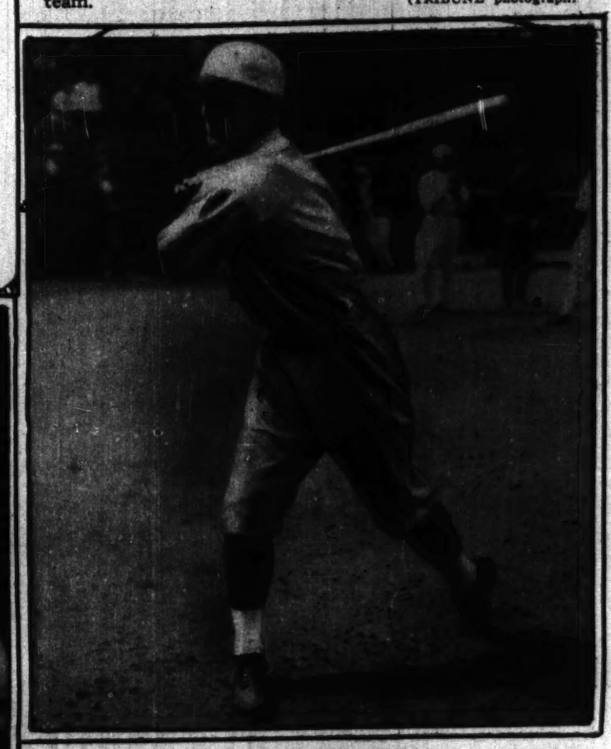
THE KING OF SWAT, Babe Ruth, is in the midst of the greatest season that even he, the superman of baseball, has ever enjoyed. As this is written the home run champion is well over the thirty mark in circuit drives. He's out to beat his own world's record of 1921, when he hit fifty-nine four base smashes. But that's not all—Babe also is leading the American league in batting at this moment, and he hopes to add the league's batting championship to his home run title. As the fans say, the Babe is playing the greatest game of his life. Which is some game, the whole world knows.
(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)

HIGH POCKETS KELLY is one of the most important cogs in the great Giant machine, which seems to be speeding to another National league championship. George is pounding the pill far over the .300 average. He also is among his league's leading home run hitters, and his play at first base leaves nothing to be criticized.
(TRIBUNE photograph)

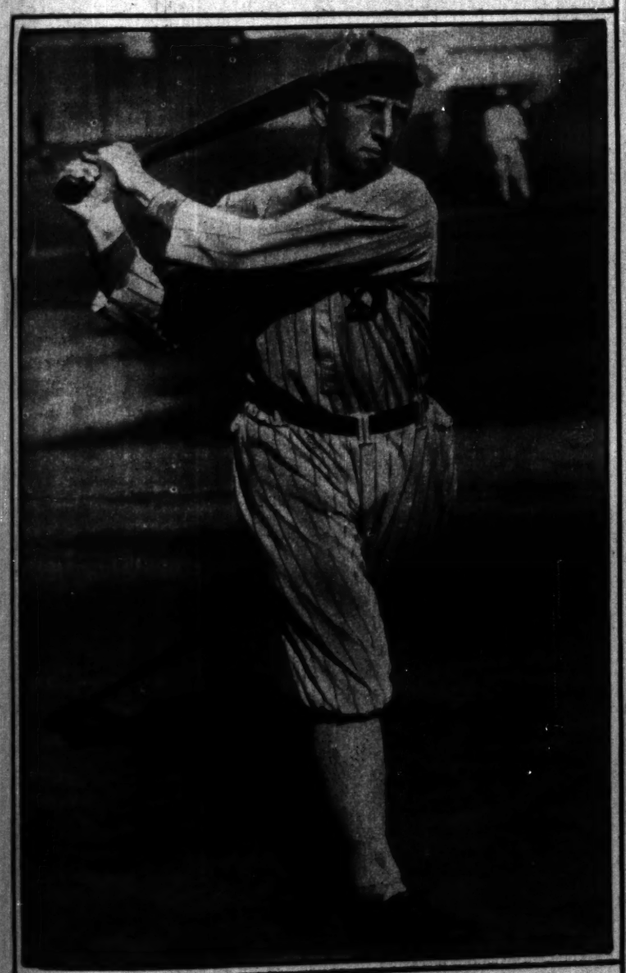


WASHINGTON'S BOY MANAGER, Sam Harris, is the hero of the national capital. A youngster among big league managers, he has the Senators in the thick of the pennant fight with New York's Yankees and Detroit's Tigers. Sam's own great playing at second base has been a potent factor in the amazing showing of his team.
(TRIBUNE photograph)

THE FASTEST MAN IN BASEBALL, Arch Archdeacon of the White Sox. This human flash is fighting Babe Ruth and Bib Falk, another White Sox outfielder, for the batting lead in the American league. Archdeacon's speed is his greatest asset. He makes base hits out of little pokes that hop slowly around the infield, puny efforts that would mean outs for most ball players.
(TRIBUNE photograph)



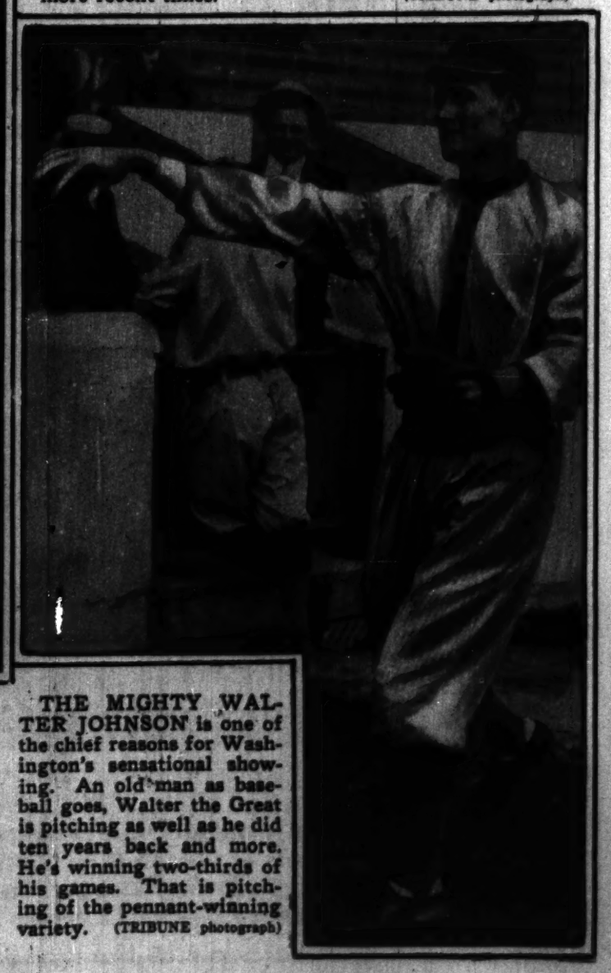
SISLER HAS COME BACK—That's why you see St. Louis well up in the American league race, within striking distance of the lead. The Browns' famous manager was out of it last season, due to eye trouble. Now he's batting close to .300, and fielding as only a Sisler can field. His hair-raising stunts at first base recall the great work of Comiskey in pioneer days, and of Jiggs Donahue and the misguided Hal Chase in more recent times.
(TRIBUNE photograph)



OUR OWN EDDIE COLLINS, captain of the White Sox, is showing up the youngsters of the American league. Captain Eddie is a veteran of many hard campaigns and is growing old, as baseball ages rate. But he's topping his league in base running with more than thirty stolen bases, and he's batting 'way up around the .330 mark. All this despite the fact he was burdened with the cares of management for weeks when illness kept Manager Johnny Evers out of the game.
(TRIBUNE photograph)

THE BEST THIRD BASEMAN of the year is Pie Traynor of Pittsburgh. Pie is doing much to keep the Pirates fighting for second place, and within hailing distance of the runaway Giants. Traynor's parents called him Harold, but baseball knows him much better as Pie.
(TRIBUNE photograph)

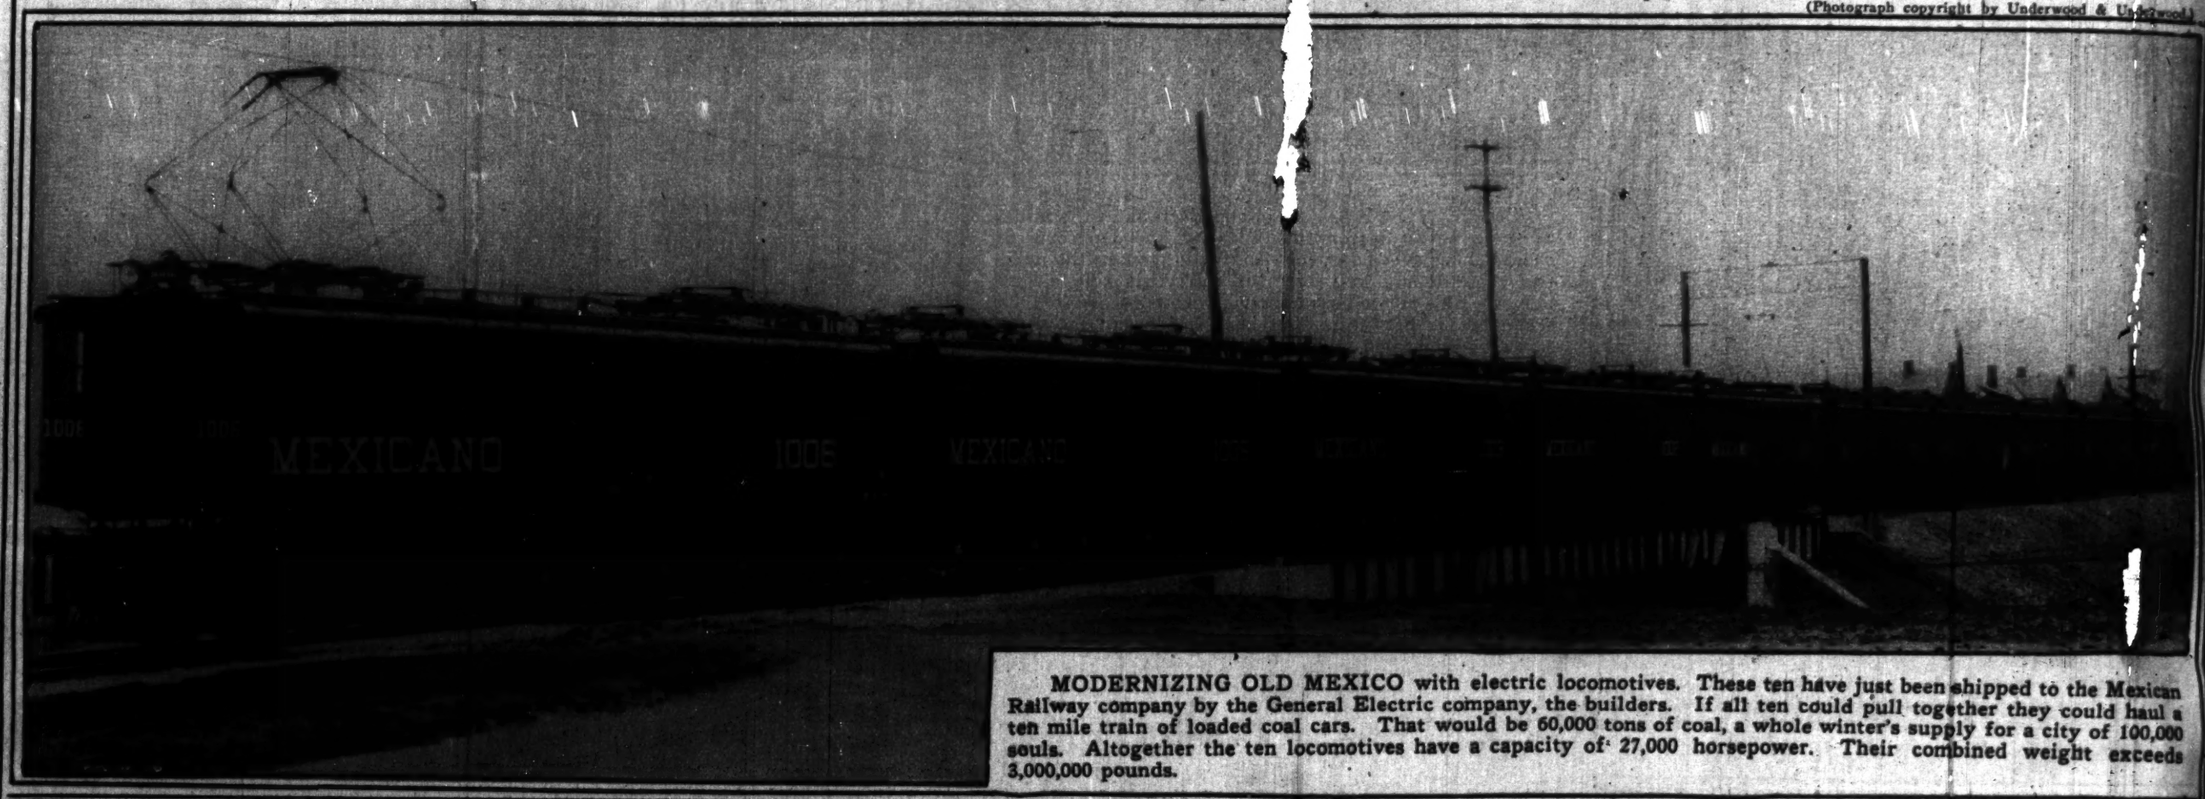
THE CUBS' "BIG BERTHA"—Gabby Hartnett had fifteen home runs to his credit when this was written. He'll undoubtedly have more when you see this. Young Leo has replaced Bobby O'Farrell as first catcher for the Cubs. Experts tell us he'll soon be one of the greatest receivers in baseball. He's a lively lad, is Gabby—always cheering on his pitcher and pepping up the rest of the boys. There's never a quiet moment on the diamond when the fiery Gabby is behind the plate.
(TRIBUNE photograph)



THE MIGHTY WALTER JOHNSON is one of the chief reasons for Washington's sensational showing. An old man as baseball goes, Walter the Great is pitching as well as he did ten years back and more. He's winning two-thirds of his games. That is pitching of the pennant-winning variety.
(TRIBUNE photograph)

TWO HUNDRED FEET UNDER LAKE MICHIGAN they're blasting out a tunnel to link the two-mile crib with other cribs that purify Chicago's water. "Muckers," they call these fellows who clear out the rock after it is blasted from the earth. The picture was taken through a dense fog, a perpetual curtain 'way down under the lake. (TRIBUNE Photograph.)

ALL WOOL AND SOME YARDS WIDE—enough wool to clothe a family, it seems, and this Kent ram's third fleece, too. This fellow took first prize at the Kent County Agricultural show recently at Ashford, England. Prince Henry presented the award to the proud owner of Mr. Ram.
(Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)



MODERNIZING OLD MEXICO with electric locomotives. These ten have just been shipped to the Mexican Railway company by the General Electric company, the builders. If all ten could pull together they could haul a ten mile train of loaded coal cars. That would be 60,000 tons of coal, a whole winter's supply for a city of 100,000 souls. Altogether the ten locomotives have a capacity of 27,000 horsepower. Their combined weight exceeds 3,000,000 pounds.

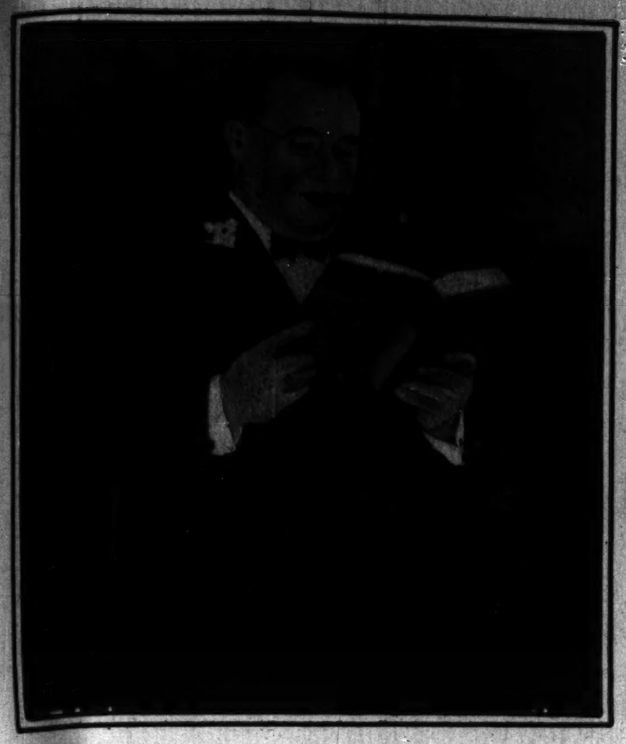
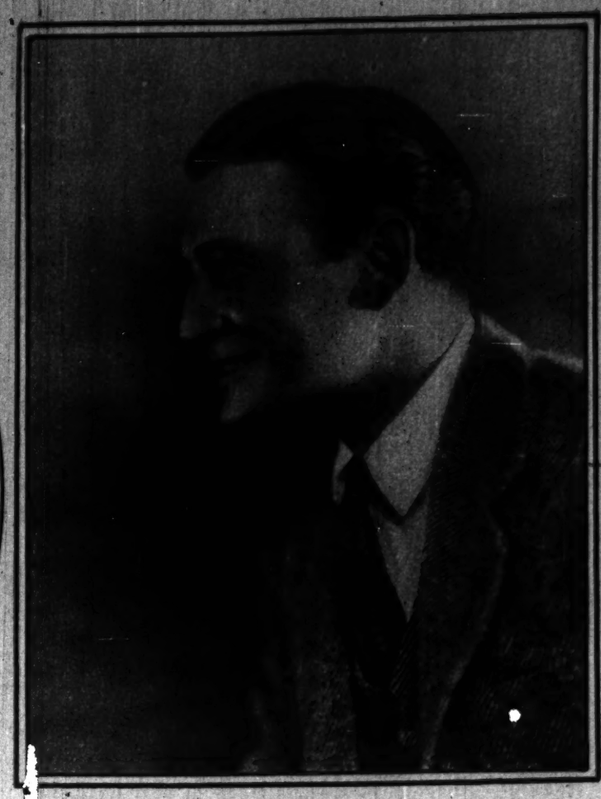
Wording a Want Ad to Make It Pay



WE HAVE WITH US, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, the late Prince of Wales (from "Beau Brummel") and the King of Realtors ("Babbitt")—Mr. Willard Louis. Here's proof that they really do read the originals, and you'll believe it when you watch him flit—flit?—through this story of autumnal wild oats. Yes, it's a lighter-vein version.

NO WONDER "BUDDHA" WEARS THAT LAUGH! For he's in the hands of a very brilliant director—Fred Niblo. And Fred looks rather pleased, doesn't he, now that he's finished "The Red Lily," in which his wife (Enid Bennett) and Ramon Novarro have the leading roles? Daughter Loris doesn't get much kick out of it, though—she'd rather romp with "Buddha" than pose for an old picture!



RICHARD DIX. Here's a smile for your album! If "Sinners in Heaven" are as happy as THAT—why, let's all go there! He's just finished this picture with Bebe Daniels—you remember them, don't you, in "Unguarded Women"?

POLA NEGRI, who's resting a bit before she starts her new picture, "Forbidden Paradise," takes a water-taxi to Catalina. The brown young man at the wheel—who shows poor judgment in looking this way!—is Ricardo Cortez. They're on their way to watch Cecil B. de Mille direct some scenes in "Feet of Clay," the new Paramount which features Rod La Rocque, Vera Reynolds, Ricardo Cortez, and Julia Faye.

A HUNDRED CHILDREN—BUT ONLY ONE JACKIE COOGAN! Can you find him? He got mixed up with the "gang" after a day's play at being "Little Robinson Crusoe"—what boy wouldn't like that! A shipwreck an' raft an' buildin' a hut an' huntin' an' his man Friday an' ever'thing! Don't you like that youngster with his chin propped in sister's hands?

'MEMBER HOW YOU USED TO THRILL over Beverly Bayne and Francis X.? It's the same lovely, wistful Beverly, but Monte Blue now holds her in "The Marriage Vow"—a Warner Brothers production.

FARINA, WHO GIVES COLOR TO "OUR GANG," is right there with the war-paint! The costume may not be "authentic," for Jackie, and Mickey, and Leading Lady Mary all had a hand—but you get the idea. "Come one, come all! This stick shall fly from its firm base—" and Farina won't be far behind!

"LADY WITH A MIRROR"—a couple of 'em, in fact. And a portable make-up table as well. For Louise Fazenda must care how she looks since she's jumped from her comedy "pig-tails" to the serious business of "Being Respectable." Marie Prevost, Irene Rich and Monte Blue also try it.

All over the World they use it -

The PRINCESS YEDIGAROVA tells about its use in Russia

MRS. FRITZ KREISLER finds it invaluable for countless purposes in her Viennese home

RODIER—Master creator of fabrics and designs —writes about it from Paris

The PRINCESS ROSPIGLIOSI uses it for her most precious possession

Read these intensely interesting letters from enthusiastic Lux users of many nationalities

RODIER, greatest living textile designer, says—

"We in France have a veritable passion for the weaver's craft. In our own fabrication de tissus three generations often work together at their hand looms with the zeal of the true artist. So, it is natural, is it not, that when the fabric is finished we should still be interested in its preservation. That is why it seems so good to us that you have made a soap like Lux to preserve the beauty and texture of our white kashas, crepellas and tisseclas."

RODIER

MRS. FRITZ KREISLER finds it invaluable

"You would be surprised at the number of uses that are found for Lux in my household—not only in New York but in Vienna. I find it keeps my collection of old Bohemian glass clean and sparkling. It is used, too, with very satisfactory results for the rare old pieces of Viennese porcelain that form part of my collection."

MRS. FRITZ KREISLER

The SMART RESORTS of Italy and Switzerland

"Thousands of dollars a year we spend for linen for the Bucher-Durrer chain of hotels in Rome, Milan, Lugano, Lucerne, Burgenstock. I love it—my linen. Every day sunny piles come up from the blanchisseuse—here in Lucerne—to be carefully inspected. I write you this because for the last three years we have used Lux for washing our best linens. It is incomparable for the fine laundering I demand."

MME. ROB. BUCHER-DURRER

Where DAKOTA SAND STORMS blow

"In western Dakota, to see our nearest neighbors we have to ride miles along roads inches deep in alkaline dust. But does the dust give me stringy, faded hair? No! Once a week I use Lux as a shampoo and my hair is always soft and fluffy. Lux is undoubtedly the best shampoo I have ever used."

MILDRED MCLAUGHLIN

Why a RUSSIAN PRINCESS values it

"Most of you in America have no conception of the intense, penetrating cold of my Russia. Winters are long—snow everywhere. We must wear woolens else we would suffer. It wasn't always easy to keep these garments soft—comfortable. That is why I feel we owe a debt of gratitude to your Lux. With it, all the woolens so important to our comfort are kept soft and elastic."

PRINCESS MARIA YEDIGAROVA

In Sunny DUTCH KITCHENS

"You know how you rejoice—when you are in a foreign country—to see a familiar face? That is the way I felt when I saw Lux here in Amsterdam. I couldn't resist going in to find out what they use it for in Holland. 'Everything', said the shopkeeper, 'Dutch ladies seem to like it especially for their dishes.'"

MARY CARROLTON

Rugs washed in TUNIS STREETS

". . . . There I was walking along a narrow twisty street. Suddenly I came upon a Turk, kneeling on a magnificent rug, washing it. Can you guess with what—with Lux! I told my interpreter to ask him if he wasn't afraid to wash so priceless a thing. He showed his white teeth in a wide smile and picking up the package of Lux said, 'Not with this.'"

HELEN MARTIN

ITALIAN PRINCESS protects her rare old lace

"One of my choicest possessions is my great-grandmother's wedding veil of old blonde. It requires the most delicate treatment. Of course, there is nothing better than Lux to clean it with. I can say after using Lux that it deserves my warmest approval."

PRINCESS GIAMBATISTTA ROSPIGLIOSI

WHEREVER LUX IS USED the reason for its use is always the same, in every country of the world. It is because Lux is so pure it won't injure anything water alone will not harm—it won't injure fine fabrics—won't roughen or redden the most sensitive hands. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

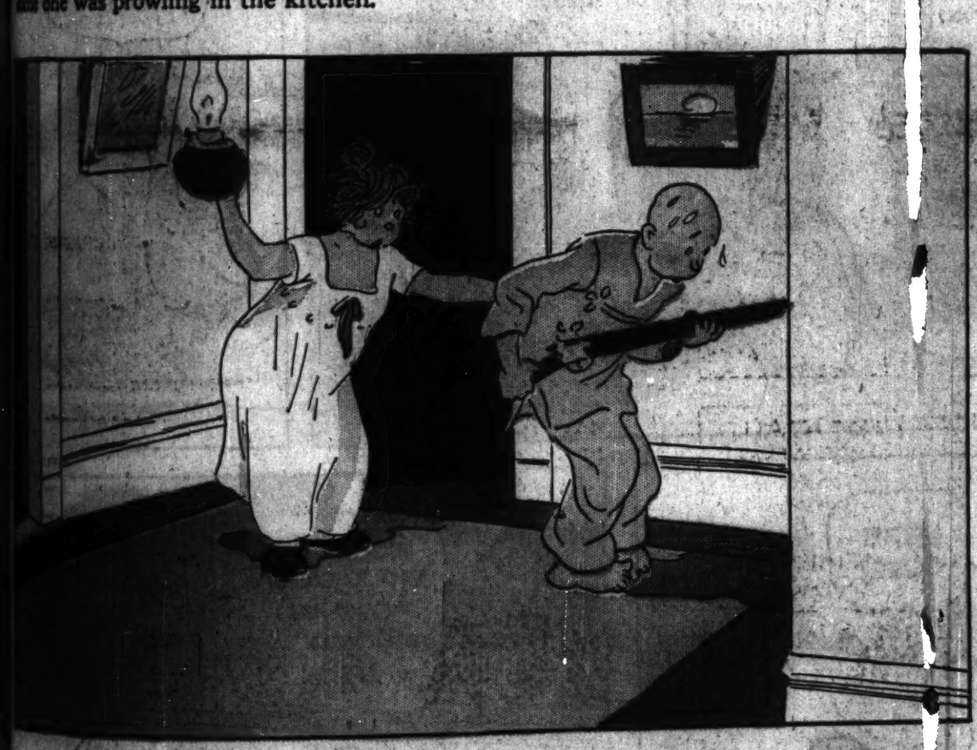
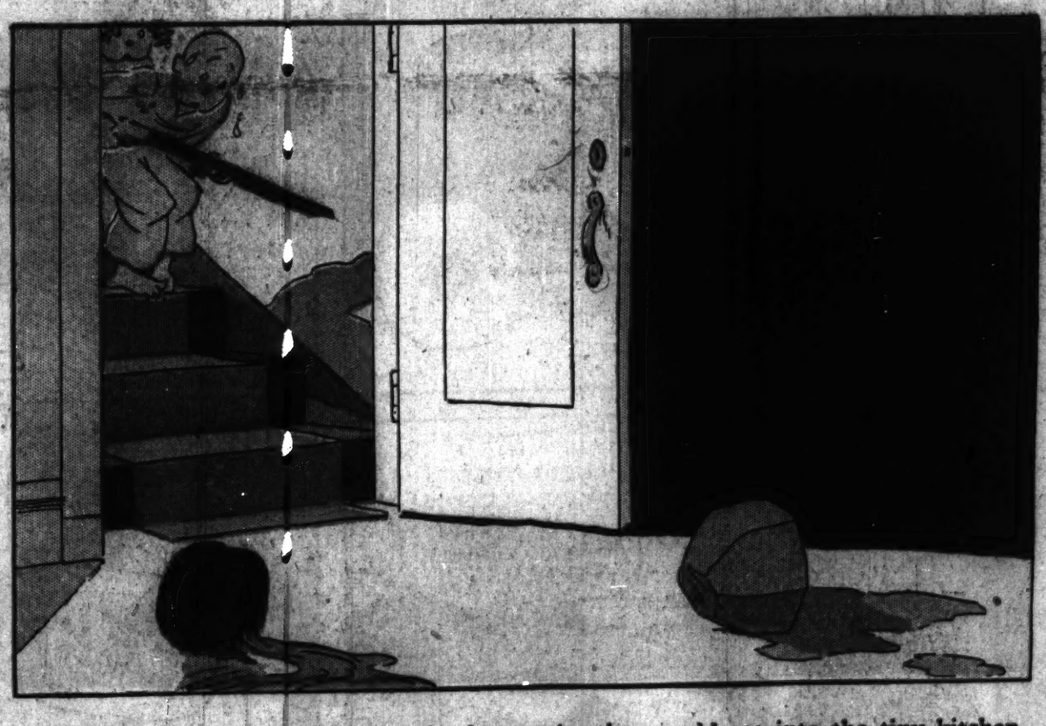
The old shoe in which the Lovers lived was always kept tightly locked at night. Mrs. Lover wasn't exactly what one would call timid, but she was most cautious, and that's next best to being brave. One night the little woman was awakened by a noise—some one was prowling in the kitchen.

She shook her husband, but he slept on. She kicked him and pulled his hair without success; finally she had to jab him with a hatpin to get him awake. "There are robbers in the house," she whispered. "What are they doing?" he asked. "Robbin' the house," she answered. "Get your gun."

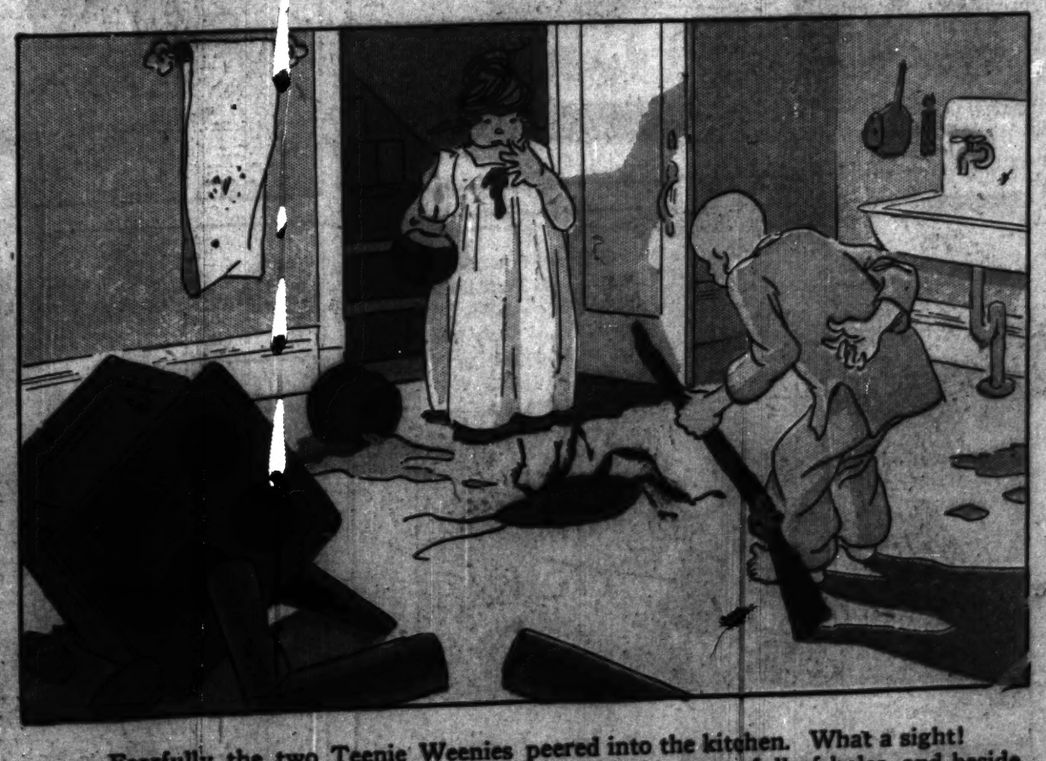


Mrs. Lover lit a cherry seed night lamp while Mr. Lover took down his gun. There was a crash in the kitchen down below—the two Teenie Weenies shivered in their night clothes. "That sounded like my best hickory-nut baking dish," breathed Mrs. Lover. They cautiously started downstairs.



When they had tiptoed partly downstairs they could see into the tiny kitchen and there on the floor lay the hickory-nut baking dish in which Mrs. Lover had baked a mashed bean before going to bed; the bean was spilled over the floor and nearby an acorn full of molasses had been upset.

Very little could be seen, for the cherry seed night lamp gave mighty little light. Suddenly a dark shadow dashed across the room and immediately afterwards the tiny stove was upset with a fearful noise. Mr. Lover raised his gun and shot rapidly in all directions.



Fearfully the two Teenie Weenies peered into the kitchen. What a sight!

Mr. Lover's shots had missed nothing—everything was full of holes, and beside the wrecked stove lay a dead cockroach. At the inyestigation next day Mr. Lover was found justified in protecting his home.
